RULES OF ORDER OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

ORGANIZATION

RULE 1. When a General Conference shall have been convened in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, after the Devotional services, the call of the roll shall be made by the Secretary of the preceding General Conference in the following manner:

(a) The names of the Bishops who have died during the quadrennium, and the name of every Delegate-elect who may have died since election.

(b) The names of the Bishops, followed by the names of the Missionary Bishops.

(c) The roll of Delegates by Conferences. Whenever a Conference is called, the Chairman of the Delegation shall report the name of any Delegate who is absent. If no absentee is announced, the Secretary shall record all the Delegates of that Conference as present. And, if a quorum is present, the Conference shall proceed to organization by the election of a Secretary; by ballot, if there be more than one nomination, otherwise by acclamation; and by the election of such Assistant Secretaries, upon nomination of the Secretary, as it may deem necessary.

TIME OF MEETING, RECESS, AND ADJOURNMENT

RULE 2. After the opening session, the General Conference shall meet at 8:30 A. M., and adjourn at 12:30 P. M. The first half hour of the morning session shall be devoted to religious exercises, conducted by the Presiding Officer or by some other person designated for such service. The General Conference, however, may alter the time of meeting and may adjourn and fix the time to which it shall adjourn. A recess of ten minutes shall be taken at 10:30 o'clock unless otherwise ordered.

THE PRESIDENT

RULE 3. The President shall take the Chair precisely at the hour to which the General Conference stood adjourned, and cause the session to be opened by the reading of the Scriptures, singing, and prayer. On the appearance of a quorum he shall see that the business of the Conference proceeds regularly, according to the Rules of Order and such other regulations as may be adopted by the General Conference.

RULE 4. The President shall decide all questions of order, subject to an appeal to the General Conference. In case of such appeal the question shall be taken without debate, except that the appellant shall state the grounds of his appeal, and the President shall state the grounds of his decision.

RULE 5. The President shall appoint all Committees, unless otherwise ordered by the Conference.

RULE 6. On assigning the floor to a Delegate and before he speaks, the President shall ascertain and distinctly announce his name and the Annual Conference which he represents.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

RULE 7. The regular order of business shall be:

I. DEVOTIONAL SERVICES.

II. APPROVAL OF THE JOURNAL.

On the first day of the session a Committee of Five, nominated by the Bishops, shall be elected. This Committee shall examine carefully the daily Journal of the Secretary, comparing it with the stenographic record, and shall report to the General Conference in either of these forms, strictly followed:

- (1) "We have examined the Journal and it is correct"; or
- (2) "We have examined the Journal and it is correct except in the following particular or particulars."

If the report of the Committee be in form (1) the question shall be submitted, Shall the Journal be approved? If the report of the Committee be in form (2), The question shall be submitted:

- a. Shall the report of the Committee be adopted?
- b. Shall the Journal as corrected in accordance with the report of the Committee be approved?

Any error subsequently discovered shall be reported by the Committee to the General Conference for its action.

III. REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON PRIVILEGES.

On the first day of the session there shall be elected, on nomination of the Bishops, a Committee of Nine on Questions of Privilege. To this Committee any Delegate shall submit what he considers a question of privilege relative to the business of the General Conference. The Committee shall determine whether the matter so submitted is or is not a question of privilege. All matters approved by the Committee as matters of privilege shall be reported to the Presiding Officer and acted upon each day immediately after the approval of the Journal. The appointment of this Committee, however, shall not be construed as abridging in any measure the right of any Delegate to bring forward at any time such matters of urgency as involve the rights or welfare of the individual Delegate or of the House. (See Rule 11.)

The following Calls shall be made in the order herein given, and shall be severally completed before the introduction of other business, except by a suspension of the Rules. They shall be repeated, in the same order, until dispensed with by a formal vote.

IV. CALL OF THE CONFERENCES.

Annual, Central and Central Mission—in alphabetical order for the presentation of written resolutions for immediate passage.

(1) When a resolution has been presented and read under the Call of Conferences, and before the Delegate who introduces the resolution shall speak, the question of consideration shall be raised by the Chair asking: "Is there objection to consideration?" If objection be raised, the question of consideration shall then be put without debate, and if there is a two-thirds vote against consideration the resolution shall not be entertained; but if consideration be not denied, the Delegate introducing the resolution may then speak to it.

(2) If, after the Delegate introducing the resolution has spoken, a motion of reference be immediately made, it shall be decided without debate. This motion to refer may be amended and such amendments shall be decided without debate and in the reverse order of their presentation. If no motion to refer be made or if a motion to refer has been negatived, the proposition shall be regarded as in possession of the House and its discussion shall be subject to the rules governing debate.

(3) A motion to defer consideration and print in The Daily Christian Advocate shall be decided without debate. If sustained by one hundred and fifty Delegates it shall prevail; in which case the resolution shall be given precedence at the next session of the General Conference immediately after recess; provided, however, that a resolution which has been refused consideration shall not be printed in The Daily Christian Advocate or the General Conference Journal.

V. CALENDAR.

Following every completed Call of the Conferences, the reports of the several Standing and Special Committees and Commissions shall be called in the order in which they are filed with the Secretary of the General Conference, except as otherwise determined by the General Conference.

VI. MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS.

Following the completion of the Call under V, there shall be the Call of Miscellaneous Business which shall be conducted under the special rules as provided for the Call of the Conferences in IV.

DUTIES AND PRIVILEGES OF DELEGATES

RULE 8. No Delegate shall absent himself from the sessions of the General Conference without leave, unless he be unable to attend.

RULE 9. When a Delegate is about to speak in debate, or to deliver any matter to the General Conference, he shall rise and respectfully address the President, but shall not proceed until recognized by him. The Delegate must address the Chair from his place, but he shall speak to the General Conference from the speaker's platform.

RULE 10. No Delegate shall be interrupted when speaking, except by the President to call him to order when he departs from the question, or uses personalities or other disrespectful language; but any Delegate may call the attention of the President to the subject when he deems a speaker out of order, and any Delegate may explain when he thinks himself misrepresented.

RULE 11. When a Delegate desires to speak to a question of privilege he shall state briefly the question to the President; but it shall not be in order for him to speak to the House until the President shall have decided that it is a privileged question. Questions of privilege are strictly limited to matters relating to the rights and welfare of the individual Delegate or of the whole body; and must be of such immediate urgency as to justify the interruption of the regular order. (See Rule 7, III.)

RULE 12. No Delegate shall speak more than once on the same question until every Delegate who chooses to speak shall have spoken; nor shall any Delegate speak more than twice on the same question, nor more than ten minutes at one time, except by consent of the General Conference.

MOTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS

RULE 13. Resolutions shall be written and presented in duplicate by the mover. A motion shall be reduced to writing if the President, Secretary, or a Delegate request it. If the General Conference shall order a resolution referred to a Committee, the mover shall furnish to the Secretary a third copy thereof for the use of the Committee.

RULE 14. Reading. All written motions, reports, and communications to the General Conference shall be passed to the Secretary, to be read by him to the General Conference.

RULE 15. When a motion is made and seconded, or a resolution introduced and seconded, or a report presented and read by the Secretary, or stated by the President, it shall be deemed in possession of the Conference.

RULE 16. The following motions shall be taken without debate:

- (1) To adjourn.
- (2) To suspend the rules.
- (3) To lay on the table.

- (4) To take from the table.
- (5) To raise the question of consideration.
- (6) To call for the previous question.
- (7) To reconsider a non-debatable motion.
- (8) To refer, only under Rules 7, IV, (2), and 19.
- (9) To defer and print, only under Rule 7, IV, (3).

RULE 17. No new motion or resolution shall be entertained until the one under consideration has been disposed of, which may be done by adoption or rejection; but one or more of the following motions may be made, and they shall have precedence in the order in which they are given, namely;

- (1) To fix the time to which the General Conference shall adjourn (may be amended, substituted, or laid on the table).
- (2) To adjourn.
- (3) To take a recess.
- (4) To lay on the table.
- (5) To order the previous question (cannot be laid on the table).
- (6) To postpone to a given time.
- (7) To refer.
- (8) To substitute.
- (9) To amend.
- (10) To postpone indefinitely.

NOTE.—The motions “To Lay on the Table” or “To Postpone Indefinitely” shall not apply to certain reports from the Committee on Judiciary. See Rule 44, § 2 (2).

RULE 18. Only one amendment to an amendment shall be in order, but it shall be in order to move a substitute for the main question, and one amendment to the substitute, and if the substitute is accepted, it shall replace the original proposition.

RULE 19. It shall be in order to move the previous question—that is, that the question be taken without further debate—on any measure pending, except in cases in which moral character is involved. If the call for the previous question be sustained by a vote of two-thirds of the Delegates present and voting, the main question shall be put; nevertheless, under this rule, after the previous question has been ordered, it shall be in order to divide, or to move to refer or to recommit or to lay on the table. It shall not be in order for a Delegate to move the previous question or to move to lay on the table or to offer any other motion that closes debate at the end of a speech in which he has discussed the pending question.

RULE 20. When a vote is about to be taken any Delegate shall have the right to call for the division of a question if it be divisible into distinct propositions.

RULE 21. The motion to adjourn shall be taken without debate, and shall always be in order, except

(1) When a Delegate has the floor.

(2) When a question is actually put, or a vote is being taken, or until finally decided.

(3) When a question is pending on sustaining the demand for the previous question.

(4) When the previous question has been called and sustained, and action under it is pending.

(5) When a motion to adjourn has been negatived, and no business or debate has intervened.

(6) When a motion to fix the time to which the General Conference shall adjourn is pending.

RULE 22. Reconsideration. When any motion or resolution shall have been acted upon by the General Conference, it shall be in order for any Delegate who voted with the prevailing side to move a reconsideration; provided, that a motion to reconsider a non-debatable motion shall be decided without debate.

RULE 23. Changes of Discipline. All resolutions proposing changes in the Discipline shall state the wording of the paragraph, the line to be altered, and the wording to be substituted; and no such proposed change shall be considered until it has been in the possession of the General Conference for one day and shall have been printed in The Daily Christian Advocate; but while it is under consideration amendments which are germane shall be in order.

RULE 24. When any Delegate shall move the reference of any portion of the Journal of an Annual, Central, or Central Mission Conference to any Committee he must at the same time furnish a copy of the portion he wishes to have referred, prepared as provided by Rule 36 in the case of memorials.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES AND COMMISSIONS

RULE 25. Reports signed by the Chairman and Secretary, and minority reports signed by at least 10 members of the Committee or Commission, shall be considered to be in the possession of the General Conference when they shall have been printed in The Daily Christian Advocate. In a minority report from the Committee on Judiciary one signature shall be sufficient. Minority reports shall bear the same serial numbers, with proper alphabetical notations, as the Committee reports for which they are offered as substitutes. If there be two or more such reports they shall be considered in their alphabetical order. All such reports shall be presented to the Conference upon paper bearing at the top the number of the report, the name of the Committee, the total membership of the Committee, the number present at the time the report was adopted, the number voting for the report, and the number voting against the report. Reports of General Conference Commissions and Special Committees shall be printed in The Daily Christian Advocate before being presented to the Conference and shall be read to the General Conference only by its order.

RULE 26. When the Chairman of a Committee is not in harmony with a report ordered by the Committee, it shall be his duty to state the fact to the Committee, and the Committee shall elect one of its members to represent it in the presentation and discussion of the report in the General Conference; but, if in such case the Committee fail to select such a representative, the Chairman shall designate a member to represent the action of the Committee, and said representative shall have all the rights and privileges of the Chairman in relation to such report.

RULE 27. The Delegate selected by the signers of a minority report for presenting their report shall have all the privileges in reference to the minority report that are given in Rule 28 to the Chairman presenting a Committee report; except that the Chairman presenting the Committee report shall have the right of closing the debate on the question of substituting the minority report for the Committee report.

RULE 28. In the consideration of reports of Committees and Commissions, the Delegate claiming the floor shall announce from his assigned place upon which side he proposes to speak. If that side of the question has been presented by the speaker immediately preceding, and if the floor be immediately claimed by one upon the other side, the latter claim shall be recognized. In any case if a speaker takes the platform without challenge he shall be entitled to all the rights of debate; provided, however, that no report shall be finally decided or debate upon a question be closed without an opportunity for the presentation of that side of the question which has not been previously presented by at least two speakers.

Provided, however, that a Committee making a report through its Chairman, or one of its members, selected by the Committee or by its Chairman, shall be entitled to ten minutes to close the debate, either to oppose the motion to lay the report on the table, or, this permission not having been used, to close the debate on the motion to adopt. The Committee shall not be deprived of its right to close the debate even after the previous question has been ordered, and, when a report consisting of two or more propositions has a seriatim consideration, the Chairman or representative of the Committee shall be entitled to the same rights and privileges on each proposition, thus decided separately, as he would have had if the report had been considered as a unit. A similar privilege is granted to the Delegate in charge of a minority report. See Rules 26 and 27.

VOTING

RULE 29. Every Delegate who is within the bar at the time a question is put shall vote, unless, for special reasons, excused by the General Conference. A Delegate who is not within the bar at the time a question is put by the President shall not be allowed to vote except by consent of the General Conference, when such Delegate has been necessarily absent.

RULE 30. Voting shall be by the uplifted hand, but, on a division of the House, a count vote shall be taken, the Delegates rising in their places and standing until they shall have been counted. Votes may also be taken by ballot and by AYES and NOES.

RULE 31. Ayes and Noes. It shall be in order for any Delegate to call for the AYES and NOES on any question before the General Conference, and if the call be sustained by one hundred Delegates, the vote thereon shall be so taken. If the call be not sustained, Delegates voting in the minority may have their votes recorded. The AYES and NOES may be taken in the following manner: Each Delegate shall write his name and vote on the official ballot, to be inspected and the totals reported by the several Chairmen of the Conference Delegations, and passed to the Secretary of the General Conference for record. The Secretary of the General Conference shall prepare uniform blanks for the taking of such ballot, and shall publish the detailed vote by Conferences in the General Conference Journal and The Daily Christian Advocate.

RULE 32. Order of voting. In voting when there is a substitute, and amendments have been proposed to the original resolution, the General Conference shall pursue the following order, namely: The main question shall first be perfected by voting on the amendments proposed thereto, and then the General Conference shall vote upon the substitute, to which one amendment may be made, and finally upon the question of adoption.

RULE 33. A call for a vote by orders shall be made and seconded by Delegates of the same order, and shall require the vote of one-third of the Delegates of that order present and voting.

RULE 34. When voting by orders the separation shall be merely in regard to the taking, announcing, deciding, and recording the vote of each order on the question on which the separate vote is demanded. Any incidental question bearing upon such vote shall be decided by the General Conference acting as one body. In taking a vote by orders it shall be by a count vote, first of the order calling for the separate vote and then of the other order.

UNANNOUNCED REFERENCE

RULE 35. Memorials. Three copies of memorials, resolutions, and miscellaneous papers for reference to a Committee, and not for immediate passage, shall be placed in the hands of the Secretary without announcement.

THE EPISCOPAL ADDRESS TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF 1928

THE ADDRESS OF THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENTS TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH
IN SESSION AT KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, 1928

To the members of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church and to the Communion they represent, your brethren in the Episcopal office offer their Christian greeting: "Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ."

Since we separated at Springfield some of our group have passed from us:

Bishop Quayle, apostle of optimism and brotherhood, as never before is in God's glorious out-of-doors.

Bishop Stuntz, with his rare missionary genius, has reached the land where they rest from their labors and yet serve Him.

Bishop Bickley, with his reverence for God and duty, has found the joy of the city that lieth four square.

Bishop Neely, after a long life of abundant labor, has entered the Church Triumphant, leaving to us an example of untiring devotion.

And from our ministry in other offices, and from our laity, have gone stalwart servants of the King, whom, at some appropriate hour of the session, we shall remember, not more lovingly than now but more formally.

Reports

From the written reports already in your hands, you will be advised of the principal happenings in the respective Episcopal Areas. In Copenhagen a situation has arisen which will be later formally presented to you for such consideration and action as you shall adjudge proper.

The Benevolent Boards of the Church, devoted and diligent, will desire severally the privilege and opportunity of presenting the record of the quadrennium in their own way and save as their work is related to questions of general policy, we shall not in any way anticipate their reports.

The orders of the General Conference of 1924 have been carried out in the matter of organizing Conferences and Missions, and in the case of changes authorized, the action thus taken will be formally reported.

Pursuant to your instruction, there has been the usual exchange of courtesies with other denominations by regularly appointed representatives. We have all traveled through the connection except as physical disability or other causes have limited the scope of our endeavor, and in recognition of your expressed judgment as to Conference presidency, even though you left the interpretation of the suggestion to the Board itself, the Bishops resident in the United States have held their own Conferences not more frequently than twice in the four years. As to our future administration in respect of this, you will doubtless advise us.

At the spring meeting of 1926, held in Washington, D. C., by special understanding all the Bishops were present except Bishops Nuelsen, Mitchell and Bast. The whole time of the Conference was given to reports from overseas. The addresses there delivered were published and widely distributed. Within the recollection of the present Bishops, there has been no meeting richer in information and inspiration.

We are regretful that we cannot report the unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as an accomplished fact. As you know, we gave to the plan of unification a large vote, but our sister Church, while giving to it a substantial majority, did not give the required constitutional majority. What was recorded was, however, a noticeable advance toward the goal.

Statistics

The progress of our Church during the four years now closing will be measurably stated in a brief summary. In the item of membership, there were reported for 1923, 4,643,453; for 1927, 4,781,337, a gain of 137,884. For the Sunday School, the figures at the beginning of the quadrennium were 4,857,429, and at its close 4,633,828; in the Annual Conferences and Missions there were 2,038 probationers, 19,233 full members, and there were in 1923, 15,195 local preachers. Now there are 1,672 probationers, 19,567 full members, 15,332 local preachers. For all the Benevolences we contributed in the last year of the preceding quadrennium $22,471,525, and we report as the totals for 1927, $18,965,782.

Introduction

The representatives of the Church here present cannot be satisfied to give to the facts and figures submitted to them hurried attention or easy-going consideration. Mr. Wesley's motto, "The world is my parish," is in no danger of being forgotten; it is illustrated in the personnel of our body. Here all the continents except Australasia are represented, but more than that, almost all classes, groups and races are represented, not only in the General Conference itself, but also in its standing committees. It must be, therefore, that the world will be constantly in our thinking and we shall be visualizing the interest and claim of the whole parish in what we say and do.

In his history of England, Trevelyan quotes the saying, "It was not England that made her parliament, but her parliament that made England." Let us apply that latter word to this Ecclesiastical Council, for it is also and in particular true that this General Conference, in a degree hardly to be estimated, will tend to make the Methodism of tomorrow a feeble or stalwart entity. What model shall we set before ourselves?

It has been frequently noted that the Methodist Episcopal Church and the government of The United States of America have some features in common. Ours is not an association of independent units, but a federation by the provisions of which certain specified rights are reserved by the constituent bodies, but other rights are granted to the governing Conference to which is committed the formulation of provisions and general programs for the entire communion. The General Conference session affords opportunity for practically unrestricted action, except in the case of constitutional questions for which definite procedure is prescribed. With the constitution of the United States and that of the Methodist Episcopal Church, it is conceivable that practical amendment might be attempted by statutory interpretation. Since the days of the fathers, however, propositions affecting our articles of organization and government have demanded for determination the action both of the General Conference and that of the Annual and Lay Electoral Conferences.

The irregularity of any other procedure has been recognized, and so in practice, where there has been a reasonable opinion that the action proposed impinged upon the constitution, the impulse toward hasty action has almost invariably yielded to respect for precedent. Recognizing, as we do, the general tendency to lawlessness and disregard of constitutional authority we shall the more eagerly demonstrate our respect for the authority and decisions of the General Conference.

Nothing of human origin, whether civic or ecclesiastical, is too sacred for scrutiny and criticism, and the warrant for denominational continuance is in the service actually rendered to the present age. There is no inherent glory in either advocacy of or opposition to the status quo. We must accept honestly, and courageously, the obligation of these hours, and the members of the General Conference will find their brothers of the Episcopacy ready to co-operate in every way practicable, either now or hereafter, in relieving administrative difficulty and in increasing the efficiency of our beloved Church.

Church

From the beginning our Church has always been ready to make such modifications in its system as experience and necessity show to be required. The genius of Methodism lies in its power of adaptation and response to changing conditions and demands. Much discussion has taken place in the church and several proposals come before the General Conference touching the Episcopacy. These will receive your serious and careful attention. We have no word to say on the one side or the other of the questions before the body. We do desire to emphasize the importance and the intricacy of the questions under discussion and to declare our entire readiness to give all possible assistance to the constructive study of our administrative system. We share your desire for the highest welfare and spiritual efficiency of the Church today and tomorrow. Together with you we seek the wisdom that cometh down from above, all of us eager to find those plans which will glorify our Christ and build up the Church which is His body.

Sharing the opportunity and responsibility which the General Conference offers and imposes, we enter upon the session with the hope and determination that by its example of unselfish devotion to high purpose, of deliberation, calm and judicial, of mutual respect and courtesy, and by its invariable subordination of personal wish to denominational welfare, this Conference shall set a new standard for connectional council and procedure. There is a quaint record in the old Book of how once between the herdmen of Abram's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle there was strife. Naïvely there is added, "and the Canaanite and Perizzite dwelled then in the land." It would seem that with the personal discomfort of such unfriendly discussion, there were thus given to the too eager and hostile critics new darts of accusation with which to wound the saints. To the mind of the ancient writer, there probably came the thought that knowledge of the environment should have served to cool the fever of impulsive expression. Though the Canaanite and Perizzite of the story have passed on, we remember that their successors still dwell in the land.

I. THE LOCAL CHURCH AND WHAT IT MAY ASK OF GENERAL METHODISM

We turn our thoughts to the local church and ask ourselves what we find there and what has it the right to ask of world-wide Methodism. The local church is taken as the unit in our study of denominational progress, for it is there that we are to test the value of our organization and polity. It is the point of Methodism's contact with humanity. It is our recruiting office for the King's service. It is for us the institute of religious technology, our workshop, our training camp, our spiritual hospital, our home.

The Church Building

The building must be suited to the activities peculiarly demanded by the community, suggestively churchly, let us say—and the type of our buildings has been noticeably improved by what the Home Missions Bureau of Architecture has done—but must never be obtrusively ornate. It should be suited for our work and worship, where the pulpit presumably takes precedence of ritual except in the great sacraments. The satisfaction of the æsthetic sense is too costly if, following a common custom of post-war finance, the erection of the building involves burdensome and long-continued indebtedness, or makes self-support indefinitely the goal of financial endeavor, or if material elegance takes from the house that warmth of atmosphere which is indissolubly associated with the idea of home. Yet the Church proper, and where possible the parish house, should fairly and fully express our sense of reverence, our love of beauty, our ideals of service and our financial ability. It would greatly conduce to the comfort of the congregation and officary if the Disciplinary restrictions as to mortgage were invariably observed, and it would further prove to the good of the charge if the requirements as to mortgage and sale were made applicable to lease. In case of proposed mortgage, where the amount required is equal to say one fifth of the value of the realty, the approval should be required of the District Committee of Church Location, of which the name and function might be appropriately changed.

The local church ought to be to its neighborhood as a little bit of heaven, and the more unlike heaven the neighborhood is, the greater the need for the church. This consideration should not be dismissed when the downtown congregation, allured by suburban attractions, is proposing to leave the crowded neighborhood in the congested centers of commercialism or neglect. Its open door should be the sign of its hospitality toward all sorts and conditions of men. If it can be made now, as in the past, a center of social life, the ideals of fellowship will be lifted to a new level and the essential democracy of Methodism be impressively illustrated. The church building, if in use but for a few hours each week, is yielding a return altogether inadequate. If at all possible, its doors should be open daily, thus affording a place for prayer or rest or for other worthy end. We are ready to believe and avow that even the humblest of our churches is the house of God and the gate of heaven. With this thought in mind, it must, however, appear incongruous to find the doors closed as is so often the case. It would be well if in practice there might be borrowed from Saint John that word concerning the heavenly city, "The gates of it shall not be shut at all by day."

The reason for the open door is not far to seek. There are multitudes who have passed the days of strenuous toil and have abundant time for contemplation; there are discouraged folk to whom the open door might offer comfort. Also there are many strong and hopeful who, in the urge and drive of busy days, would be even stronger and more courageous if there were given them, in the quiet of God's House, a chance to tarry beside the wells of refreshing. If the Church shall bring together in the sympathies of a living comradeship those who have known the chill of social antipathy or occupational antagonism, its influence will be mightily felt and its pre-eminence among the redemptive agencies be everywhere conceded.

One of the tests of religious discrimination and leadership will appear in the settlement of what is and what is not to be permitted under the auspices of the church, and particularly what may or may not properly be done in the church itself or in the parish house in the way of entertainment or amusement. The popularity of any church is tawdry and short-lived if it is gained by the lowering of standards to the common levels of the world. It is a perversion of our so-called liberty and a betrayal of our sacred trust if we suffer the church in any case to become in its social life only a decent twentieth-century club.

The Local Church and Its Members

The local church is the visible home of the member as the Record shows or ought to show, and the idea of home cannot be too strongly emphasized nor can its practical realization be too substantially enriched. The officary and congregation of every charge in Methodism would do well to consider in the most exhaustive way these questions: "How can we make our church more homelike and attractive? How better may our hands and lips say 'welcome' to those who enter? How can we give to comradeship a new glow of hospitality so that the bonds of association shall be riveted with love?"

We, however, have provided a method of transfer from the active to the non-resident, inactive list, which, in view of membership rights and the solemn duty of membership care, has been employed too often and without the preliminary exercise of that solicitude which the Discipline anticipates.

Ian Maclaren has painted for us in "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush" the picture of Lachlan Campbell striking out of the family Bible the name of his daughter, Flora. Pharisee that he was, the lines that obliterated the name were blotted and blurred with tears. But on the 430,000 names which, according to our statisticians, we have placed on the non-effective list, the mark of the tears is not always to be found. In the great cities one hears again and again the call for missing men and women. Alas, that so often, without search, without emotion, those whom we have welcomed with gladness slip away from us, denominational nomads, or wanderers into the far country, and the tragedy of it seems not to impress us. We must bring our practice closer to our theory in respect of this imperiled class. We earnestly call to the attention of our pastors and people the fruitful evangelistic field offered by this nearly half million members now on the inactive list.

Likewise, for those, of whose change of residence we are notified, we must devise a more effective follow-up system. The selfish desire of the home church to hold a name many times leads to the permanent loss of those whom we ought not to lose. One of the incumbent duties of this Conference is the repairing of our walls, so that exit shall be by the way specifically provided and vigilantly guarded, that we shall put an end to losses involved in the too easy transfer from the active to the non-active list of membership, and also of dismissal by letter without due notification of the pastor into whose parish our members move.

Young People—The Church School

The local church is the home of our children, and in it they have, by virtue of birth, an indefeasible right which cannot be disallowed by us or forfeited by them. Here every spiritual art is to be cultivated and employed for the nurture of the child entrusted to its guardianship. If there is anything at fault, either in the personnel or method of the church school or in the character of the literature furnished it, if there is any easy going and inefficient custom encouraged or permitted in the brief hours of instruction, the local church, in a sense never to be dimmed, must recognize its sacred responsibility.

None of us can be quite satisfied that the instruction ordinarily given is sufficient. We need to lay greater stress than we are accustomed to do upon some adaptation of the catechetical method and the memorizing of Scripture. The time actually given to the lesson in many schools is so inadequate that, wherever possible, we should provide for week-day religious instruction, not to make of our children and adults bigots or sectarians, but that there be laid the foundation for intelligent religious belief.

It is evident that a more thorough method as to organization and personnel is pursued than ever before. The junior church should be studied, but we are persuaded that the outlook is brightest when the presence of the children in the public service is encouraged and where the paths followed lead most surely to personal religious experience and membership in the recognized Church.

The development of adult classes in the church school is one of the noticeable facts of the past years. Occasionally this has resulted in a lessened interest in and attendance upon the regular preaching services, and in a few cases has led to a general appraisal of church activities and agencies altogether unbalanced. Where these disadvantages have been avoided, the results have been gratifying. The reported decrease in the membership and attendance of the church school brings to us one of the most serious of our problems. It is possible that the mechanics of organization have been unduly developed or that the processes have not been fully and thoughtfully spiritualized. The whole question of instruction must be under scrutiny. What can be done should be done to make tender and strong the maternal interests of the Church and to sanctify the cultural methods which are the legitimate expression of that interest.

Young People—The Epworth League

The Epworth League is one of the great educational forces in the local church. It is apparent that the enthusiasm which marked the early days of the organization has not everywhere been maintained. All the forces which have seemed to operate elsewhere to the lowering of standards in the conduct of youth have been felt by the League. It has also happened that the management of the League has been too often not by the young people themselves, but by those of maturer years, so that its character as a young people's society has been lost. In some instances this has come about by the repeated re-election of those who have perhaps grown old in service but who have been unwilling to surrender office, and who have been retained not because of their fitness for continuance, but because of their well-understood dread of retirement. The control should be in the hands of those for whom in particular it was organized, though the evident sympathy of the older church members ought never to be lacking. The influence of the League has been greatly strengthened by the Institutes conducted under its care and direction.

Sometimes we are harshly censorious in our criticism of our young people, contrasting the manners of youth today with the manners of youth in some golden yesterday. The contrast often considers youth alone and leaves out of view the adult actors. If we painted in all the characters that rightfully belong in the picture, we should see that however glaring the faults of youth today, however irritating its disposition toward undue self-expression, in which perhaps it is but following the example set by previous generations, it is more sinned against than sinning. There are influences at work affecting all the standards of conduct. The natural impulsiveness of youth and the absence of those restraints which usually come with age often lead to a sort of conspicuous recklessness out of proportion to real moral intent. If we were of keener discernment, we should doubtless interpret the phenomenon of youth's behavior as an appeal for bread when for lack of that discernment we are giving a stone.

At no previous day has there been so great need for wise, courageous and spiritual leadership as at this present, for at no previous day have our young people been so persistently and subtly assailed. They are resentful of sham, they are keenly critical of every attempt to guide them. In every provision for them, in every approach to them, love must crowd out effusive sentimentality; pretense must yield to truth; genuine devotion must avoid the semblance of patronage. To neglect these principles in our action is only to widen and intensify what has been called the revolt of youth and hasten the spread of irreligion. It cannot be too emphatically declared that youth needs the Church even as the Church needs youth.

Young People—Finance, Office

If in any distribution of financial responsibility for denominational projects the membership of the local church is made a factor in the basis of computation, we are convinced that for this factor only adult membership should be included. There must be no allocation of financial responsibility, direct or implied, tending to discourage the bringing of our children into the formal membership of the Church.

We earnestly recommend that, where personal qualification gives promise of usefulness, a fair proportion of the offices of the Church be committed to the younger people so that in the interest of the Kingdom there shall be secured for the work the advantage of their aggressive strength and buoyant optimism, elements which the great business corporations of the world are more and more appreciating and utilizing.

The Pastor

In the Church, the pulpit and preacher are central to its life. The tasks of the pastorate were never so many and so intricate as at present, but the key of the situation is not in the cutting down of spiritual activity. The relief of the over-burdened pastor will be largely by the more thorough organization of the Church membership for service, a task delicate and difficult, but imperative.

What can world-wide Methodism do for the local church in respect of this? It must utilize every means, exhaust every effort in giving to the local church a competent pastor, and we must see to it that the importance of the ministerial office is recognized. One of the colossal obligations of the world, sometimes overlooked, is to the servants of God and the Church, who have magnified the offices of preacher and pastor in changing the manners and lifting the ideals of their day. Under their prayer and toil, arid and forbidding deserts have become as blossoming gardens. Prophets, apostles, preachers of righteousness are as jeweled links in the chain of the world's golden personalities. The world will always have place for great preachers and great pastors, like Baxter of Kidderminster, or Rutherford, or Whyte, or Phillips Brooks, or like Durbin or Simpson, or like Quayle, who shall make the pulpit a throne of power and who, in pastoral ministry, shall brighten the day and cheer the way for those to whom they come. As in our homes we talk over the matter of life work with our children, let us not forget this place of alluring possibility.

Educational Institutions

Our Wesley Foundations, already established at many of the State supported colleges and universities, might profitably be located also at State normal schools, thus affording the opportunity of bringing Christian ideals before their students at a time when the question of vocation is receiving earnest consideration. This is a sufficient reason for the establishment of this denominational institution wherever practicable, though the duty of watching over our own in these schools, altogether apart from the vocational appeal, would justify the maintenance of this denominational ministry.

But in particular we must generously provide for our own schools, colleges and universities, while insisting upon their loyalty to those educational and religious ideals without which they can neither meet denominational requirement nor reasonably expect denominational support. It is to them that we must look chiefly for our technically qualified leadership. The catalogues of our theological seminaries show conclusively that we must largely depend upon our colleges for a proper ministerial supply, while experience proves that many of our finest and most influential laymen come from our collegiate campuses. So far from being merely a burdensome charge upon our people's benefaction, our colleges are really the indispensable training places for our future leaders.

Our theological schools are necessary and are to be considered as in no sense area institutions with patronage and support limited to contiguous Conferences. They are not only important but, humanly speaking, they are indispensable. We cannot do without them. This Conference will not meet its responsibility if it gives to these agencies only the encouragement of its words. It should send out a compelling appeal for their support, perfecting also some plan which shall give to them immediate, systematic and dependable financial aid. They deserve a place in the regular budget of the local church.

The schools of method, promoted chiefly by our Boards of Home Missions and Education, which have become a feature of our connectional activity in recent years, cannot be too strongly commended, though they are not to be regarded as in any sense a substitute for the broader and deeper training of our theological institutes or seminaries. The work of your Commission on the Courses of Study for similar reasons merits your hearty commendation. To the valuable help afforded our undergraduate preachers, it has added post-graduate courses dealing effectively with all the details of ordinary pastoral and parochial service, embracing what must be the major interests of the preacher's thought and heart life. The summer schools conducted by the Commission are commanding increasingly the support and appreciation of our men and Conferences. Planned originally for intellectual stimulation and help, by the testimony of those in attendance and the Conference Boards of Examiners, they have in many instances proved to be of intense spiritual power.

Helps to Ministerial Effectiveness

Whatever can be done for the intellectual furnishing of the minister and for his spiritual cultivation must be done. The appeal of the ministry to our college-trained men and their post-collegiate qualification for the great work cannot be based on the measure of remuneration promised or expected, but upon the call of the day for the best that can be given, an appeal to heroic souls such as have never yet gone unheeded. And yet for the securing of unembarrassed service, the local church must see the need of an adequate allowance. The young men entering the work should be given assurance of care when the days of activity are at end, yet all must know, pastor and people alike, that there can be given no equivalent for what the pastor brings. We shall do wisely in taking into account the whole range of the preacher's life, from the beginning of his student days to those other days, when wearied with the burden of the years, he can only stand and watch and pray as his comrades swing past him on their songful way. If we are to have the best, we must be able to make the beginning easier, and the calm of the closing hours more secure. The effort of our Board of Pensions and Relief to work out an effective plan for accomplishing this result in the later years is worthy of highest commendation. The plan, as finally developed, should provide a pension also for those Supply Preachers who shall have given to the Church not less than ten years of consecutive and full-time service. There can properly be no scaling down of ministerial endeavor to fit a meager stipend; there must be no meagerness of stipend where there is the ability generously to meet the needed demands for comfortable support.

Pastoral Assignment

The success of the minister, even with the training of mind and heart, will depend largely upon his comfortable adjustment in the parish, and there are many sides to this problem of appointment. There are the younger men of exceptional ability and there are the older men of experience. It has happened that the method of adjustment has, in its occasional working, tended to discourage and alienate men whom we should have been glad to hold.

The matter of Conference morale cannot be ignored, and the loss of ministerial effectiveness is inevitable if there is ground for believing that in fixing the appointments favoritism has prevailed over merit or that adjustment has simply followed the line of least resistance. Some of the recent critics of the present administrative methods have evidently not thought through the subject. Under our historic and existing policy, we must be prepared to accept the occasional infelicities which are unavoidable, each of us resisting the impulse, confessedly natural, to demand the sort of preferential consideration which, in the nature of the case, cannot always be given. Before radical changes are made in our polity, it is incumbent upon us to scrutinize with greatest care the alternatives proposed. It is clearly impossible in any single system to have all the advantages of the congregational and connectional forms of government and none of the limitations of either.

Relief of Supervisional Complexity

At present, with a number of churches and ministers, supervisional authority is exercised by several administrative agencies as, for example, in the case of churches under the City Societies. There ought to be a careful revision of method so that administration shall be simplified and confusion avoided. If practicable, there should be one point of actual and authoritative contact so that the possible differences of administrative intent may be composed before the program is given to the local church.

In the light of our last four years of experience, you will undoubtedly review also the provisions for the work now included in the Bi-lingual Mission. It is of so great importance as to justify your most painstaking and discriminating study. We are persuaded that if the Mission is continued, it should be associated with other Foreign Speaking Missions and to the Area thus created some one of the Bishops should be assigned, but relieved of other regular administrative responsibility.

Having brought many of your strongest sons to the responsible place of spiritual leadership in the ministry or pastorate, you must see to it that in the polity or connectional program of the Church there be no imposition of needless burden, and nothing must be allowed to embarrass reasonable pastoral initiative and direction. At present all the members of the Quarterly Conference are members of the Official Board. We believe that, in the interest of unity and effectiveness, only such members of the Quarterly Conference as have been elected or approved by that body for membership in it, together with the regularly appointed pastor or pastors of the charge, should have membership in the Official Board.

If our financial methods constitute a real embarrassment to the pastor, then they must be carefully examined, for Methodism exists not for the Board but for the local church, and the chief man among us is not a general officer of whatever name or function. The chief man is the pastor!

The Preacher

The pastor is the immediate interpreter of our message. It is necessary that he shall be loyal to the basic principles of our faith. Unbelief in its grossest forms does not only assert itself, shifting its ground from time to time, but is adopted as a vogue by some of the writers of the day more clamorous than convincing in their utterances. There are groups organized for the open spread of atheism in schools and colleges and elsewhere, who by implication, if not by expressed affirmation, give the weight of their influence to the utterly destructive teaching of groups sadly adrift from governmental and ecclesiastical anchorage. No subject is so sacred as to escape the cheap wit of shallow skepticism, or the poisoned barbs of malignant destructionists who, mistaking the seats of the scornful for the seats of the mighty, are as venomous in their attack upon public morality as upon religion.

At a time when so many forces are, with hostile intent, moving in upon the faith, the pastor, who is the expounder of our creed, is to present the vital beliefs in the language of the day. The message, if it is to have a hearing, must bear the marks of reflection and conviction since few congregations will patiently endure memorized platitudes, however sonorously uttered, or welcome trivialities only less endurable if clad in garish rhetoric. If the preacher assumes to answer every adversary of Christianity, he will make the place a battlefield instead of a sheepfold. If he majors in polemical theology, it is not unlikely that by his very pronouncements he will introduce to his hearers heresies of which they might otherwise never have heard. It is doubtless on occasion a much more congenial task to answer the fallacies of those who are not present than to satisfy the spiritual hunger of those who are present. This man of the pulpit is to make clear and convincing the great appeal of the gospel, affirming without apology belief in the supernatural. With his beliefs vitalized by personal Christian experience, he will strive to bring men to grips with God, setting in compelling impressiveness sin and salvation. He will turn the faces and the faith of men toward Jesus Christ, God's only begotten Son, whose name is above every name, the virgin-born, the manger-cradled, the Crucified, the risen, the ascended Lord and Saviour of men, able to save unto the uttermost all who come unto God by Him, the same yesterday, today and forever, whose spiritual conquest of the world is the consummation of universal history and whose glorious presence in the world to come makes it that they need for the illumination of that city neither star nor sun. The mystery of the Trinity we may not be able to explain, but the limitations of reason must not prevent acceptance of and insistence upon the personality and power of the Holy Spirit, essential tenets of apostolic teaching.

You have the right to insist and expect that the preacher will be intellectually and spiritually loyal to his task, but you must not attempt to fetter him either with the bonds of an arrogant mechanistic philosophy or with those of a despotic traditionalism. He must fix the reverent thought of men upon the face of Him who is the One among ten thousand, but he should not be compelled to hold or declare persuasion of redemptive value in particular creative processes so long as he makes real his vision of God upon the field. A persistent disregard of changed conditions in the thought of the world, which not only resists but also resents every appeal for theological readjustment, is discreditable not only to reason but to faith. To insist upon a presentation of the great issues to the young and old in the precise terms and phrases of even a generation ago is equivalent to saying that prophecy must be static rather than dynamic. John Robinson of Leyden declared, "The Lord hath more truth and light to break forth out of His Holy Word." It was Jesus Himself who promised, "When He the Spirit of truth is come, He shall guide you into all the truth."

We steadfastly maintain our unshaken loyalty to the great basic doctrines, but we would not be silent as to the widely discussed conflict of science and religion. There may be battle between the exponents and interpreters, but our God is God of the hills and valleys alike. We will not compromise conviction, but in our proclamation we will resist all inclination to lord it over God's heritage. We believe that every real advance of knowledge will be to the greater glory of God. It is not essential that the preacher shall be able argumentatively to confound all antagonists and refute the assertions of all who dissent. It is essential that he shall help men so to trust that they shall come into possession of that which the world cannot give. If we are afraid to go into the laboratory with the scientist or into the geological field with true and reverent investigators, then we are doubting God. This preacher may go with the scholar wherever reverent and honest scholarship can go. His very loyalty to God will free him from the fear of finding anywhere the footprints of another creator or of discovering another cross in which to glory. If this man is able to confess, "I know whom I have believed," he will be prepared the more boldly to affirm his determination not "to know anything among men save Jesus Christ and Him crucified." His very faith at once unfetters him and holds him. He is free indeed. To attempt the standardizing of human intellects with a meticulous insistence upon invariable identity of phrase, is an undertaking presumptuous for any of us. It is inescapable that there shall be landmarks indicating the boundaries of denominational belief, but within these landmarks of our denominational heritage we will stand for the liberty of the sons of God, and if in anything it appears that the hedges have been broken through or the fair limits transgressed, the Church has prescribed the procedure in the case and all the proprieties demand recourse to the method so provided. Controversial intolerance or intolerant controversialism will inevitably prove divisive rather than constructive and, next to absolute indifference, the atmosphere of polemical assertiveness, which breeds suspicion and aspersion, is of all conditions the most unfavorable to spiritual growth. We cannot recognize any authority, however assumed, for ecclesiastical judgment and censure except as provided in our law, nor can we recognize the right of any other than those having official authority to demand an answer in case of alleged or suspected heretical teaching. Where the right of demand is otherwise assumed, the failure to make answer cannot with propriety be regarded or treated as an offense calling for censure, but must be construed and accepted as a justifiable denial of the right of jurisdiction. In the Church, as in the State, the formulated law is at once the guarantee of immunity from unwarranted aspersion and extrajudicial penalties, as it is also the surest deterrent of offense.

Christian Psychology

Evangelical Christianity must avail itself of whatever helpful influence inheres in sane psychology, not leaving so potent an agent to religious charlatans and empirics. But wherever taught, whether in the pulpit or college class room, the manner of its treatment must be consistent with all the essentials of a distinctly Christian faith. It must be acknowledged that our comparative failure to give to this science its proper place has opened the way for heretical beliefs in which the normal has been sacrificed for the abnormal. Too often this source of possible strength has for commercial ends been made to yield only a polluted stream of sensuous suggestion. Operating under another name, it has clothed the imaginary in the borrowed garments of reality while ascribing to the phenomena of consciousness the quality of unreality. It has deified the human but denied to the divine even the fact of personality and has substituted for the balanced gospel of our Lord a system in which the chief attraction would seem to be that nebulous expanse of suggestion which allows to individual fancy unrestricted range.

Personal Pastoral Counsel

We must agree that in every church some provision should be made for the quiet and undisturbed approach of anxious souls to one who, as a well-instructed believer and disciple, is qualified by patience and sympathy to encourage the trusting and also to lift up the fallen and bring back into the way those who have wandered from the path; who shall so meet all who come that they may go away cheered in the consciousness of Christ's nearness, strengthened by the comfortable communion of the Holy Spirit. The idea is as old as Methodism itself, for it was the outstanding feature of the class meeting of former days. Into the crowded hours of these modern days it may be that the old institution cannot be brought back, but the need of such pastoral contact and counsel is as great as ever it was, and it must be met in one or another way. Whatever value may attach to other phases of social religious life, we cannot too insistently urge upon the local church the duty of holding to its services of prayer and testimony. There is a cultural value and a spiritual dynamic attaching to such services which do not belong to a mid-week lecture, if the feature of congregational participation be omitted.

The Sacraments

An emphasis not generally voiced must be given to the observance of the sacraments of Baptism and the Lord's Supper. It is needful that they have their rightful place in the service of the Church, with such adequacy of explanation, with such reverence in administration as shall not only serve to enrich the formal worship but really make of them means of grace. It is incumbent upon us, not in the spirit of controversy but of illumination, to declare that in every aspiration and approach of honest faith, but in the sacraments especially, we do believe in the real though not the corporeal presence of that Master whose solemn words we honor as we thus remember Him, a presence not dependent upon the mind and will of any celebrant, but conditioned upon the appropriating faith of the individual worshiper.

Order of Service

Recognizing the differences of setting and taste represented in the local church, certain latitude must be allowed in the character and conduct of service. In some places the order followed will be that of utmost simplicity; in other churches a more formal service will be appropriate. A degree of liberty with respect to the form of service will be recognized as inherent in the genius of Methodism, but it must also be recognized that total disregard of ritual and order tends to irreverence. We must guard against that perversion of liberty which makes of God's house a common meeting place and takes from formal service the suggestion of sacredness and the spirit of reverence. Upon the other hand we must guard against that soulless formality which exalts ritual at the expense of life. We would urge that in every church, for the morning service at least, in addition to the singing from our hymnal; prayer; the Scripture lesson by the pastor and the sermon, there be the confession of our common faith in the use of the Apostles' Creed; the responsive Scripture reading from our Psalter, which, however, should be revised, and to which should be added selections from the Old and New Testaments, thus providing alternative readings; and in every morning service certainly the Doxology and the Gloria should be sung.

Evangelism

The Church will have its place in many lands and the sermon will be in many languages, but everywhere the aim will be that of evangelical adaptation and promotion. For the realizing of that aim it will be well to employ every method available. The plan of visitation evangelism or of mass evangelism, where conditions are favorable, will be adopted but ever with the rejection of those glaringly spectacular features which are much more effective in advertisement of the evangelist than in the exaltation of Christ. We must avail ourselves of all our contacts in the promotion of the work, making definite use of all the Church festivals, magnifying the suggestive value of Decision Day, joining the multitudes of our fellow Christians in the intensive observance of the Lenten season leading to Passion Week and the great festival of the Resurrection, insisting also upon the reverent observance of the Pentecostal season which, in historical significance and spiritual suggestion, must have place with our Lord's advent and passion. The General Conference would give the most emphatic encouragement possible to such a celebration of Pentecost, if upon the closing Sunday of the session—assuming that we shall continue through the month—we should ourselves make the personality and office of the Holy Spirit the subject of our thought, and the object of our prayer, urging that our churches throughout the world so far as possible join with us in this celebration. We recommend that this be formally approved.

We are reminded, also, that the nineteen hundredth anniversary of the historic festival of Pentecost will be observed in the year 1930. We are convinced that an adequate preparation for the observance of this historic event on the part of world-wide Methodism will tend to summon our membership to share in the unused resources of Pentecost. We, therefore, recommend that the Bishops, together with the departments of evangelism of the constituted agencies of the Church, be instructed to suggest to an expectant Methodism such a spiritual procedure as will culminate in Pentecost, 1930.

The place of importance given by the Bishops to evangelism has been made clear by their formal statement urging the whole-hearted co-operation of ministers and laymen in this, the chief business of the Church. That appeal, with its promise of support by every member of the Board, must not be regarded as an idle word. It has been followed up by great group meetings of remarkable interest and power. Our hearts were in the message as they are now in its reaffirmation. May our Church never outgrow the passion of Wesley and Asbury, nor be led by our philosophy or program to accept any merely intellectual readjustment as a substitute for conversion. Today, as yesterday, the aim of Methodism is and must be that of our Master, that the world shall be saved. We cannot really as a Church outlive that passion, for if it should cease, Methodism would be dead.

In this memorial year we might well revive our recollection of John Bunyan and his immortal classic. If we sit at the feet of this saint and sage we shall learn that every chord of emotion must be touched, every force of will called into play, every power of judgment, faith and love be evoked. The Pilgrim of the twentieth century who reaches the Celestial City must master the same difficulties and subdue the same enemies as did the Pilgrim of the seventeenth century. Likewise he has need of the same encouragement, the same vision, the same mighty Deliverer. There can be no spiritual appeal comparable with that which is based upon personal Christian experience, and the publicity that shall mean most to Church and world will be that of the transformed life, the radiant face.

The Laity

We have spoken of pastoral leadership and conditions that make for its success. It is obvious that whatever affects the morale of the ministry is a factor in this equation. But if the pastor be the director of the local church, the laity constitutes its body and strength. The laymen are the counselors and co-workers in all the activities of the Church. Their breadth of vision, their response to great impulses, their support of programs proposed to them or wrought out by them will measure the success of that local church in the spiritualities as well as the temporalities. We might apply to these two elements, the ministerial and lay, the words, "useless each without the other." We are speaking only of the human agencies to be sure. In this address we would formally recognize the magnificent work of our lay members, who in innumerable fields, without even the reward of a bit of ribbon or the honor of a citation, have carried on to the praise of God and the extension of the Kingdom.

The Laity and the Annual Conference

We believe the relation of our laity to the Annual Conference bears strongly upon the question of what the local church may ask of the General Conference. As to the Quarterly Conference, immediately authoritative in so large degree in the control of the local church, the rights of the laity have never been questioned. In respect to the General Conference, the governing Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the way of discussion was often storm swept, but the principle was formally approved in 1872; in 1896 numerical equality was reached, and in 1908 women were given membership in the Conference, so that in the eyes of our law, so far as this Conference is concerned, there is no longer male or female. But as to the place of the laity in the Annual Conference, the decision has not been reached. The Annual Conference is not primarily a legislative body in any proper and technical sense, but it is a body for consultation and action upon many important subjects affecting the welfare of the local church, and it is the only body which deals with some of those important matters in which the laity, as well as the ministry, must be vitally concerned. With some the admission of laymen to the Annual Conference has been deemed illegal. Of course, Disciplinary procedure can relieve that illegality. But it has been objected that even though it be lawful, it is not expedient. So long as "lawful" means only permissible, expediency may well determine action, but when to permissibility is added the element of justice, then expediency must yield to right.

A century ago by the calendar the agitation of this question was largely influential in the separation of those who formed the Methodist Protestant Church. It is the judgment of your brethren that, in the matter of the laymen in the Annual Conference, the present might well be the appropriate time to face and master whatever difficulties appear. Of necessity there will be certain rights reserved, as, for instance, action in judicial procedure, but with the reservations which will suggest themselves, the participation of our laymen would in our opinion be of value. In some of the matters brought to the Annual Conference there might be given the right of voice without vote, and in other matters the full right of voice and vote. It would undoubtedly strengthen the sympathy of the laity for the ministry if the opportunity of expressing judgment were allowed the laity in the reception and ordination of preachers, for this vitally affects the life of the local church, and the support of the laity must be a large factor in the problem of maintenance. Indeed, in all the questions considered by the Annual Conference, the advantage of lay participation must be conceded. The justification of such extension of lay function will, however, be conditioned upon the character of the men selected for such service and largely upon their continuance in it, so that there shall be such acquaintance with the task and such familiarity with method as shall secure effectiveness. The temperamental qualifications for team work, we may safely assume, will not be overlooked.

Stewardship

All of our Church activities, with moral or spiritual objective, accentuate the importance of Stewardship, not as an academic theory, but as a vital factor in the whole round of duty and privilege. The fixing of a standard in the dedication of substance is not the chief thesis of Stewardship, though for definiteness the tithe is accepted by increasing multitudes as a reasonable minimum of obligation. This, however, is but the material symbol of that devotion which utterly and gladly yields to God self and all it holds. As the waters of the sea at the incoming of the tide find and fill the broad stretches of gulf and bay, and also the waiting vacancies half hidden by sedge and reed, so comes in God's claim, from the imperious command of which no power of brain or heart, no bit of strength or wealth can find itself exempt. To that claim the only worthy response is the utter devotement of substance, of service, of life itself. It is evident that some form of organized Stewardship is essential if really worth-while results are to be secured. We, therefore, express the hope that the General Conference may discover a plan for the crystallization of the conviction of our people on this vital question.

Changes in the World Parish

The world parish has undergone radical changes during the last quadrennium. In South America and Mexico, notably in the latter country, such changes have taken place. In Mexico the government has adopted measures to prevent the interference of the Church in matters political. Our own constituency has accepted the situation in good faith, and on the whole the result has been to the strengthening of our work. In India the nationalistic movement has gone forward with occasional change of direction and method, but in China the most radical and revolutionary movements have taken place, industrial, social and religious, developing conditions of increasing and bewildering confusion. It is in these countries, especially, as it was in this country at the beginning of our revolution, the ideals of the Oriental peoples have new proportions. Progress must in all these lands be ultimately by indigenous agencies, and its direction will be by native leaders. In view of this, our legislation should contemplate this finality and make easier the way to its realization.

Episcopal Administration in Central Conference Territories

One item in the progressive adaptation of our methods to a work now carried on in many countries involves a new consideration of our system of episcopal administration. The advance of our Church overseas in numbers, in educational training, in experience of Church life, and in power of spiritual leadership, has resulted in a strength and a growing self-realization which have been the goal of our efforts and in which we heartily rejoice. But these very conditions call for some modification in our present plan of supervision. In some major sections of our work outside of the United States of America no change is desired in the existing order of administration by General Superintendents elected and assigned to their fields by the General Conference. But in other Central Conference territories there is a clear and reasonable demand that the task of episcopal administration shall be shared by nationals or others already resident on those fields, and that the national church, through its Central Conference, shall participate more weightily in the choice of its own leaders. So far from breaking connection with the Church at large, such a plan, we believe, will strengthen the ties of affection and loyalty which unite the sections of our Church in distant lands. While differing in detail, the memorials which come from several Central Conferences are alike in asking for continued inclusion in the organic life of the Methodist Episcopal Church, coupled with larger local autonomy. In particular, they request that the power may be granted them, by such constitutional process as shall be found necessary and appropriate, to choose for themselves such national or regional Bishops as they may need in addition to the General Superintendents assigned to them by the General Conference. These new national aspirations command our warmest sympathy. We believe the time has come for action, and we recommend to the General Conference the careful and cordial consideration of the wisest way by which these aspirations may be met and satisfied.

World Policy

Whatever action may be taken by the General Conference on the matter of episcopal supervision overseas will touch, however, only one aspect of a complex problem. What shall be the whole policy of our Church in lands outside of the United States,—as to the form of its organization, the powers committed to it, its organic relation to the rest of the Church, and its relation to other evangelical bodies and to movements for the formation of union national Churches? Upon the answer to these and similar queries much will depend. It is undoubtedly wiser to steer than to drift, but we cannot steer with confidence until the course has been charted. It may well be, as we face some changes and many problems brought before us by rapidly shifting circumstances, that the time has come for such a comprehensive and thorough study of this whole matter as might be made by a special Commission so chosen as to be representative of all the major fields in which we are at work. In this connection we call attention to the memorial on this subject from the Eastern Asia Central Conference, and invite the thoughtful attention of the General Conference to this far-reaching question.

II. WHAT THE LOCAL CHURCH OWES TO GENERAL METHODISM

But what does the local church owe to world-wide Methodism? For this local church, in whatever land it has its place, must never think of itself as a church apart. It must be constantly emphasized that the world is our parish, and the local church should not regard community boundaries as limiting the range of its interest and sympathy. If in any given place there are more churches than can be properly maintained, it is far better to leave the spiritual care of the neighborhood to some one of the other churches having the world-vision than to merge the various groups into an organization lacking the stimulation of the world outlook and contact. Such outlook and contact are essential to normal church life, and no financial saving can compensate for their absence. The Church which is to save itself must take its rightful part in saving the world. The local church must not become the creature of an aggressive individualism or of a narrow parochialism. It owes to the general Church respect for its authority and support of its policies and programs. It should strengthen our appreciation of our own agencies to note that some of our Boards—in particular those of Missions, of Education, of Hospitals, Homes and Deaconesses, of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals—have had for their management in the last years the practical endorsement of most munificent gifts, not only from our own constituency, but from Christian men and women outside our communion.

Solidarity and Co-operation

It is possible, of course, unduly to magnify the importance of solidarity, and it may be necessary sometimes to discourage the idolatry which sacrifices to the net and burns incense to the drag, but there is a reasonable attitude of mind which, having deliberately cast in its lot with the denomination, steadfastly resists the impulse to belittle the connectional appeal or embarrass its presentation.

The local church which honors itself will also honor this general Church whose name it bears. The election of the officers of the general Church and the formulation of the Discipline which they are directed to administer are determined by the representatives of the local church. The right of insistence that these officers shall be obedient to the orders of the Church has its correlative in the insistence that brotherly support be given to those chosen by their comrades for such administrative office who, after all, are men of like passions with their electors, and who are doubtless ready to confess that whatever treasure they may have, they hold in earthen vessels. In such case the obligation of consideration and helpfulness is inescapable, and in things ecclesiastical, as in things physical, the law of action and reaction inevitably holds.

The local church must share in the denominational philanthropies in a way that shall fairly express ability, intellectual, spiritual, financial, contributing for the care of childhood and the aged. As Christ long time ago took up the little child into His arms of love, so He means that His Church shall care for those deprived of parental care. As He from the cross, called to His best loved disciple, "Behold thy mother," so He calls His Church now to emulate the apostolic tenderness in its care of the aged. As He turned aside to answer the call of the blind, the ill, the distraught, so it befits His followers worthily to meet their responsibility in ministry to the weak and suffering.

The Local Church and Missions

During the quadrennium our people have laid upon the altar of God unprecedented offerings, but the balance as to objective has not been preserved. It is in the distinctive work of foreign missions that our lack is most painfully noticeable. For the previous quadrennium, for example, the receipts of the Board of Foreign Missions amounted to $22,353,504; for the quadrennium just closed the sum was $14,292,496, or a deficit of thirty-six per cent. The amount given includes the preferential for the Board's debt.

We have grown accustomed to the mechanics of benevolence and sometimes in the intricacies of method the straight road from giver to the recipient intended has appeared to be in effect blocked, so that a gift generously devised has not really helped the special cause for which it was offered, not because of any intentional diversion, but simply because of the tortuous lines of involved transmission. We need to bring in by some sort of spiritual endeavor an application of television so that a face shall be seen rather than the intermediary organization, and we must have, not the mechanics of a system, but the emotion of a heart. The work and success of our women's great missionary societies must not be lost upon us. Their method is illustrative of personality, and if we may so say, of objective visibility. More than once the mind of the Church has been confused and liberality discouraged because of conflicting statements of need and general policy upon the part of those charged with the conduct of our benevolences. It is apparent that such contrariety of utterance must be avoided in the interest of the causes represented, and also with distinct intent to eliminate every needless embarrassment in the work of the local church.

Somehow the face of the man of Macedonia has lost the sharpness of outline, and the neglected man, once brought clearly to notice, has again disappeared. For him the forgetfulness that follows acquaintance is more perilous than the ignorance which preceded his introduction. In some of the fields the privations of our heroic missionaries and the loss of confidence upon the part of the nationals are such as it is impossible to portray. Whatever be the lines of administration as you shall determine them, the conservation of past successes and the improvement of present opportunity demand a consecration of substance far, far beyond that of the last quadrennium. One of the greatest of America's statesmen began his march toward service of the world when he took upon his heart the burden of the forgotten man. We must find, if we can, how it has come to pass that so many have forgotten, or have seemed to forget the faces that Bashford saw and loved, the faces that William Taylor and William Butler looked upon until the lines of those faces were graven on mind and heart. As a Conference we must pray God that no temple calling us to worship, no structure waiting for erection, no enterprise, however Christlike in its appeal, shall cause us to pass by on the other side, when China lies wounded in the road of the ages, or when Europe or India, or Japan, or Korea, or South America, or Africa, or Mexico or the Philippine Islands cries to us for help. God has entrusted the collective churches with vast wealth. It is for you to probe and plan, to pray, to co-ordinate, so to quicken and inspire that in the whole world there shall be no forgotten race, no forgotten group, no forgotten soul, whether in this or another land, whether speaking ours or another tongue.

In response to a demand for consolidation and a unified management, our law has provided for a central organization which makes its appeal in behalf of World Service. Without question, this general plan has made for indefiniteness so that, even though a strong Commission has sought faithfully to carry forward the work, there has been lacking the more specific challenge necessary for the awakening of interest and the stimulating of giving. Utter freedom of solicitation would doubtless flood our Church with wearying appeals, while utter indefiniteness would make for decreasing response. It is, therefore, the conviction of the Bishops that the most careful thought should be given to the devising of a plan that will allow the largest possible freedom of designating gifts, whether by individuals or churches, consistent with the protection of our benevolent system as a whole. We believe, as well, that the benevolent organizations should be so changed as to make separate Boards more responsible for the educating of our people with reference to their particular work, and for inspiring the people to larger generosity.

We must make it convincingly clear to the people among whom we labor that the Methodist Episcopal Church is in no sense an agent of any government. Where we labor we are present not as propagandists of civilization of any type but as the friends of men and the proclaimers of the good news of God. Certainly no man should be there whose mind holds to Kipling's idea of "the lesser breeds without the law." We are to distinguish sharply between the promulgation of a gospel which is not ours but Christ's, and the propaganda of a civilization which is not Christ's but ours. The attitude assumed and held by the Methodist Episcopal Church in every land must be non-political but can never be non-ethical. If in any land, the publication of the gospel with its inescapable ethical teaching involves us in irreconcilable differences with the ruling powers, the only course open to us would be that of retiring from the field, transferring what we have to national groups with such subsidies as may be required.

It has been said, "When once a nation begins to think, it is impossible to stop it." The nations of the South, but especially those of the East, have begun to think new thoughts and we must, in our ministry to them, understand and respect their ideals. If ever there has been mingled with the redemptive passion for China and India, the desire for ecclesiastical glory or zeal for Western civilization, however ideally presented, the day for it has gone. We shall be solicitous, not concerning the externalities of church life, nor can we dictate in any imperialistic way the terms of confession or the forms of worship. If only we can help men in spiritual need to see Christ, if only we can help to make plain to them who He is and how He loves, we can well afford to agree that the further understanding and practice may be in the fashion of the East rather than of the West.

III. WHAT WORLD-WIDE METHODISM ASKS OF THE WORLD

What world-wide Methodism would ask of the world is only this: credit for honest intention, accuracy in reporting us, and the opportunity to serve. It has sometimes been charged that we are a political Church. It would doubtless be well if, when those of our membership, lay or ministerial, discuss questions of public policy, they would make it plain that they speak for themselves and not as representatives of the Church unless especially commissioned to do so. But the characterization of any Church as political is not to be justified on the ground that it is interested in the civic affairs of state, nation or world, or on the ground that being thus interested, it makes known the positions to which it is committed. The term in any unfavorable sense is applicable only when it can be shown that effort, whether by open pronouncement or secret intrigue or endeavor, contemplates some special advantage in the way of strength or prestige or immunity of the Church concerned. We are clearly within our rights in appealing for that fairness of treatment which every group, religious, political, social, industrial, financial, may reasonably expect, a claim which is generally recognized and respected by the journalism of the day.

IV. WHAT WORLD-WIDE METHODISM OWES TO THE WORLD

But what world-wide Methodism owes to the world cannot be stated so briefly. It owes not only the obligation of humane and generous intent but the effectual demonstration of this intent. Jesus Christ was not only Master, Saviour, Lord, but in the broadest and most vital sense He was Brother, and by His brotherhood all depths were fathomed, all heights scaled, all reaches encompassed. There can be nothing human which can be of indifference to the Master or to His Church. Methodism owes to the world intelligent interest in all the problems humanity is seeking to solve.

The World's Childhood and Youth

Methodism must be concerned with childhood everywhere, not only our own children but the childhood of the world, concerned that every unit in the great multitude shall have a child's fair chance. It would mean, if accurately analyzed, that the child should, in so far as may be, have a fair and kindly world in which to live, that he shall escape the wiles of cupidity and exploitation, be delivered from the factual slavery of mills and fields, whether in the old lands or the new. In those early years, when brain and muscle must have their chance for development, all the voices of the physical world, through which God speaks to men, declare that the playground with its pleasurable varieties of exercise must have right of way over the treadmill grind of compulsory toil. A child has the inherent right to know something of the world in which he lives. He will early enough see the seamy side of things and have that view of life which inevitably leads either to the hazard of the willful or the bondage of the fearful. Well for him if he can feel God's winds blowing across the years, can catch the sunshine of God's favor, and be helped in weaving into the web of life some of the warmer, brighter colors. You may not understand the language of the child's lips, but you do know the language of his heart, for human hearts have a common speech, a common cry.

And this child, if he survives the chill and hunger of unfriendly years, if he escapes the thrill of circumstances which shuts out the vision and holds him in from liberty and down to the dust, if he gets by the perils of the earliest days, too often enters that cheerless world of religious illiterates, of which group there are in America alone, according to one authority, 13,000,000 and, according to another, 27,000,000. We must follow them. They are without God so far as faith and obedience go, without religion, Jewish or Christian, Roman Catholic or Protestant. If that be true of the United States of America, what is the spiritual destitution of the world's childhood? The attitude of world-wide Methodism is that which recognizes the immense advance of any soul which has been lifted out of the depths of a godless world and has come to a conscious and worshipful attitude toward God, the Father, and toward Jesus Christ, His only Son our Lord, even though the vision of the Incarnate God be dim and shadowy. Methodism owes to this child, this youth, this soul of whatever age or place or circumstance, its unaffected concern, its real sympathy, praying that upon its darkness, and if so may be, through our help, heaven shall say, "Let there be light." With such a life before us, the attitude toward every movement in the interest of childhood, youth or adult which expresses genuine interest in constructive endeavor may well have our encouragement even if it does not answer all the tests we would apply to our own agencies.

We are and must be profoundly interested in every phase of real educational work under whatever auspices conducted. We are, however, particularly committed to our public school system, and are concerned that the provisions made for the children and youth shall everywhere be adequate. We are convinced also that morality should be taught in these schools and that the Bible should be read not with theological intent but to give evidence of our respect for religion and to lay a foundation for morality in teaching the being, the presence, the kindness of God. In such organizations as the Boy Scouts, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, we should be substantially represented, for in a fine way they interpret human interest, intelligent and Christ-like. And we must accept responsibility for our rightful share in the promotion of all the general philanthropies which express unselfish impulse in helpful ministry.

The Industrial Problem

We are concerned in the industrial problem in its every aspect, and in safeguarding to the very limit those who are engaged in extra-hazardous labor, that wherever practicable the element of danger be eliminated or relieved. But we are concerned also that whatever the character of the toil there shall be a livable wage alike to men and women, capable not merely of prolonging existence but of supporting life, insisting always that life shall have for others such content as we demand for ourselves. It does not satisfy the requirement if there be given to the toiler to-day only so much as shall enable him to resume his toil to-morrow.

The dead level of a purely communistic theory does not appear either practicable or desirable, but certain things are demanded; provision for bodily comfort, for intellectual stimulation and satisfaction, for social contact under conditions altogether freed from humiliating suggestion; a share in the common amusements and pleasures of life; the promotion of that comfortable sense of self-respect which must be one of the constant if mutual regard is to survive in the world of give and take; and a reasonable provision for the days of illness and old age. In our social scheme we must give distinct recognition to these as basic elements of our industrial creed.

The problem of unemployment is one of the most serious that faces us, and one of the most involved. The disturbance of political order, the lack of confidence in the stability of values, overproduction of mill or factory, the occurrence of flood, or earthquake, all these have an immediate influence in crowding the ranks of the unemployed. It is an aspect of industrialism which demands patient and expert study, and no remedy can be extemporized, but in a measure quite beyond our accustomed consciousness, we share the responsibility for seeking a solution.

Here as elsewhere, we would lend all the force of our influence to the method of the council table, persistently opposing every method which appeals to force rather than to reason in the settlement of vexed questions. We do not recognize any inherent virtue in poverty nor any inherent vice in wealth. Moral courage has its finest expression when it stands for calm discussion and fair adjustment, urging upon others and accepting for self the personal and practical implications of a balanced social creed. It may be too much to expect such discretion from the professional doctrinaire, but less than this cannot satisfy the demands we make upon ourselves. Our theory of industrialism does not require a denial of the rights of private ownership.

The Church, however, in its utterance and action, must make clear its Christian attitude toward wealth as to its acquisition and disbursement. No righteousness of acquisition, however exalted, can excuse gross selfishness or extravagant display in its use, or justify that penurious mind which interprets mere possession as the end of accumulation and leaves to chance the scattering of fortune too tightly held by the toiler until his grasp has been loosened by death. And no generosity, however broad and discriminating, can atone for the unethical acquisition. The word of Zaccheus, uttered long time ago, might be accepted as a model of utterance for one whose gains have been by methods which cannot be defended in the presence of the Master. Standing before the Prophet of Galilee, Zaccheus published his purpose to give, and his purpose to repay, so making clear that to his quickened conscience, bestowment to the poor and restitution to those who have been wronged belong together. The Church must make convincingly clear that mercy and justice in human conduct can never appear in their rightful beauty and strength except as they stand side by side.

We believe in the rights of labor, individual and collective. We affirm our belief also in the right of the laborer to determine for himself his relation to the labor union, for to us there is equal aversion to tyranny, whether it be of organized capital or organized labor. We cannot hope to bring either of the groups immediately interested to any reasonable dispassionate view of these matters unless and until we have rid ourselves of those prejudices which prevent judicial poise and make of would be counselors only partisan and passionate advocates. Not infrequently the Church is blamed because the reign of love and good will is so long in coming. It must be ever borne in mind that the Church has given to the world those very ideals of justice and the square deal which are the criteria by which the theories of trade and the attitudes of men are judged.

We note with high approval a tendency in industrial management to cultivate relationships which are in harmony with the idea of Christian brotherhood. The old notion of master and servant is passing out of our thinking and is being replaced by the practice of comradeship. Increasing effort is made to induce those who labor to fit themselves for intelligent cooperation in the conduct of business enterprises. These movements have long had our commendation and support. We believe that those who invest their lives in productive endeavors should share in full proportion to the contribution which they make, both in the profits and in the conduct of industrial foundations.

The Great Moralities—The Lord's Day

Methodism owes to the world its zeal in behalf of the great moralities. A decent respect for the sanctity of the Lord's Day is manifestly an objective to which we are committed. Its observance is inseparably related to the maintenance of religion. We may well address ourselves most vigorously to a defense of the day against the rampant commercialism of the times, keeping constantly in mind the words of Jesus as of primal importance, "The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath." It is in the human rather than in the religious aspects of the case that we shall have our greatest power of general appeal. And for this very reason the Church cannot sanction in the interest of Sunday amusement such disregard of the decalogue as will inevitably tend to the further secularizing of the Lord's Day, when so many influences are at work to break down every safeguard of its sanctity.

Debasing Literature—The Stage—Dress

There must be concern for the morals of the community as affected by the perverted and poisonous character of so many of the theaters and of so much of current literature whether belonging to the class of the tabloid daily or the magazines in which, under the name of art, shameless vice insults every sense of decency. Cupidity and sensuality unite in their caricature of all that is womanly and manly for the defilement of all that is manly and womanly. It is needful that devotion to fashion be subdued by concern for morals. Remembering the essential imperfections of our behavior and standards, we appeal to those within and without our communion to give themselves to earnest endeavor so that in the interest, not of taste merely, but of life, there be set a limit beyond which suggestive art, under whatever name, shall not be suffered to pass. And we register the conviction that propriety demands in many things not only resistance of forward tendencies but the adoption of far less obtrusive customs than at present prevail. There is a perfectly normal desire for recreation and entertainment. This may, in part, be met by insisting that the drama be purged of what is offensive and that what is wholesome be openly sanctioned, for our protest against the unclean has its logical sequel in our approval of the clean. The world will read, and the surest remedy for the evil of debasing literature is the spread of literature, sane and elevating. Let us maintain the highest level of our own publications and stimulate their widest possible circulation.

Divorce

Whatever weakens respect for the parental relation threatens the foundation of the home, and the recognized sacredness of that home is one of the corner-stones in the structure of civilization. That of which we have been speaking directly bears upon this fact. But with all the extravagant misinterpretations of the stage and the influence of neurotic literature, there is nothing quite so inimical to home life as the tragedy of the divorce courts and the easy dissolution of the marriage bonds. In the United States the divorces granted in a year are equal to one-seventh of the marriages solemnized, and in some of the single States the proportion of divorces is much higher. In many instances such weight is given to the so-called incompatibilities and the sequel to divorce is such speedy remarriage that the whole transaction has upon the community the demoralizing effect of authorized marital exchange.

It is to be deplored that during recent years there has been a very flood of suggestion looking toward easier and more convenient methods of divorce, involving such prenuptial agreements as appear to anticipate the dissolution of the relationship. That seems to be the thought in the so-called companionate and trial marriage. It may be an honest effort to relieve the tragedy of unlawful relationship, but it is an utterly mistaken policy which addresses itself to the problem of relief, not by attempting the elevation of motive, but by lending to the status by legal pronouncement the transparent dress of alleged respectability. The effect of such suggestion, however, is to make matrimony too often a matter simply of sensual attraction, which no longer need be entered into "reverently, discreetly, and in the fear of God," and the marriage relation loses at once the blessing of the Church, the stamp of social convention, and the possible cumulative dignity attaching to years of devoted comradeship. Those who assume to deal with the subject, either as novelists, humanists or churchmen, must keep in mind the essential gravity of the subject.

We must insist upon respect for our own law upon this subject by our ministry and laity. So far as our standards go, we are with those who guard most jealously the altars of the home. Our denominational attitude is that of opposition to divorce except upon scriptural grounds, and we cannot justify the remarriage of even those who are the innocent parties in proceedings for divorce except where the action is based upon marital infidelity. The recognition of any other ground for divorce in our permissive provision for the "innocent party" at once opens the door to collusion and confusion. Mutual forbearance will, in many an unhappy home, resolve the discord and bring back the reign of love, and the church should give to such homes its sanest counsel, its tenderest care. The cost of maintaining unbroken home life probably will involve mutual forbearance and surrender of prerogative now and again, but the alternative is the blasting of the foundations, the crash of the walls.

Prohibition

World-wide Methodism is concerned in the morality of the world as it affects and is affected by the traffic in strong drink. Our prohibition creed, as stated in the book of Discipline, fairly expresses the position which the Church has taken upon the subject. With all our pronouncements, however, our record of achievement, our organizations, we are in an hour as critical as any to which we have ever come. The Eighteenth Amendment has been written into our Federal Constitution, and there it will doubtless remain secured in perpetuity by the provisions of the organic law itself which demand for amendment by annulment, the identical processes required for amendment by adoption. We have learned by experience, however, that where customs of long standing are affected by law, constitutional or statutory, especially where there is involved the question of political power, commercial gain, or personal restraint, the written law is not automatically effective. There has been widespread opposition to this law. Some of those sworn to uphold the law have not only themselves despised and defied it, but deliberately taught others to do the same, so that in the eyes of the immature the law has been made to appear contemptible. At a time when many influences are conspiring to lower the standards of conduct, there has been a persistent effort to charge not upon the violation of the law, but upon the law itself, responsibility for corrupting the age. Some who have been most vigorous in their zeal for the law have shown themselves less tactful than ardent, so that the very methods pursued by them have needlessly embittered and intensified opposition.

There is assuredly demanded a campaign of education, systematic and intensive, devoted to persuasion rather than contention, but we dare not condone any compromise with lawlessness. Whatever be the expenditure involved in the legal processes adopted, it is still true that administrative laxity is infinitely more costly than even the most extravagant method of law enforcement and that nothing could be devised so destructive of the nation's rightful standards as the belief sometimes avowed that public morality is an iridescent dream.

✓ We cannot consent to the moral dismemberment of the Union by the virtual nullification of the Constitution through modification of statutory law. That method of dealing with the Federal Constitution, whether it relates to this or any other amendment, is inconsistent with the respect for that instrument which it demands and must have, if government of and by and for the people is really to survive. We must set ourselves persistently to resist every change of constitution or statute which looks toward releasing this traffic from any restraint which the present laws impose. To take the first formal step in the direction of lowered standards is equivalent to a confession that the soberness of the nation is either undesirable or impossible. To approve and authorize the modification which the opponents of law and order seek, is to start upon that movement of moral descent which, gathering momentum, must inevitably find this nation at the bottom of the hill up which, through the long years, with patience and sacrifice, we have been steadily climbing. Our makers of public opinion, from whatever platform they speak, cannot consistently lend their influence to discredit the law and justify its violation; they must defend the majesty of the law and make its abuse abhorrent. To do otherwise is in effect to make individual preference the sole criterion of civic obligation. We are most certain of permanent result when we insist that all the facts be known; that conviction shall refuse consent to shilly-shally compromise. We must follow up our educational program by calling to the polls upon every election day all our sons and daughters who have the franchise. For after all, the ballot, clean and unafraid, is the best preventive thus far discovered for legislative anemia, judicial astigmatism and executive locomotor ataxia.

The time has come for us to submit to the closest scrutiny our whole plan of action, and perhaps to substitute new methods for old. The argument for the retention of the old on the ground of past efficiency is not conclusive. So far as method goes we must be ready for reasonable change; so far as objective is concerned we are unalterably fixed. Conscious of the rectitude of our intent, mindful of the forces against us, yet confident as to the resources available, human and divine, believing that the sobriety of the nation is the measure of its safety, we urge morality-loving men and women of whatever creed or party, in business and in social life, to make their attitude toward this evil convincingly clear. We call upon the youth of the world to give their brimming energy to this great crusade. We offer our plea for sympathy to those who have opposed us; we offer our pledge of sacrificial unity to those who labor with us; we offer our prayer for guidance and strength to the God above us, as we solemnly commit ourselves once again to the struggle that the traffic in strong drink, whether legalized or outlawed, shall end.

We recall with deepest gratitude the notable work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Anti-Saloon League, and our own Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, kindred societies. The attacks made upon our own Board sufficiently indicate the effectiveness of its work. Probably there is at present no other educational factor more potent in the creation of wholesome public sentiment than the weekly publications from the presses of this Board.

International and Inter-Racial Goodwill

World-wide Methodism owes to the world its uttermost strength in hastening the day of goodwill. Our relation to those of other lands has been embarrassed by such legislation as that of the "Japanese Exclusion Act," the effect of which has been felt not in one country alone, but in every land where the conditions seem to suggest the clash of color. The developments affect not only the American workers but the nationals associated with them. There is scarcely a little congregation in all the countries washed by the seven seas which does not present new aspects of difficulty in the missionary adventure which must and will continue unless the mistakes of needless and offensive discrimination are corrected. If we are to meet the native of another land with any hope of leading him to Christ, we must not only dismiss forever all that is suggestive of the superiority complex, but we must make it unmistakably plain to him that we have done so.

We know that all the world is kept advised of what goes on in America, and cannot lend countenance to any movement which denies the full rights of citizenship to any class on the ground of race, religion, or previous condition. While the option of candidacy for office is inherent in the franchise, the claim to election must be proved to the individual voter and may be limited, not only by the authoritative interpretation of constitutional provisions, but also as the implications of such provisions may appear to affect the question of personal qualification. The attitude of Methodism in the homeland, as in every other land, must be that of Peter, who, to the kneeling man of the long ago, said, "Stand upon thy feet." The narrow intolerance, which in this country pursues its course of suspicion and intimidation, while by an utter perversion of speech claiming that its standards are both Christian and American, deserves the unmeasured condemnation of every Methodist Episcopalian. This violation of Christian ideals is an indignity offered to large numbers of our constituency at home and to multitudes also of fellow citizens outside our own communion, but for whose civil rights we stand, and it is an insult offered to whole nations abroad.

We can hardly overstress the influence of our treatment of those who come from other lands upon the peoples from whom they come. Sensitive often, as we should certainly be, any lack of consideration which meets those of other lands at the doorway of the country, or after they have entered in, any violation of the neighbor code is magnified in the telling, and conversely any indication of real kindness will have its sequel in the opening of heart doors on the other side of the sea.

As illustrating the possibility of constructive effort in the correction of race prejudice, we would call attention to the remarkable work done by the Commission of Inter-racial Co-operation in a field of unusually delicate relationships and perplexing problems. It is one of the movements which has called constantly for self-restraint and that faith which inspires broad-minded endeavor. We would formally acknowledge our obligation to those who have given themselves to the promotion of this work, and we should not only encourage the Commission to continue effort in its particular field, but also should accept its accomplishment as suggestive of what may be done and ought to be done in bringing other racial groups together. The General Conference has it in its power, by the promotion of such agencies, to strengthen in a significant measure the bonds of inter-racial goodwill.

World Peace

The recollection of the world war is almost ever before us. In 1917 we took our place upon the field believing that we were participating in a war which was to end war. Of the awfulness of that war it is not necessary to speak. Its horrors have been burned into the consciousness of the age. Even when we were together as a General Conference in Springfield four years ago, as we uttered our pronouncement against war, the most of us probably thought that, taking nature as it is, with experience ineffaceable and conviction inescapable, humanity would not again resort to the savagery of the battlefield for the settlement of issues which, in almost every case, ultimately belong to the realm of reason and conscience. If any such belief was cherished, then we have been rudely disillusioned. More than one country has, since then, sent out the call to the colors. It is manifest that for war no remedy has been found because no substitute has been agreed upon. Say what we will, the passion for peace does not anywhere appear as a controlling national impulse. The tragedy in China to-day, with her agony of body, her confusion of mind, her hatred of fellow-countrymen, her distrust of other peoples, must shake us from our lethargy, must make impossible the unworthy calm of the provincial mind.

It is difficult to fix responsibility for past or present wars, and even if we could untangle the cords of guilt, the men who fell in battle would not come back. It is more important that we fix responsibility for future wars should they ever come. More than one of the military leaders have declared that if war were to come again the Church would be to blame. However intended, that word is at once an indictment of and a tribute to the Church. It is a solemn challenge which we dare not disregard. One of the keenest thinkers of the 18th century said, "War is the greatest of all crimes, and yet there is no aggressor who does not color his crime with the pretext of justice." Let us see to it that Methodism shall stand with unstained hands if war is suffered to reappear. It has been predicted that, with the advances in chemistry, in aviation, in the power and control of electricity since 1918, the horrors of another world war would make the last war but as child's play. Let us agree, however, that fear based upon that sort of prophecy will never bring in the reign of peace. Much has been accomplished in recent years but much must yet be done in changing the psychology of the world with reference to war. It has sometimes seemed to superficial minds that the propaganda of peace takes from the heroes of many a field the honor due them. The great truth, too often forgotten, is that the peace of the world is the great objective toward which every true prophet has pointed, for which unselfish toil has continually striven and toward which every hero, loyal to conscience and God, has consciously or unconsciously struggled.

In pleading for world peace we are but hastening the age which every true hero from the beginning would have exulted in heralding.

Upon two or three conditions the hope for a warless world must rest. There must be insistence upon the fact that war is not inevitable. There must be the process of education to the end that the heroic ideal and appeal shall be transferred from the bloodstained battlefield to those fields of bloodless conflict where every victory is to the abiding gain and joy of all. We are not far enough along to urge the discontinuance of our national military and naval schools, yet where we are in control, we should prevent, and where we are not we should discourage compulsory military training in school and college, a course of action altogether consistent with any sane theory of patriotic obligation. There must be agreement that the cost of participation in any war shall be shared by every group and every individual, high or low, rich or poor. The distribution of cost must be so adjusted that those who represent the dignity and unity of the nation in congress or parliament, or as presidents or kings, shall, by reason of office, be the first upon whom the tax is levied. Any theory of government which justifies the conscription of life must surely justify the conscription of capital and labor, and if, under any condition, men are called to the discipline of the camp and the peril of the field, the nation must guard with flaming sword every gateway to wealth against the approach of the profiteer. In case of war among the other nations, it should be provided that no gold stained with human blood be allowed to financier or manufacturer dwelling in the protected zone. The declaration of such a national attitude upon the part of any government would clothe neutrality with imperial dignity and would stir other nations to imitation.

But why should we be compelled to discuss the penalties for participation in future war or be fashioning for ourselves a sort of moral refuge against impending storm? Have we not come to the place in human history when sheer barbarism can be mastered by civilization? Has the day not dawned, will it never dawn, when there shall be evoked by the soul of statesmanship what never can be won by the sword of militarism, the answer to the world quest for peace without victory—of peace, that is, without the sequel of the burning wrath which inevitably follows humiliating defeat? It will never come so long as diplomacy concerns itself simply or chiefly with the great game of wits for national monetary advantage.

Nations must think straight and their leaders avoid the odium of a double standard—one form for display and one for use. It is not enough to set our wills against war, unless there be promoted a pact among the nations which will make generally applicable such provisions as were with limited range agreed upon at Locarno. If we really take seriously the responsibility of this nation in the matter of world peace, it is imperatively demanded that we exhaust every effort in bringing together the nations in mutual understanding and agreement, accepting eagerly and at once every hand outstretched to us as a pledge of peace, and persistently offering our hand as a symbol and guarantee of goodwill. We cordially commend the effort which the Secretary of State of the United States is making to bind together the nations to the end that war be outlawed. And we pray that these efforts may be crowned with such success as will make war an outlaw in the world.

The complete disarmament of the nations must be synchronized, so that no one people shall be left helpless in the presence of armed lawlessness. The councilors in Geneva may have rejected the proposition of Soviet Russia for reasons conclusive to the Council, but finally upon some such plan the nations must unite. Plans for partial disarmament are futile if the elimination of one destructive agency leaves open the expedient of multiplying other agents of destruction, and we are but deceiving ourselves if our treaties simply result in changing the scene of battle from sea or land to the air. So subtle is the human mind, so elastic our most careful phrases, so powerful the forces which the laboratories are discovering, or devising, that only one effective remedy for war appears, namely, the insistent belief in and promotion of international friendship.

We must discredit those policies which excite racial antipathies. We must bar the way toward provocative armament and antagonism, and our international trade relations must be regulated and adjusted with this in mind. We dare not preach peace and then stand idly by while the material for conflagrations is gathered or lighted. Nor should we demand or consent that any one government be allowed the place of dictator at the world's council table. We do not believe that for the United States of America it is wise or fair to stand apart from other nations until every difficulty is mastered and every feature of the program is perfected.

We register our conviction that a World Court and a League of Nations in some approved form have a real place in any practical program for world peace. For the United States of America to refuse her whole-hearted participation in the world's constructive program, seems to us utterly inconsistent with our protestation of friendliness to the other nations. It is an attitude the more unworthy if, as we claim, we are the richest and strongest among the nations. Likewise, it is the most perilous course possible to us, for it is conceivable that our failure to accept responsibility and meet the cost of participation, whatever it be, in the strengthening of world friendship, might have its sequel in another war in which, whether we now will or will not, this nation should be involved. If such a day should ever come—which may God forbid—added to the cost of it, the eternally incurable agony of it, as long as men live the question would be asked why this nation, ere it was too late, came not to the help of the Lord; why, when the very stars of heaven seemed striving together for the peace of the world, we were unwilling to revise previous decisions, or broaden our policies, or decline expedients except as proposed by ourselves; why, while in theory we were concerned in the welfare of the other nations, we were in fact content to abide in our fields and cities, listening to the bleating of our flocks, the music of our factories.

We are not empowered upon this or any other similar issue, as a General Conference to make pledges for the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Such a pledge upon our part would doubtless be regarded as an encroachment upon the rights of private conscience, but we are persuaded that the Chief Executives and governmental authorities of the nations represented here may confidently expect the sympathetic consideration and support of our constituency in every land for any policy that discourages racial antagonism, that corrects economic injustice or tends to the establishment or promotion of friendship among the nations.

As a group representing in a real way a world parish, whatever of light heaven has given us we dare not hide under a bushel. We deliberately set it on a candlestick that it may give light at any rate to all who are in our house. The importance of having the whole house illuminated, so far as it is within our power to have the light shine, would abundantly justify the General Conference in providing that every local church, through Quarterly Conference or congregational action, every Sunday school, every seminary, college and university under our control, be actively and substantially participant in the promotion of world peace. That would be in truth a call to the colors, a new and holy call, on which the God of peace would smile.

Some months ago there was a brilliant ceremony in one of the stately historic halls of Paris. There, with a setting such as France knows so well how to stage, General Debeney pinned the cross of the Legion of Honor upon the breast of Corporal Sellier, who, on that last day of the World War, sounded on his bugle, the command, "Cease firing." Let us here and now summon all our powers of love and faith and will to preach and to promote the gospel of world friendship; and let us, with all the earnestness and persuasiveness that we can command, to every nation that will hear us, to every rank and order of men, sound out the signal, to be repeated from every Methodist Episcopal church around the world, for the sake of humanity, and in the name of God, "Cease firing."

Co-ordination and Interdenominational Co-operation

If we are under obligation to promote the major moralities of the world, we are under the same obligation to bring to the task every power we can command or devise. In many of the great objectives we must begin with the more adequate departmentalizing of our own Church so that we shall avoid the waste and confusion invariably apparent when we trust for result to indiscriminate and unorganized endeavor. There must be technical mastery of detail in specific fields, and if the process of qualification results in what seems a preferential zeal, that is to be regarded not at all as a fault in our program.

Just as it is necessary for world peace to conserve and co-ordinate every element of national and international idealism and strength, so in promoting this we must, as churchmen, avail ourselves of every possible resource of religious interest and association. Methodism of itself can not bring about the practical solution of the child problem, or the problem of industry, or that of a sober world, or that of world peace. On the athletic field it has been noted that the instinctive effort is for the brilliant individual play. It is only as the result of patient and persistent training that the players come to see that often the opportunity for the brilliant individual play must be sacrificed if the team is really to win the game. This is one of the lessons which the children of light must learn from the children of this world.

John Wesley in his day sought an alliance with all the followers of the Master in promoting the practical work of the Kingdom, and David Livingstone asked the blessing of God on all, whether of one or another religious belief, who would help to heal the open sore of the world. We may as a Church well take that same attitude as we think of the religious illiteracy or the injustices of the industrial world, or the madness of the traffic in alcohol and the narcotics, or of the objective of peace. We are in fullest sympathy with the effort of the Church Peace Union, now in progress, to co-ordinate all the religious forces of the world, Christian and non-Christian, in the interest of world peace, a movement in line with the suggestion sent out by the Springfield General Conference. We account it one of our denominational privileges to have joined with the other Churches in supporting so many of the interdenominational activities and in making conspicuous contribution to their leadership.

We appreciate the value of such organizations as the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, recognizing, however, the necessity for great deliberation and general consultation before the issue of public pronouncements. But we can not guarantee the support of the denomination for every interdenominational movement. There is not infrequently a clear overlapping of organization. We must insist upon the more careful establishment of program boundaries. In some of the benevolent appeals, where there is a sharply defined limit of resources, it is unwise and inexpedient to jeopardize interests to which we are as a Church already committed by the transfer of our contributions to an outside agency which can not present a motive broader or higher than is involved in the denominational cause which would be weakened by the diversion of our gifts. The General Conference must determine the proper range of pronouncement and activity for its own Boards and also the measure of accepted responsibility in interdenominational pronouncement.

It is not unreasonable to expect and require that all manifestos issued by any group, either directly or indirectly, presumed to carry the weight of our denominational approval, shall be distinctly covered by what the General Conference has stated or authorized and that the implications of our utterances on any of the large questions of the day should be interpreted by those specifically authorized to speak for us. The Church as a whole must be allowed the right of determination, not only as to the direction to be taken but likewise as to the distance to be traveled at any given time, a judgment in which we are assured the Federal Council would concur.

As to conditions prevailing at the time of our session, or definitely anticipated, the General Conference should meet its responsibility by formal declaration. Knowing that conditions are certain to arise, in which the influence of the churches ought to be unified, we should provide suitably for our ad-interim representation. We must prevent embarrassment to the Church by our apparent commitment through unauthorized inclusion and also avoid the inexcusable evasion of denominational responsibility. Likewise we should provide against the needless delay of significant interdenominational action by any uncertainty as to our denominational intent and attitude.

At our last quadrennium gathering a Commission of Twenty-five was constituted to act for us in such interdenominational pronouncement. Either to this Commission or to some other carefully chosen group, which can be promptly brought together, or to our own members of the several interdenominational administrative committees which should be named by us, this duty of representing us should be formally committed.

The success of an interdenominational agency is not infrequently jeopardized by extending the range of its activity when such extension may result in the break of sympathetic contact with the communions for which it is supposed to act; or by forgetting that the constituent groups are really not identical; or by assuming that the individual members of the churches are non-resistant subjects of ecclesiastical control, or by attempting to solve the religious problems of individuals and communities by mathematical formulae and method. The constituent bodies must constantly remember that effective interdenominational activity involves large outlay and each of the participating communions must be prepared to bear its fair proportion of this cost.

Christian Unity

World-wide Methodism owes the world not only a definitely progressive program, but wherever possible the dynamic of collective endeavor, and also, in so far as may be, the creation and maintenance of an atmosphere stimulating to all that is worthy and deadly to all that is unworthy. The strength of the Church has often been wasted in the assault and defense of sand-bag batteries like those which Kinglake's history of the Crimean War has made familiar, batteries heroically assailed and defended, but the possession or loss of which did not really affect the main issue of the struggle.

Christian unity is one of the great questions before us. Christianity is broken into camps not only naturally unsympathetic but often apparently antagonistic, and the ground of division is chiefly the difference of the Churches as to creed and orders. More than once the organic union of Christianity has been undertaken, sometimes by the Anglican and associated Churches, sometimes by such bodies as the Presbyterian Church of the United States, but never yet effectively. The hour demands that we carefully distinguish between unity and uniformity. Uniformity that is real and not merely in appearance, demands practical identity of philosophy, theology, taste and experience. It is a collective expression of highly standardized characteristics. Unity, on the other hand, allows diversity without discord and, like love, "seeketh not her own" by an insistence upon subscription or conformity. The importance of unity can not be overstated; the significance of uniformity is practically negligible.

Usually the proponents of Christian union have looked forward to a day when the Eastern Churches and those of the West, Protestant and Roman Catholic, would be united in one. There have been several incidents in recent days tending to throw light upon the subject. In contending for temporal power, the political claims of the Papacy have, in the last months, been asserted with a directness and vigor more outspoken than for a generation past, in unmistakable contradiction of the statement repeatedly made by representatives of that faith in this country that the Roman Catholic Church is not political in its government. It has been publicly said by those assuming to speak for the Church of Rome that in all civic relations and responsibilities her members in Protestant countries are free to act for themselves entirely independently of Papal authority or domination; that is to say, that individual conscience is without constraint except that which is imposed by individual judgment. It is but fair to state that no such declaration of independence appears to have been authorized or validated by the Vatican. In the light of current events this Papal claim is not only interesting but important. It is confessedly difficult, if indeed it is not impossible, to separate the political and ecclesiastical in either the consciousness and claims of the ruler or in the attitude of veneration and obedience of the subjects.

So far as this section of the Church is concerned, we should avail ourselves of every opportunity for friendly co-operation in dealing with the great moral and social problems, leaving to another day the settlement of questions manifestly now impossible of solution. Even now, however, there may well be the tempering of judgment and the modulation of voice in discussions essentially doctrinal or religious. The recent encyclical of the Roman Pontiff repeats and elaborates the contention that the union of Christendom demands, as an unconditional requirement, the acceptance of Papal primacy and subscription to Roman Catholic dogma. If there is to be union, the Vatican insists that it must be by a return of all the wandering flocks to the historic fold. It is to be regarded as opportune that this ex cathedra pronouncement appears at a time when the matter of unity is receiving such consideration as has not previously been given to it, for in closing this way for the hoped-for union of Christendom, we are compelled to look about us to see in what direction we shall move.

In view of the position asserted by the Church of Rome, it is useless also for us to consider the expedient of a so-called "bridge church" extending from Protestantism to Rome. If at the further end of the bridge all the convictions that have been logically induced by the Reformation must be surrendered, then all the considerations which operate against our renunciation of Protestant principle at the further end would have precisely the same reasonable influence at the proximate end of the bridge. The Anglo-Catholic movement, therefore, opens no path of religious advance satisfactory to a vital Protestantism.

In the ecclesiastical objective, then, so far as organization is concerned, we are evidently shut up to the hope of Protestant union, in which position we find ourselves by the trend of previous discussion, face to face with the overtures of the Anglican Church. Here again we are embarrassed by the fact that in the Lambeth proposal, the basis of unity, sometimes modified in respect of other conditions, always involves acceptance of the historic episcopate as held by the Church of England. In frankness it should be said that so long as the approach to the council hall is by this way, the realization of organic union is remote indeed. The tendency of religious thought is not toward the exaltation of tradition as a condition of co-operation, but toward the exaltation of the living Christ and His imperative demand for our immediate service upon the basis of apostolic devotion.

If consent to the claim so often urged meant simply concession as to the historicity of an alleged transaction, the contention might possibly, with more or less of mental restraint, be allowed to go uncontradicted, but it amounts to much more than that. It is in effect not only to validate the historic claim, but also to affirm the paramount importance of an office and to rest the theory of apostolic succession upon an ancient human contact rather than upon a present spiritual experience.

It must also be said that the recent discussion of the Anglican Prayer Book revision, with the sharply defined cleavage revealed by the action of the English House of Commons, must inevitably strengthen opposition to organic union on the conditions indicated in the Anglican overture.

The subject has been so long before us and the matters involved are of such moment that we owe to ourselves and to the other communions a frank statement of the situation as it appears to us. To us unity is really a matter of spirit rather than of form. Knowing human nature, as all of us do, and remembering that conviction is never more compelling than in the realm of religious faith and practice, it does not appear probable or reasonable that we should at present agree to lose our denominational identity for the sake of constituting a great world Church which, if created, would in all likelihood feel at once the divisive tendencies of individual and group assertiveness.

Following the Stockholm Conference in 1925 the Lausanne Conference brought together in the summer of 1927 one of the most distinguished groups gathered since the days of old epochal councils. It was conspicuously memorable in this: it showed that without surrender of conviction on things essential, it is possible for men to counsel and worship together and, despite the variations of form and ceremony, to strengthen the bonds of respect and sympathy. Is not this of immense value, and may we not believe that the great historic Lausanne gathering, called perhaps with another end in view, really makes its supreme contribution to the building of the Kingdom in the emphasis it places upon the possibility and value of Christian sympathy? Let us grasp and hold to the idea that diversity and distinction need not involve division in any unhappy or destructive sense.

It is our opinion that within the United States, and possibly other countries here represented, national conferences similar to those held at Stockholm and Lausanne should be held to consider the problems of "Life and work," and "Faith and Order." We suggest that this General Conference direct our representatives on the Continuation Committees of the Stockholm and Lausanne Conferences, and other bodies, to propose and invite such Conferences.

We shall probably make our largest possible contribution to the Kingdom by the intensive cultivation of what has been entrusted to us if only we are kept from jealousy and rivalry, from suspicion, from the meanness which proselytes and whispers, from that selfishness which has not learned to say, "He must increase; I must decrease." The surrender of autonomy has moral significance only where denominational history and polity are intelligently understood and considerately appraised. To turn from the old loyalties with never a sigh nor a backward look may be regarded as indicating strength of Christian catholicity when more accurate thought would see in it only the weakness of denominational consciousness. This is a process which one may understand but which is not heroically impressive in either its beginning, continuance or ending. As it offers no tribute to past affiliation so it gives no promise of future loyalty, and without such loyalty Protestant or Christian solidarity would be but an illusive dream.

The odium of so-called sectarian narrowness is corrected by the unity for which we plead, and human experience at its highest has established for covenant and convention a value which can not wisely or safely be disregarded. Without the change of a single formulary or the modification of a single ceremonial, it has been demonstrated that men of many communions may sit together in heavenly places. If we shall only agree to extend the implications of that confession to include not worship only but service also, it would seem as though we were approaching the goal, if indeed we had not arrived. So far as the evangelical churches are concerned, that unity of spirit, under the mastery of Christ, seems to be immediately possible. Is it indeed possible? Then we must not rest satisfied until it be actual, for we are convinced that a willfully divided Church can not bring together the divided nations; a Christianity which persistently magnifies its own disagreements can not compose the discords of the industrial world; a Christendom which perversely refuses to learn from Christ the lesson of love can not teach the lesson of love to the non-Christian multitudes. The consummate triumph of our Lord can come only as the high-priestly prayer of Jesus has its answer by the descent of the Spirit and the ascent of the Church to the higher level of love and loyalty with the three-fold affirmation of and for all Christendom, "In non-essentials liberty, in essentials unity, in all things charity."

Lausanne, with its substitution of conference for contention, marked an advance toward the goal of unity. The recent Jerusalem Meeting of the International Missionary Council is both parable and prophecy. Unity, co-operation, union, probably that will be the historical sequence, and unity, calmly deliberative, unselfishly considerate, unreservedly eager, is the first great forward step.

As far as our own denominational group is concerned, it would seem but natural and reasonable to ask that we tighten the bonds which unite Methodism the world around. Ecumenical Methodism would thus come to mean much more than even a ten years' assembly with its cultural programs, its significant social contacts and courtesies. To substitute frequent council and permanent co-operation for the more occasional meetings, would be of immense value in advancing the work of God. You will doubtless approve the Ecumenical Conference in 1931. It would greatly promote this further aim of permanent co-operative activity if the General Conference would specifically authorize the announcement of such a purpose, taking such additional action as would seem appropriate.

We would be untrue to ourselves if we did not confess our yearning for the reunion of Episcopal Methodism, since 1844 divided. For us the avowal of concord seems no longer sufficient. There must be something more as between us; there must be an attitude of love deeper and more appealing than is expressed by the word "unity." Accepting our full measure of responsibility for the disunion of these years, we believe that we speak not for ourselves alone, but for the world-wide Methodist Episcopal Church represented here when we declare our readiness to hasten the restoration of unity and union by the acceptance of any basis of agreement which may be reached by the accredited Commissioners of the two Churches. We earnestly recommend that this General Conference designate Commissioners who, when the opportunity is afforded, shall represent us in negotiations with our sister Church. For us to evade the logical results of such a declaration would be to invalidate every plea for the broader Christian unity, however eloquently framed and impressively declared. Our reminiscent attachment to the yesterdays must yield to the alluring promise of the glorious tomorrows. In the dawning of that day the very ends of the earth will rejoice. We cannot escape the belief that our will to meet the conditions deliberately regarded as necessary for Christian unity is the precise measure of our desire for the coming of the Kingdom. If that conclusion has our consent, then it must also appear convincing that at this hour and in this place our will to subordinate whatever is personal to the welfare and unity of our own Methodist Episcopal Church is the initial test of our zeal for the wider unities.

The Church

The Kingdom of God is broader than the Church of Christ, but for the present age we are persuaded that the visible Church, as interpreting God to man and as leading man to God, stands alone. It is sometimes objected that the abstract conception of Christianity is acceptable, but that no visible Church is worth while. In part, that attitude is due to the open or covert attacks of those who are the adversaries of the Church. Too often it has been encouraged by others, who, while possibly honestly claiming to be its friends, have given far more thought to what they regard as the failures of the Church than to the daring of its enterprise and the splendor of its achievement. It must be remembered that the abstract is as the spirit which needs lodgment in the body if it is to accomplish the task to which it has been called and set. One may accept the abstract and reject the concrete, but it is likely to appear that where such a mental attitude is assumed, the difficulty is really not in the philosophy of religious life; it is rather in the fact that the dreamer is not willing to take upon himself the discipline and obligations of a doer.

Methodism is not in and of herself the whole Church of Christ. She neither claims for herself alone the glory nor accepts for herself the full responsibility of that Church against which the gates of hell shall not prevail. But Methodism is a part of that Church. Her members, numbered by millions, if they be true, have place at the King's table and whatever their strength of number or resources, they account it the chief token of the King's grace that they may be workers together with Him.

Speaking for ourselves, and, as we believe, for our world-wide communion, we voice the conviction that the world problems were never more involved than they are this day. There is the need of a new adventure of faith, and an insistent cry rings out for new emphasis upon the vital things of spiritual life. While the Church cannot, dare not, surrender its right to speak upon the great moral issues of the day, it alone is commissioned to lift up the distinctly spiritual ideals. Its business is not the duplication of what the secular schools are doing, or what can be wrought out by groups elsewhere gathered for social and moral reform, but it is to penetrate all realms of life and action with religious experience and conviction. Its aim must be to lift the standards of life, individual and social, so high that those who hear its message shall be driven to their knees. Possibly in the presence of human accomplishment the danger threatens, as never before, that men will think they can build their heaven-reaching towers unaided, and unaided can bring in the new great age of love and righteousness, but as we know too well, that can not be done. Perhaps we have been taking too much for granted in assuming that our analysis of conditions and adaptation of means for meeting them need no amendment. We look with wonder upon the productive activity of men in the realms of business, of politics, of applied science; are challenged by their daring, inspired by the magnificence of their accomplishments. Are we as keen in our religious purpose as the national imperialists or the international socialists are in theirs? Are we as careful as are they in the avoidance of harsh and censorious judgments concerning the brethren? Are we as ready to interpret our conception of heroism in the promotion of world peace as others have shown themselves in the prosecution of world war?

We have been keeping our old ledgers in the old way, and have been well content when by our old methods we could balance the columns of credit and debit, the columns of getting and giving. The perils of modern life, the lowering of standards, the feverish acceleration of all the physical enginery of which the clutches and levers are in our hands, the sheer recklessness of determination, these things must have a voice and a lesson for us.

It would, however, be altogether unfair to the spirit of the day if we dwelt upon the perils and failed to give to the heartening facts their proper place and proportion. Never since history began have there been so many desires and devices for the bringing of men together; never before in all the ages were the highways of the air crowded as they are today with the messages of earnest souls, very, very many of them striving to lift up Christ to the adoring gaze of the world. Despite all complexities and intrigues, all machinations, it would seem clear that in a larger way than ever before men are striving, not always wisely but nevertheless striving, to make this the day of salvation. The Church must not vacate her leadership nor grow weary of her task. Taking account of our assets and our resources, we must study the problem of a new world and the cost of its making; must see not only the forces hostile to the Church but also those making for human redemption; must see the horsemen and chariots of God upon all the hills; must take for our present-day need the encouragement of the Master's word, "Fear Not, it is the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom"; must set ourselves with sanctified enthusiasm to the accomplishment of that victory of the world for which love qualifies and to which faith leads. We must see to it that latent energies are released, perceiving that in the individual consecration of money, of time, of influence, of self is the way to spiritual heights we have not occupied.

We can not forget those heroic adventurers who assailed Mount Everest. Once and again they tried to come where human feet never before had trodden. On the final day of the struggle, in the brief historic moment, when through the parted mists their comrades saw Mallory and Irvine for the last time, this was, in effect, the record they bore of them, "Headed for the summit and still climbing." We must accelerate our pace for our own participation in spiritual conquest; must bring to bear whatever of spiritual forces we can grasp to overcome in others the results of materialistic obsession; must bring all the existing potencies to answer our present problem; must, by every art of devotion, of prayer, by every enduement of power, stretch toward the goal, that goal the uttermost accomplishment of God's will, our constant attitude, "still climbing."

Conclusion

But we must conclude. . We listen and the past speaks to us reminding us of the mighty personalities whose lives have enriched our history and heritage, reminding us also of great hours to which the nations and the Church were brought by Him who had and has the secret of the guiding pillar of cloud and of fire. It bids us recall the crises when, in the confusion of contentious voices, men failed to catch the voice of God, when fear defeated faith and the immediate purpose of God was frustrated by human doubt. The past speaks to us that we may be inspired and also warned. In the full light of our quickened memories we pray you listen to the voices which now are speaking to you; the voices of the world's youth looking this way with an interest but partly disclosed, asking in its mood, half cynical, half tragically serious, how we mean to deal with the opportunities and responsibilities of these days; the voices of warring multitudes, the plaintive cries of starving millions, the appeals of those who have lost the way and are groping amid the pitfalls, weary, fainting, ready to die, who need a guide but can not wait.

Members of this General Conference, you are met together in a great crisis of human history. Much has been given you. Much is required of you. Perhaps the opportunity of this present month is the greatest of all the privileges which the providence of God has brought you as a Church. The unselfish improvement of the opportunity by human counsel and God's help may be regarded as the greatest demand which Heaven has ever made upon you. Much has been given; much is required. We pray that you do not fail the world in this great hour, that you do not fail God. Let us wait in prayer that we may go forth in praise. The staggering difficulties of our task challenge us but must not confound us. Humans we are. We can give only what we have, but what we have means what we have brought, plus the increment of deliberate counsel, plus what God now bestows. In the vast spiritual adventure of these days we dare not be deterred by doubt, or weakened by mutual suspicion, or led by impatience to decisions which impulse may accept, but which reflection in the days to come will condemn and deplore. If we should fail humanity and God, what would they say of us on the rim of the world? What would they say of us in the battling centers? What would the mighty ones, looking down upon us from above, say of us? Ah, what would we say of ourselves as in some future golden day we enter into the City and look back? What will God say of us? Nay, whatever tests we face, we must not fail!

What can Methodism do for the world? This: help God to save it. And so, by His grace, we will! The Church is the spouse of Christ, the object of his tender and inexhaustible love. It is the body of which Christ is the Head. Oh comrades in the joy of His love, in the fellowship of that devotion which is to bring in the consummate glory of His universal reign, let us lift before our eager minds the Master's yearning that His Church shall wear the garments which are without spot or wrinkle or any such thing! If it be part of the exceeding great reward to walk with Him in white, shall we not aspire to have even here, as far as may be, the foretaste of that joy?

In the imagery of John's vision there stands out the picture of our diademed Lord walking in the midst of the golden candlesticks. It is Christ in the midst of the Churches. It must be that He is here this very hour. As disciples of His, would we bow at His feet and wait to learn of Him that He may show us in this Conference what to do and what to say. He is the Prince of Peace. May He breathe on us His peace as we pledge ourselves to hasten the fulfillment of the angels' prophetic song. He is the brother of men. He has proved it in the shop of the carpenter, in the boat of the fisherman, in the countless contacts with the weary and wounded and self-willed among the sons of men. We pledge to Him our unhesitating compassion that we may go about doing good, that singly and together we may bring into the chill of the world's avarice and selfishness the glow and gleam of the great Brother's heart. He is our Saviour, the only Saviour whom we know, with His measureless love that encloses in its arms mankind everywhere. To Him we this day offer ourselves, our substance, our service, our minds, our hearts, that going into all the world we may tell men everywhere that He is able to save unto the uttermost all, ALL, ALL that come unto God by Him, seeing that he ever liveth to make intercession for them, and we will tell them that He is even now waiting to be gracious. He is our King, we own His sway, we would once again kiss His scepter, acknowledging that He is sovereign over us. This is our rejoicing, that He shall reign forever and ever. Here we call upon our souls to praise and adore Him. We would this hour, for ourselves, for all we represent, out of our faith, our hope, our love, fashion a royal diadem and crown Him Lord of All.

Unto the Father who has loved us with an everlasting love and whose mercy endureth forever; unto the only begotten Son who died for us that He might, through His saving power, make us at length kings and priests unto God; unto the Holy Spirit, whose presence in the upper room long time ago surcharged narrow lives with power and sent men out to turn the very world upside down, by whom we seek not only enlightenment for the days, but also the shedding abroad in all our hearts of that love which shall make every hour of our Conference fruitful of blessing; unto the triune God be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen and amen!

CENTRAL PENNSYLVANIA

SECOND DAY.
Morning.

H. L. Jacobs presented the following resolution, which, on his motion, was adopted:

On November 11, 1927, from his home in the city of this General Conference session the Bishop of our souls called to highest service one of the most distinguished and widely known ministers of the church of Jesus Christ American Methodism has had in its itinerant ranks. Of the fifty-three years of his eminent and achieving ministry, his thirty-six years in the Episcopal office made an unmatched record of the longest service in the Episcopacy in his church.

Memorial Service for Bishop
E. R. Hendrix.

By a singular coincidence, on the anniversary of his birthday, which history assigns to May 17, 1847, at the 1916 General Conference in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Bishop Hendrix and Bishop Cranston after the memorable action on Unification joined in the "Supreme Moment," to use Bishop Cranston's felicitous description by standing together with hands clasped, Bishop Hendrix declaring, "I am going to take the hand of my venerable friend and colleague as an expression of that deep and abiding fraternal friendship which I know to exist between the two great American Methodisms." Name, if the living can, a scene in the session of any General Conference that moved more profoundly delegates and visitors, even to-day deep calling unto deep whenever that event is recalled.

The grave of this Apostle of Unification is in Mount Washington Cemetery at the edge of Kansas City, Missouri. He being dead yet speaketh strongly, persuasively and appealingly for ceaseless prayer and unflagging effort such as he gave "for fifty years and more" for the consummation of his hope, the reunion of divided Methodism; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the General Conference request and authorize the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church to arrange such a memorial service at the grave of Eugene Russell Hendrix as will be a worthy tribute to him and constitute a high testimonial to the world of our yearning and will for Unification, and the realization of Christ's prayer, "that they may be one."

That our action on this resolution shall be taken by a rising vote.

Waldorf, speaking for the local Committee on Entertainment of the General Conference, was granted the privilege of the floor to request that the General Conference appoint a committee of five to assist a similar committee from Kansas City and the State of Kansas in arranging a program for a mass meeting to be held on the grounds of the Shawnee Indian Mission during the month of May, preferably on Sunday afternoon, May 20.

On motion of H. G. Langley, the request of Bishop Waldorf was complied with and the co-operating committee authorized.

On a question of privilege, H. E. Woolever presented the following resolution:

Whereas, There is now before the United States Senate a proposal to authorize the construction of fifteen additional ten thousand ton cruisers, making a total of twenty-three under construction and authorization, a number exceeding any peace time program in history;

Whereas, such a big naval program is contrary to the popular desire that we have peace by understanding, is at variance with the spirit of the Washington Naval Disarmament Conference, is provocative of a burdensome and unnecessary naval competition, inviting immense expenditures of the citizens' money and placing millions of the peoples of the world under fear of the intentions of the nation;

Whereas, The proposed measure is not in accord with the ideals and practices of our democracy in that it seeks to make our naval building program perpetual until completed, and denies the President the right to suspend the construction of those warships even should there be the prospect of an early disarmament conference, representing a jingoistic program contrary to the evident desires of the people as expressed in the recent nation-wide protest against a program of seventy-one additional war vessels, but is deceptive in that it appears to respond to this protest without actually doing so;

Whereas, President Coolidge has declared: "No nation in the world, with one exception, approaches ours and none surpasses it," and he and the Secretary of State are now making earnest and promising efforts for the outlawry of war through treaties with other nations; and,

Whereas, the Methodist Episcopal Church, as a part of the Church of Jesus Christ, stands for the program of the Prince of Peace against all war-like gestures which would disturb the growing mind for international peace or be provocative of an unjustifiable fear of the resort of force; therefore, it is

Resolved, That the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in session at Kansas City, Missouri, on the second day of May, 1928, does earnestly petition the President of the United States and the Senate of the United States to withhold their support, during this session of Congress, from any naval bill which proposes authorization for the construction of any more cruisers beyond the fixed year ending June, 1929, which is the end of the present naval program of our sister nation, the British Commonwealth, and Further, we petition the Senate to eliminate from any bill which it may act upon, such clauses as would restrict the President in his power to suspend construction of naval vessels in case an early conference on further restriction of armament might promise success, and we urge upon the President and the Congress the exercise of their good offices to the end that an early conference of the nations may be called looking to further curtailment of the maintenance and use of arms and armaments.

It is ordered that copies of this resolution be sent immediately to the President and to the Senate of the United States, bearing the signatures of the presiding officer and secretary of this General Conference.

On motion of F. A. Horne, this resolution was referred to the Committee on State of the Church.

Tokyo, Japan,
February 15, 1928.

To the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America:

DEAR BRETHREN:—

Credentials.

The General Conference of the Methodist Church of Japan assembled in quadrennial session at Kamakura in October, 1927, elected Reverend Yoshimune Abe as its Fraternal Delegate to your honored church.

Reverend Abe is a full member in good standing in the East Conference of our Japan Methodist Church. He is now Principal of the Academy of the Aoyama Gakuin in Tokyo.

Reverend Abe is a regular graduate of the Theological Seminary of Aoyama Gakuin and also of Drew Theological Seminary. For some time he served as a pastor of the Aoyama Gakuin Church and later he was appointed Dormitory Master of the Academy of the Aoyama Gakuin, his Alma Mater, until he became principal of the same.

Educated abroad he is well equipped intellectually for the modern ministry and Christian Religious Education. He is especially interested in young people's work and as Chairman of the Board of Young People's Work of the Japan Methodist Church he is one of our most valued workers.

Reverend Abe is a man of the highest character and of fine disposition and his work as pastor and school administrator has been of the highest order. He has before him a future of large promise.

I take great pleasure in recommending him as worthy of your confidence. Brother Abe will bear to you our fraternal greetings and will give you all the news of our young struggling church.

Yours sincerely,

KOGORO UZAKI,

Tribute to —
Bishop Stuntz.

The last General Conference had barely closed when word came of the death of Bishop Homer Clyde Stuntz, who had just completed eight years of service in the Omaha Area, and had been retired on account of impaired health.

His ministry began within the Des Moines Annual Conference. His career as missionary in India, superintendent of our missions in the Philippines, secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, and General Superintendent in South America and in the United States, was filled with noteworthy service to the entire Church, while those who were permitted to serve with him will never forget his brotherly spirit and his devotion to the Kingdom. A great missionary statesman, a speaker of magnetic interest, an indefatigable worker, faithful and conscientious in administration, he built for himself a noble monument in the heart of the Church; be it

Resolved, That this General Conference record its appreciation of the services of Bishop Homer Clyde Stuntz and its deep sense of loss in his death; and be it further

L. M. Potter presented the following resolution:

Whereas, The closing days of the General Conference Session are so often crowded with work as to prevent proper deliberation on important legislation; and,

Whereas, Much legislation that is merely routine in its nature may easily be disposed of early in the session if presented; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Chairmen of the several Standing Committees be requested to select such legislation as will cause little or no debate for as early action as possible in committee and early report to the General Conference; and, be it further

Resolved, That the Rules Committee be instructed to provide in the daily program of business a call for such reports beginning not later than May 8.

On motion of H. L. Jacobs, this resolution was referred to the Committee of Chairmen of the Standing Committees of the General Conference.

manufacture of opium and its allied narcotics to scientific and medicinal needs has resulted in the rapid increase of these dangerous drugs in China and other countries where men and women are physically poisoned, mentally spoiled, and morally degenerated; and

Whereas, the scourge of opium and other narcotics which stand against the well being of the public, the peace and order of society, and unity and happiness of the home and the moral integrity of individuals, constitutes a force that the Church of Christ cannot tolerate even for a moment.

Whereas, the fight against such evils as that of opium and narcotics being the persistent attitude of the Methodist Episcopal Church all over the world in the past, the increased drug evil of the present time throws upon the Church additional responsibilities to perform.

Whereas, no satisfactory result could be expected in a fight against such a common evil like this without the co-operation of different nations involved, especially at the next meeting of the opium conference to be held under the auspices of the League of Nations, 1929, the action on the part of the Church to arouse and enlighten public opinion and to bring pressure to bear upon the respective Governments concerned is most necessary.

Let it be resolved that this Conference of the Methodist delegates of the world instruct its Committee on Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals to prepare a statement for adoption of this Conference at a later date, declaring that the General Conference of 1928 held in Kansas City, May 1-31st, representing some 32 nations of the civilized world, is in whole-hearted support of the proposal to limit the production of opium and other narcotics of the world to scientific and medicinal needs, and that it calls upon all Methodist Episcopal Churches throughout the world to petition and bring pressure to bear upon the next International Opium Conference of the League of Nations to be held in 1929, that a definite agreement be arrived at whereby all nations shall be required to limit the production of opium and narcotics of the world to scientific and medicinal needs.

NEBRASKA

J. R. Gettys presented the following resolution:

Whereas, There is most urgent need for spiritual awakening and religious development throughout the land, as evidenced by conditions that are apparent to every observer, and emphasized by the earnest utterances of business men, educators, statesmen and jurists; and

Whereas, The very life and prosperity of our country, and the safety of civilization depend upon the stability of our religious foundation and faith in God; and

Whereas, All that is vital and effective in Christian life and practice centers in the life and teachings of our Lord Jesus Christ, and believing that Easter time is a most suitable period to direct thought and increase devotion to Him; to call men to the recognition of spiritual values and the acknowledgment of individual responsibility; to give deeper meaning to religious faith; to win men to the Christian life, and to promote and strengthen the very fundamentals of civilization; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church assembled in Kansas City, Missouri, that the week preceding Easter shall be set apart each year, and be known as Passion Week, Holy Week, or Easter Week, and that appropriate religious services be held in all our churches and schools during said week; and that all social and other unnecessary activities cease during those days.

Resolved, That we respectfully, but urgently request all other organizations of our land, such as social clubs, study and culture clubs, dinner clubs, lodges, political organizations, public schools, so to plan their work for the year that they shall have no activities or gatherings during this particular week.

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves, our Bishops, our press, our pastors and our people to the accomplishment of this high and holy purpose; and to this end it is ordered that the Bishops schedule no Conferences for said week.

Resolved, That we invite all our sister denominations to take similar action, and co-operate fully in this worthy movement that the Kingdom of God may be more quickly and firmly established in the lives of men, that "His will be done on earth as it is in Heaven," and that society and civilization be more firmly established.

the active and inspiring leadership of one of the greatest and most nobly useful men that has ever served our group. Probably no servant of the Church has been more consistent in his teaching and living than has Bishop Thirkield, as he has served faithfully and lovingly the Negro race. His work for the Christian Education of our people in the South would alone make one of the most brilliant and significant chapters in our denominational history.

Gammon Theological Seminary, with her unexampled streams of gracious influence and power, with her vast and ever increasing ministry, must always be distinctly indebted to this great man. His service in behalf of our group, advocating our rights throughout all the vast domain of our country, will be cherished by us forever. The very sight of him has been a tonic and a challenge to us to live at our highest and best. Memory will hold the reflection of his noble face and hear the echo of his challenging voice and feel the tonic of his conquering spirit. He has made a definite contribution to the advancement, not only of the members of our group within the Church, but also to the educational, moral and religious life of our people without our fold and throughout the nation.

The memory of his ministrations and the inspiration of his leadership among us will not be forgotten, and will be influential with us and our work until the latest generation.

And now, after a lifetime spent in the devoted service of his Master, our friend will enter upon a well earned retirement. Those of us who know him, however, realize that his retirement will be far from a passive sinking into inaction. We rejoice that his life will probably be as active as ever, though unharassed by the administrative duties that go with the Episcopacy of our Church.

We shall always have an affection and warmth of heart for Bishop Thirkield as we remember his activities and interest in all things pertaining to the welfare of our group.

Whereas, by reason of an arbitrary time limit, Bishop Wilbur P. Thirkield will at this session of the General Conference retire from the administrative work of the Church; and

Whereas, he has given nearly fifty years of his remarkably fruitful life very largely to the work of our racial uplift; and

Whereas, in all his relations to our group he has entered sympathetically into the nobler aspirations of our people, stimulating us to lofty vision and high endeavor; and

Whereas, through the years he has always and everywhere, by tongue and pen, and with extraordinary courage, pled our cause and fought our battles; and

Whereas, as Resident Bishop among us, he has greatly endeared himself to us by his fatherly interest and stalwart stand for righteousness in his courageous utterance against crying evils of the day and the masterly manner in which he has acquitted himself as a minister of Jesus Christ and as a Bishop in the Methodist Episcopal Church; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we record and express our appreciation of his great life and highly effective labor in our midst.

Resolved, That we gratefully place upon record our appreciation of his interest in and contribution to the work of Inter-racial co-operation and good will.

Resolved, That we will follow him with our love and prayers as he goes into retirement and may the ancient promise, "At evening time it shall be light," he realized in his experience and in the experience of the noble woman who has walked with him through the year.

F. H. Otto Melle presented the following resolution:

Whereas, on June 17, 1928, it will be 225 years since John Wesley, the father of Methodism, was born; and

Celebration of Birthday of John Wesley.

Whereas, This General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, meeting in the year of 1928 in Kansas City, Missouri, represents a large body of Methodism, composed of 870 delegates from nearly all parts of the world; and

Whereas, Not only the millions of members and friends of the Methodist Episcopal Church, but also other denominations are looking to this General Conference with the expectation, that it may bring a new spiritual impetus; and

Whereas, The great work which God started by John Wesley from the beginning was a revival movement, laying stress on a personal experience of the salvation in Jesus Christ and on the task to save sinners and to spread scriptural holiness over the world; and

Whereas, There is a deep feeling in the Church, that the manifold problems which we are facing—the problem of leadership, of the finances, of the work of Foreign and Home Missions, of education, social reform and all the other activities of the kingdom of God—can only be solved, if the Lord will send us a new revival of the spiritual life; and

Whereas, We believe that the Lord of Hosts, whose we are and whom we serve, is willing to give such times of blessing again as in the days when Wesley and Whitefield preached the old Gospel with new tongues in England; or when Asbury and the fathers of the Methodist Episcopal Church kindled the revival fire in America; or in the time of Martin Luther and Calvin on the Continent of Europe or, farther off in the pentecostal years of the first Christians when the Lord added daily to them who were saved; be it Resolved, 1. That this General Conference appoint a special committee on the celebration of the 225th birthday anniversary of John Wesley and of a Call to the Church. The Committee, being nominated by the Bishops, and confirmed by the General Conference, shall consist of five Bishops, five ministers and five laymen, representing, if possible, different parts of the world.

2. That this Committee prepare, at an early date, a brief message to the Church with a call to celebrate on Sunday, June 17, 1928, the 225th birthday anniversary of John Wesley as a day of thanksgiving for the great work God has wrought in the past; for repentance about the sins and failures that hinder us to live and labor in the same power of the Spirit as our fathers; and of prayer that the Lord may cleanse us from our sins and give in this most critical period of history and turning point of the times, a new outpouring of the Holy Spirit. All pastors are asked to preach special sermons on the subject referring to the paramount task of Methodism at the present time.

3. That a copy of this resolution and of the Call of the Church be also sent by the Committee named in Item 1 to the Headquarters and to the leading papers of all the people called Methodists, inviting them to unite with us in this day of thanksgiving, repentance and prayer on Sunday, June 17, 1928, making it a day of prayer for all Methodism throughout the world, and

4. That this Committee prepare a special program for a devotional meeting of this General Conference on May the 24th, the day when 190 years ago Wesley felt his heart strangely warmed. This meeting shall be an hour of meditation, of repentance and intercession in remembrance of John Wesley and the great past of our Church and with a vision of the still greater works to be expected in the future.

On a question of privilege, E. D. Kohlstedt, for the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension, presented the following resolution, which, on his motion, was adopted:

David D.
Forsyth.

During the past quadrennium, the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church and connexional Methodism suffered a tragic loss in the death on November 8, 1926, of Dr. David D. Forsyth. In 1916, the Methodist Episcopal Church entrusted to Dr. Forsyth the exceedingly delicate and difficult task of reorganizing her home missionary activities. The critical problems to be faced during that quadrennium were multiplied by America's entrance into the World War. His period of service covered the trying years of that period and the era of reconstruction which followed. He guided the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension through the Centenary project with its vastly enlarged home missionary program. Never was there greater need for Christian statesmanship in the development of our Kingdom extension enterprises.

The Church's choice of Dr. Forsyth as our home missionary leader during this crucial period was truly providential. He had a keen, penetrating mind, which could see and analyze the new situations presented. He moved easily in a spacious world and dealt competently and constructively with great matters. He built wisely and securely. Furthermore, he was able to interest others, especially men of affairs who were accustomed to look ahead and plan for large achievements.

Coupled with Dr. Forsyth's ability to see was his willingness to do. He was a man of action, unafraid to venture into new and untried fields of Christian endeavor. He not only explored new avenues of service for the Church, but boldly led along lines of his explorations.

The vital personality of Dr. Forsyth constantly challenged others. He was a contagious leader, serving others by enlarging their vision, stimulating their faith and quickening their courage. It was a joy to work with him. Workers in every department of Home Missionary activity testify to their lasting indebtedness to Dr. David D. Forsyth.

The range of Dr. Forsyth's influence was not confined to the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension, nor even to the Methodist Episcopal Church, but went far afield into the entire life of the Church of Christian America and throughout the world. Although most intimately identified with the interests and activities of connexional Methodism, the character of Dr. Forsyth's Christian statesmanship was sufficiently broad and thorough to be readily recognized as of Inter-Church caliber. To him "Christianizing America" had become a consuming passion and he heartily welcomed every contribution, from whatever source or agency, toward the realization of that holy objective.

We hereby record our profound gratitude for and appreciation of the life, character and achievements of Dr. David D. Forsyth in advancing the work of the kingdom of God throughout the length and breadth of our land. His normal classification would readily rate him among the Nation's "Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog in public duty and in private thinking."

Whereas, the Methodist Episcopal Church was organized 1784, through the grace of God and the wisdom of John Wesley; and,

Whereas, Our fathers, meeting in that far away Christmas Conference in Lovely Lane Chapel, Baltimore, with wisdom, vision, and courage, laid the foundations of the Church whose growth to world-wide influence has magnified their faith and transformed prophecy into faith; and,

Whereas, we their children should hold in reverence and constant remembrance the days of old and the lives of our fathers in the faith; be it

Resolved, That we request the Bishops to appoint a Commission of Fifteen to plan and arrange for the suitable celebration during the year 1934 of the Sesqui-Centennial of the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church. That to this Commission be referred the valuable suggestions contained in the article in the current number of the Methodist Review by Doctor Alfred H. Backus; and all other suggestions that may be forthcoming, and that the Commission report its recommendations to the next General Conference in 1932.

FOURTH DAY.

George Elliott presented the following resolution, and, on his motion, it was adopted:

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church presents this Memorial tribute to Doctor William Valentine Kelley, for twenty-six years a Methodist pastor of educational power and evangelistic passion, and for twenty-seven years the able editor of the Methodist Review, the oldest of all American Methodist periodicals. Through all these years he became one of the most brilliant writers of our Church, whose books of literary beauty and spiritual influence will continue to be among the most valuable of all our publications.

Above all, he was a great heart in Christian friendship and benevolent activity. We offer this tribute with precious memory of the past, with continued love in the present and a holy hope for a glorious fellowship in the future.

J. R. Chitambar presented the following resolution, which, on his motion, was adopted :

Whereas, Our beloved Bishop Francis W. Warne has rendered forty years of service in India and by his ministry has reached and blessed many thousands of the people of that land; and

Whereas, His Spirit-filled life and the quality of his teaching has so exalted our Saviour and faithfully presented the character of our Divine Master as to lead multitudes into the blessed life and the deepest experiences of spiritual things; and,

Whereas, In his passion for the Kingdom, he has been glad to spend and be spent for the humblest and poorest in the land; and,

Whereas, Pentecostal power has been repeatedly manifested in response to prayer and under his preaching, and God has wonderfully honored his ministry through the years; and,

Whereas, The name of Bishop Warne has become a household word among our people in India and he has the love and confidence of many thousands of members of other churches and of those without; and,

Whereas, By his books, as well as by his preaching, he has sought to reveal the covenant-keeping God and the sinless incarnation, and will doubtless continue this service after retirement; be it

Resolved, That we as a General Conference express our sincere affection for Bishop Warne and our cordial appreciation of his long and fruitful service, his devotion to his Saviour and his beautiful Christian character.

Resolved, That we appreciate the coming of this Convention to the shores of America, and pledge ourselves as a Church to exert an effort to make this Convention count for the most in the interests of the kingdom of God.

H. G. LANGLEY.

NEW YORK

Chester A. Smith presented the following resolution :

Whereas, There has not been a revision of our Methodist Hymnal and the responsive scripture readings since 1905; and,

Recognition of Bishop Warne's Retirement.

World's Sunday School Convention.

Hymnal and Responsive Readings.

Whereas, in the years intervening since that time there has been a great change in the thought of Christian people upon many subjects such as war, the liquor traffic, world service, and social service, so that the Hymnal does not now contain hymns representing the most progressive thought of Methodists or of Christians generally upon such subjects; and,

Whereas, This ought not to be, music having played an important part in the spread of Methodism and being still a powerful agent for stirring the emotions and the will; therefore,

Resolved, That the Board of Bishops be authorized to appoint a Commission to revise the Hymnal and the responsive scripture readings; that they request the General Conference of the Methodist Church, South, in 1930, to appoint a commission to serve with our commission as a joint commission in this matter; but failing in this, the members of our commission be authorized to proceed with the revision of our Hymnal and report the same to the General Conference of 1932.

Resolved, That we request such commission to omit from the new Hymnal any hymns that seem to exalt war, and to include therein hymns which exalt peace and social service; and to include in the responsive readings passages from the New Testament.

J. L. Hillman moved that this resolution be referred to the Committee on Book Concern.

Secretary Wade moved to amend by referring the resolution to the Committee on State of the Church. The amendment prevailed. The motion to refer was adopted, as amended.

MAY 4

OHIO

E. H. Cherrington presented the following resolution, and, obedient to his motion, the same was adopted:

Party Conventions and Prohibition.

Whereas, The organized enemies of prohibition have not only attacked the principle of sobriety but with unprecedented boldness have challenged the authority of law, have defied the government, are advocating sedition and anarchy in the form of nullification of the Constitution itself, and have held up to ridicule and contempt those principles of righteousness and social justice for which the Church stands; and,

Whereas, These same forces of greed and appetite have seemingly centered their efforts upon the next presidential election in the evident hope of placing in the Executive Mansion at Washington a president of the United States who will do their bidding; and,

Whereas, The next president of the United States, as the chief enforcement officer of the Nation, will have largely in his hands the appointment of the heads of all departments under the executive division of the federal government, District Attorneys, United States Marshals, Judges of the District and Circuit Courts and possibly a majority of the members of the Supreme Court of the United States, all Ministers, Envoys, Consuls, and Special Representatives of this Nation to all other countries of the world, as well as many thousands of other important appointive officers; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church most respectfully requests each of the conventions of the political parties, soon to meet, to write into its platform a plank committing that party and its candidate to the strict enforcement of the 18th amendment and the national prohibitory law, as well as all other provisions of the Constitution and laws of the Nation, and requests that each such party convention nominate for president and vice-president, only men whose records and attitudes will guarantee the people administration and enforcement of the prohibition statutes.

Resolved, further, That there be elected a committee of five Bishops of the Church, to be nominated by the Board of Bishops, which committee shall personally convey this request to the platform committee of each of the party conventions.

Resolved, further, That this General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church serve notice, here and now, to all concerned, that the Church cannot be lulled into silence or inactivity by evasive promises, indecisive declarations or uncertain candidates for either executive or legislative offices in the States and the Nation. We insist that at this crucial time all charged with responsibility in legislative halls and executive offices should be men who believe in the law and are devoted to the principle which the law represents.

And that regardless of time and effort required, we are determined in every proper way to continue, aggressively and unfalteringly, to prosecute righteous warfare to the complete extermination of the outlawed beverage liquor traffic.

ERNEST H. CHERRINGTON.

In the Washington Conference delegation sits the senior member of this General Conference.

He is not only the senior member of the body, but has been connected with our Boards as an officer for thirty-one years.

The memory of Black Harry and John Stewart and others of our group is precious to Methodism and now that a man of our race has reached seniority in the service of this distinguished body, we wish to pause long enough to make record of the same and request the General Conference to permit at this time the introduction of the senior member of this body.

The fourth call of the Conferences was begun.

CENTRAL MISSOURI

B. F. Abbott presented the following resolution, which, on motion of L. H. King, was adopted:

Whereas, In the passing of Bishop William Alfred Quayle during the past quadrennium, the world became poorer and the struggling peoples of the world have lost a friend and a brother indeed; therefore, before the last word of testimony is given and the volume closed on the life of this great and good man, we beg to be allowed to drop this word of appreciation of the life, labors and love of our friend beloved. He loved folk, lowly folk, handicapped folk, folk with little chance—even black folk, and they in turn loved him.

Bishop Quayle.

During the days of the public career of Bishop William Alfred Quayle the Negro race needed a friend at the bar of public opinion and he came to the Kingdom for such a time and became our good angel to plead our cause on the platform and in the press and always compelled a hearing. He was brave and courageous, never afraid to speak out. Attacks and oppositions made him more daring.

When the East Saint Louis race riot scattered to the four corners of the earth thousands of Negroes without homes and without hope, it was this good man that came forward with an article in the daily press of Saint Louis on "Validating American Citizenship," which helped to clear the atmosphere and give to us hope, and indicated to the frightened, scattered and discouraged group that a friend had spoken that could be approached and counseled and he became their Counsellor in that hour.

We appreciated him and loved him and we tried to tell him so to the last hour, in the best way we knew how. When he came among us the crowds came to wait upon his ministry for his message and counsel in our Y. W. C. A.'s, in our Y. M. C. A.'s and in our churches. While he lingered in "Dream Haven" sick, a group of Negro friends of Saint Louis sent to him by telegram at stated times a pot of lilies as an expression of devotion to our friend. Because we loved him in life and we remember and love him though dead; therefore, be it Resolved, That our testimony of appreciation and love for him, and the helpfulness and enrichment of life from him to us be recorded in the record of the General Conference.

Resolved, further, That the General Conference do now express in the adoption of these resolutions, by a rising vote, its sympathy and very best regards to Mrs. Quayle and others of the family.

CENTRAL PENNSYLVANIA

A. Lawrence Miller presented the following resolution, and, on his motion, it was adopted:

Recognition of
H. T. Ames.

Whereas, A single rose of appreciation given to the living is better than a whole bouquet given to the dead; and,

Whereas, In the membership of the General Conference sits one who has given a multitude of years not only to the promotion of the manifold activities of our beloved Methodism, but also to the promotion of temperance reform and that, too, a long time before this movement had attained its nation-wide popularity, when its espousal called for a high order of moral courage; and,

Whereas, In common with other men of light and leading he made valuable contribution of practical suggestion that led to the creation of our aggressive Board of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals, whose sane and intelligent militancy has placed Methodism in the forefront of this "Battle of the Ages"; and,

Whereas, Like Caleb of old, who passing three score years and ten, instead of asking for honorable retirement asked for a mountain full of enemies that he might subdue it, so this our Caleb, having passed his three score years and ten, joined battle for law enforcement last Fall in his home city, Williamsport, Pa., one of the large inland cities of the Keystone Commonwealth and now wears modestly the title of Mayor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this General Conference salutes and congratulates Herbert T. Ames, for the ninth time a lay delegate from Central Pennsylvania to your Conference, known to many as Judge Ames, and to others more latterly as Mayor Ames, and prays there may be given added years to his useful life as churchman, citizen, Christian.

DELAWARE

D. H. Hargis presented the following resolution:

Use of Cigarettes.

Whereas, The use of cigarettes by almost all classes and ages has spread with alarming rapidity, affecting not only the life of young men, but particularly the life of young women to the extent that it is becoming a popular fad among the fairer sex.

Whereas, All scientific medical authority of the highest rank and leading Athletic Directors throughout the land advise almost unanimously against the harmful physical and mental effects resulting from the practice of this pernicious habit.

Resolved, That it be the sense of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church that it most heartily registers its disapproval of the manufacture, sale and use of this obnoxious weed.

Resolved, That we most emphatically condemn the persistent use of this poisonous narcotic on the part of any, but especially of women, as a travesty against Christian womanhood.

D. H. HARGIS.

Objection was made to immediate consideration, but by vote of the Conference, permission to consider was granted.

Wallace H. Finch moved to refer the resolution to the Committee on State of the Church.

E. L. Kidney offered a substitute motion that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals, and by vote the substitute displaced the original motion. The motion thus substituted later prevailed.

Herbert H. Wilson presented the following resolution, which, on his motion, was adopted:

Resolved, That we recognize with great pleasure the presence in this General Conference of Mrs. M. A. R. Camphor, as a member of the delegation from the Delaware Conference.

Mrs. Camphor is the widow of the late Bishop Camphor. We honor her for her life in the Mission field and the Episcopal residence in Africa, and in the place she has made for herself in the life of the Church.

In harmony with the resolution just approved, Mrs. M. A. R. Camphor addressed the Conference.

ERIE

J. E. Roberts offered the following resolution, and, on his motion, it was adopted:

Methodism from the beginning has depended for much of its power and success upon its consecrated laymen who have given leadership to the Church and service to God.

Since the last General Conference a lay leader has fallen, whose home was within the bounds of Erie Conference, but whose heart took in the world, and whose gifts to missions and education knew no territorial bounds.

He was widely known in Methodism, a member of five General Conferences, a member of the Board of Foreign Missions, a member of the Executive Committee of that Board, a man of keen judgment, wise counsel and untiring service.

His was a Christian faith that made his death not merely a time to mourn a loss, but rather a time to celebrate a triumph. Therefore, be it Resolved, That in the death of Dr. Charles Edgar Welch, of Westfield, New York, the Church at large has lost a man who lived to serve, who earned to give, who worked to win in the cause of his divine Master, and that we as a General Conference record our appreciation for the seeds of influence he has planted in the harvest fields of the world.

Arlo A. Brown presented the following resolution, which, on his motion, was adopted:

Whereas, The Southern States of this Nation face a herculean task in the effort to overcome illiteracy and to give to every child equality of educational opportunity irrespective of geographic, economic or social conditions; and,

ARLO A. BROWN, R. N. MERRILL,

HARRY L. UPPERMAN,

ILLINOIS

A. M. Wells introduced the following question:

Judicial Questions.

"Is it proper for the Lay Electoral Conference to elect to the office of Chairman or Secretary persons who are not members of that body?"

On motion, this question was referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

Secretary Wade, on a question of privilege, presented certain questions, which had been automatically referred to the Committee on Judiciary and returned by that Committee to the General Conference for formal action. They are as follows:

A—The Judiciary Committee is requested by L. L. Loofbouroow to interpret paragraph 172 of the Discipline (1924)

1. When a minister has surrendered his credentials and has presented a statement to an Annual Conference recording his purpose to withdraw from the ministry, and the Conference has concluded its action thereon, may the minister so withdrawing allege at a subsequent time that his withdrawal was for the purpose of joining the ministry of another church, and, upon the basis of such allegation, demand the return of his credentials?

2. When a minister presents his credentials to an Annual Conference alleging his purpose to join the ministry of another church, must he support his allegations of purpose by evidence of the readiness of another church to receive him into its ministry?

B—The California Conference delegation desires to submit to the Judiciary Committee the following statement and question for decision:

Statement—In the California Conference delegation to the General Conference of 1928 D. O. Colegrove was elected third in the delegation, As he has withdrawn from the ministry, the first alternate, J. H. N. Williams, becomes a member of the delegation.

Question—Does J. H. N. Williams take the place of D. O. Colegrove as third on the delegation, or do the members elected after D. O. Colegrove step up, and J. H. N. Williams take the last (sixth) place on the delegation?

From the California delegation (Ministerial) has gone forward to your Committee a question as to where a "Reserve Delegate" who takes the place of a Delegate in the General Conference will sit in the delegation.

Being the Reserve Delegate in question, I submit the following: D. O. Colegrove was elected "third" in the election. He has withdrawn from the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church. I was elected the "First Reserve Delegate," and take the position that I automatically take the place of the delegate withdrawn. Some of the delegation take the position that I was elected "Seventh" in the order and automatically come in at the "foot" of the delegation, while the others "move up," thus making the Reserve Delegate the "sixth" in order of seating. I suggested submitting the question to your Committee.

I take the ground that a "Reserve Delegate" not only automatically takes the place of a Delegate who will not and cannot attend, but that the records of the Annual Conference show that "so and so" went in the place of "so and so," and that such establishes the precedent on which my claim is based; that I am not a "seventh" delegate (there being only six delegates) but the "First Reserve Delegate" chosen to take the place of any delegate who may not be able to attend the General Conference.

This is submitted in a friendly way to the Committee on Judiciary with the hope that an answer will be early given.

JAMES H. N. WILLIAMS.

These questions, after reading, were, on motion of Secretary Wade, referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

NEW YORK

Carl H. Fowler presented the following resolution:

Whereas, The Broadway Temple is now being erected in New York as a Methodist Church with one of the largest auditoriums in the City, and is to have a modern plant fully equipped for all kinds of social service throughout the community, and with apartment homes for hundreds of families resident therein, and that it is expected that the Temple Building will ultimately provide an annual income of approximately $200,000 that will be available for Christian work throughout the New York area; and,

Whereas, The Broadway Temple has been recognized as a project of great importance to Methodism in the New York Area, and as such has been endorsed by the Bishop, and by the Area Council, and by the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension, by the New York City Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, by the New York Conference, by the Laymen's Association and by other Methodist bodies having official relation thereto and the Methodist laymen throughout the New York Area have united in large numbers in its support; and,

Whereas, Two of the three units of Broadway Temple have already been completed at an expenditure of approximately $4,000,000, and there is now at this time being conducted in the New York Area a campaign to raise $1,500,000 for the completion of the entire enterprise and the inauguration of its full program of service, and meetings are being held this week and during this month for that purpose; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in General Conference assembled, do hereby express our sympathy with and cordial approval of this great undertaking of Methodism in the New York Area, and that we do hereby extend to the pastor and officials of Broadway Temple, and to the friends from other churches, and from other denominations that are aiding in its success our sincere hopes and prayers that their plans may be successfully consummated and the Broadway Temple completed without delay, and that its full program of service to humanity and of worship to God may be established, prospered and made a blessing to the entire spiritual life of that metropolitan area.

Secretary Wade announced that reports were ready from certain Standing Committees, and F. M. Stephenson moved that the call of the Conferences be temporarily suspended for the presentation of these reports. The motion did not prevail.

NEW YORK EAST

Frank A. Horne presented the following resolution, which, on his motion, was adopted.

Tribute to Henry Wade
Rogers.

The death of Judge Henry Wade Rogers during the past quadrennium calls for grateful recognition and expression of great loss by this General Conference.

For many sessions a delegate to the General Conference, he served as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee for five successive Conferences with such rare distinction that his singular qualifications for this position by common consent gave him a life tenure.

The delegates of the New York East Conference propose that the General Conference, by rising vote, expresses its high valuation of the life and character of Judge Rogers and the great obligation of the Methodist Episcopal Church for his masterful services as an outstanding jurist and noble Christian layman.

FRANK A. HORNE.

After Herbert T. Ames and Thomas A. Holgate paid appropriate tributes to Judge Henry Wade Rogers, J. R. Gettys moved to suspend temporarily the call of the Conferences for consideration of the reports from Standing Committees.

J. J. Henry moved to place on the table the motion to suspend the call, and this motion prevailed.

NORTH CHINA

J. M. Pyke presented the following resolution, and, on his motion, it was adopted, with instructions to print in the General Conference Journal and The Daily Christian Advocate:

Recognition of Bishop Grose.

The North China Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church wishes to express to the parent Church in America its deep appreciation of the services of Bishop George R. Grose during the past quadrennium.

At a time when a falling income from the Board of Foreign Missions, and disturbed political conditions have made the task so difficult as to tax the limit of human endurance, we have been peculiarly grateful for his wise and fearless leadership. His life amongst us has been a perpetual challenge to the best there is in us, and while we believe that the trend of development is in the direction of a Chinese General Superintendency, as indicated in the East Asia Conference, we wish the parent Church to know that as long as Western leadership is necessary or expedient, Bishop Grose is welcome to our midst.

Whereas, One of the most distinguished sons of Ohio Methodism, Senator Frank B. Whereas, Senator Willis, a member of Asbury Church, Delaware, Ohio, within the bounds of the North-East Ohio Conference, was also one of the thirty members of the Control Commission of the Reorganized Men's Movement of Methodism, who when invited by the Board of Education to such membership replied, "If Methodism is ready to tackle its man problem in earnest, I am ready to co-operate," and who had accepted an invitation to speak at the Laymen's Banquet in connection with our World Men's Council, to be held here in Convention Hall next week; therefore, be it

Resolved, (1) That we express our sense of loss in the passing of Senator Willis from among us, and are gratified to learn that a fitting memorial service is to be held in connection with the dinner program of the Laymen's Banquet at Ivanhoe Temple, this city, on Friday evening, May 11.

Secretary Wade, on a question of privilege, presented the following statement and asked for the incorporation of the same in the record of to-day's proceedings:

Correction
Journal 1924.

For the sake of historical accuracy, permit me to read into the Minutes the fact that in The Daily Christian Advocate of May 29, 1924, as well as in the Journal of the General Conference of May 28, 1924, the presentation of the report of the Committee on Lay Representation is credited to L. M. Parker, whereas that record should read Edward C. Page.

Privilege to insert was granted.

Report of Commission
of Nine.

Secretary Wade, on a further question of privilege, presented the following report from the Commission of Nine on World Service Legislation, and announced its reference to the Committee on Temporal Economy:

THE REPORT OF THE COMMISSION OF NINE

The Commission of Nine was appointed by the World Service Commission at the direction of the General Conference of 1924, "to study the needs of further reorganization and closer co-operation of the constituent boards; such report to be reviewed by the World Service Commission and sent to the next General Conference." The commission of nine, therefore, having in mind the consolidation of benevolence boards accomplished by the General Conference of 1924, finds the possible field of further consolidation limited to the Board of Pensions and Relief, the Board of Hospitals, Homes, and Deaconess Work, and the Board of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals. It recognizes, at the same time, the existence of widespread questioning throughout the Church at large, as to the advisability of continuing these as separate boards among the World Service activities.

The Commission of Nine, accordingly, recommends that, in the event of the inauguration of the new plan of the Board of Pensions and Relief, the operating expenses of the said board shall be provided out of its own funds; such action rendering the Board of Pensions and Relief independent of the co-operating administrative staff. Pending the complete operation of the Reservation Pension Plan, if and when it shall be adopted, provision shall be made for the administrative work of the Board, as needed, as a preferential consideration by the Committee of Budgets, Ratios and Askings, or its successor.

In respect of the Board of Hospitals, Homes, and Deaconess Work, and the Board of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals, the Commission of Nine wishes to be understood as in no way depreciating the fullest exploration by the General Conference of the possibilities of further consolidation and reorganization; but it finds itself unable, at the present time, to recommend such consolidation or reorganization.

Concerning the World Service Commission and its operations, the Commission of Nine makes the following recommendations:

1. Pastors and officials shall constantly emphasize through the Church and in the mind of our membership, that effective and wisely directed administration of our benevolences depends upon their securing the largest possible amount of undesignated funds to be distributed among the constituent Boards.

2. The World Service Commission shall determine each year the amount which shall be asked of the Church for the support of the work of each of the constituent Boards. The ratio of the amount of this authorized asking for any Board to the total approved askings for all the Boards shall determine the percentage of the distribution of undesignated funds to that Board.

3. Total undesignated receipts for World Service, together with funds raised by the Parish Plan for work at home or abroad, shall be distributed among the several Boards in accordance with the ratios fixed by the World Service Commission in agreement with the preceding paragraph.

4. Gifts designated by individual donors to specific objects under any World Service Board shall be applied directly to the objects designated, and shall not be shared in any proportionate distribution among the several Boards. But no church, pastor, treasurer, official board, or other groups shall designate or report as designated, money which has been contributed without designation by the donors.

5. Credit shall be given to the local church on its apportionment for all payments to World Service, either undesignated or designated to specific objects included in the program and budget of any World Service Board, except for moneys received from bequests or estate notes, or subject to an annuity contract.

6. Annuities and bequests shall be acknowledged by what shall be known as an "Honor Voucher" and shall be listed in an additional World Service column in the Conference Minutes headed, "Annuities and Bequests."

7. The World Service Commission shall be authorized to set aside out of undesignated moneys an equalization fund for relief of any board which, through shortage of income, is suffering hardship, it being understood that such relief is in nature of aid to meet a bona fide necessity; any unused portion of such fund to be returned for distribution at the end of the year, according to the established ratio.

8. The Commission of Nine feels very strongly that, in view of the changes in names and organizations in our benevolence activities during the past twelve years, further readjustment should be kept to the minimum compatible with effective service; while, at the same time, the reduction of personnel should not deprive the Boards of their representative and democratic character. It feels, also, that with the constituent Boards left free to promote their own special causes throughout the Church at large, and to make their distinctive appeals to the churches, there will still be the necessity for a separate and authoritative agency to determine the ratio of distribution of the undesignated benevolence funds to the respective Boards, to decide questions affecting the common policy on which the Boards are not able to agree, and to guard our constituency from the unhappy results of too eager competition among the Boards in the presentation of their financial appeals.

Disregarding the expense of promotion, literature, etc., which the constituent Boards would have borne if it had not been a charge against the World Service Commission, the cost of the World Service Commission, compared to the value of the services rendered, such as have been suggested, has been notably low. For the third World Service year, ending May 31, 1926, the total cost of the World Service Commission's annual meeting, the meetings of its executive committee, the salary of the executive secretary and his secretarial force and office, was $15,308. Small as this is, the Commission of Nine is, nevertheless, persuaded that the operating expense can be still further reduced with no loss of effectiveness in the service to be rendered, by reducing the size of the World

G. W. Reed presented the following resolution of request, which was adopted, and the subject matter contained therein referred to the Commission on General Conference Entertainment:

The undersigned delegates to the Conference, seated in several rows at the rear of Convention Hall, respectfully and earnestly represent that, though sent here by their respective Conferences to take part in the business of the Conference, and to represent, as far as they may, the aspirations, the opinions, and the loyalty of their respective constituents, yet have found themselves so situated as to be unable to follow, with any satisfaction or continuity, the business and proceedings of the Conference, and are personally deprived of the inspiration and satisfaction of the thoughts and opinions and proposals of the fathers and the leaders of the Church.

We, therefore, urgently request that some arrangement, by re-seating, or otherwise, be made, to the end that we may become, in fact, a part of the Conference, and be enabled to hear its proceedings and to take a part in its deliberations.

Restriction of Immigration.

Whereas, We believe that the application of this policy to all nations on a quota basis is not only just and fair, but also productive of peace and good will among the nations; and,

Whereas, There are certain groups and nations to whom this policy of restricted immigration does not apply, according such groups and nations such treatment that is invidious, un-American and un-Christian; and,

Whereas, The acquiescence of Christians in such treatment is a negation of the spirit of Christ and the claims of the universal brotherhood, to proclaim which missionaries of our Church are sent to these countries; be it

Resolved, That we urge all Christian citizens to unite in removing, as soon as possible, such legislation that restricts immigration and the rights of citizenship on grounds of race and color.

Whereas, In their masterful and statesmanlike Quadrennial Address to the General Conference submitted on the morning of May 2, 1928, our Bishops pointed out the fact that although the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church had increased 137,884 during the years 1923, 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927, the Sunday school enrollment during the same years had suffered a decrease of 223,601; and,

Whereas, It is a well known fact that we can have the largest opportunity to lead into the Church and the Christian Life the children of our constituency only when we have the largest possible co-operation from the adults in that same constituency; and,

D. F. Helms presented the following resolution, which on his motion, was adopted:

Presentation of Mrs. Nicholson and
Mrs. Goode.

Methodism is justly proud of its more than two-score women delegates in this General Conference. Many of these fill places of responsibility and leadership in our Church, and represent the great host of loyal, consecrated women in all our churches.

One of the largest contributions womanhood is making to the progress of the Church and the weal of the world is by means of the two Women's Missionary Societies. The presidents of both these organizations are members of this body—Mrs. Thomas Nicholson, of the Detroit delegation, president of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and Mrs. W. H. C. Goode, the fourth time a delegate from the West Ohio Conference, president of the Woman's Home Missionary Society. Under the leadership of these splendid women these two societies have increased their giving nearly two million dollars during the quadrennium, and that in the face of decreasing receipts for other benevolent boards.

The success of these societies is due, in large measure, to the capable and inspiring leadership of these two noble women. In grateful appreciation for such distinguished service, therefore, be it

Resolved, That in recognition of the remarkable achievements of these two societies, and of the wise and noteworthy leadership of Mrs. Thomas Nicholson and Mrs. W. H. C. Goode, these two elect women be escorted to the platform and be presented to the Conference.

Edwin F. Lee presented the following resolution, which, on his motion, was adopted:

Recognition
of Bishop Oldham's Retirement.

Forty-three years ago, a young missionary, W. F. Oldham, and his wife landed in Singapore, commissioned by Bishop Hurst on the advice of Bishop Thoburn, to begin the task of planting the symbol of the Cross in the hearts of men and women at the crossroads of the Far East. This work was so well done that the following years have seen far-reaching Christian influences brought to bear upon a strangely cosmopolitan group, who have in this island world learned of the universal appeal of the Christian message.

Later eight vigorous years of episcopal administration were given to this Malaysian field by Bishop Oldham, which, added to his initial contribution, have written his name large in the history of the land.

Malaysia, therefore, begs the privilege of sharing with South America, India, and the United States, in expression of abiding gratitude and affection for Bishop William F. Oldham, upon this the period of his retirement. Truly this is a retirement from active service throughout the wide world. It is our earnest prayer that both he and Mrs. Oldham may have many years of happy relief from the unusual pressure of responsibilities which have been so long and so faithfully carried, but that the Bishop's magnetic voice may long continue to be heard. It is therefore Resolved, That this word of appreciation be made a part of the permanent record and that the General Conference, by a standing vote, register the gratitude of the entire Church for a life of such singular devotion to our Lord, and of such high service to our Methodist Episcopal Church.

After appropriate tributes to Bishop Oldham had been offered by Robert Elphick, W. C. Hartinger, and A. A. Parker, Bishop and Mrs. W. F. Oldham were presented to the Conference and Bishop Oldham spoke appropriately.

E. S. Tipple presented the following resolution, which, on his motion, was adopted:

The representatives of the New York Area request, for themselves and for the people whom they represent, the privilege and honor of voicing to this General Conference, and to the entire Church, their unstinted affection for Bishop Luther B. Wilson and their grateful acknowledgment of his most acceptable and notable administration of the many activities of the New York Area during the past sixteen years.

A book recently published was dedicated "To those who have failed." At no time in his life could Bishop Wilson have been included in such a group. In his long and fruitful ministry, in the office of chief pastor, in his episcopal administration of the New York Area Bishop Wilson, like Hercules, of whom it was recorded that whether he stood or sat or walked or whatever he did, he conquered, has achieved success.

The years of his general superintendency have been in the most amazing, tragic and momentous quarter of a century of recorded history, in which have been compressed the passing of one age and the birth of another.

"Not since Christ died upon his lonely cross
Has time such prospect held of Life's new birth;
Not since the world of chaos first was born
Has man so clearly visaged hope of a new earth."

And during these fateful years he has spoken with the vision and voice of a prophet; toiled as seeing Him who is invisible, and ventured with the sure confidence of one who walked with God. With profound gratitude, we would bear witness to his genius for spiritual leadership.

The tasks to which spiritual leaders are summoned are so divine, so vast, so awesome in their possibilities, influencing characters, determining eternal doctrines, working upon and with souls that are immortal, holding steady trembling, staggering men and women, tormented by fears, bewildered by prosperity, sorrow or adversity, keeping Hope alive in hearts where Despair would reign instead, opening the wicket gate to weary pilgrims at the end of the long journey. These tasks were so overwhelmingly great that only a Godlike man dare attempt them, and as Bishop Wilson has dwelt among us these sixteen years, has talked with us and walked with us, and counseled with us, we have ever seen among us one like unto the Son of Man.

Having heard the Episcopal Address which was written by Bishop Wilson, you also have seen and know this great servant of God and the Church.

And today, standing at attention, we salute him in Christ's dear name, and now and always will bless God for his brotherliness, his wisdom, his inexhaustible patience, his kindness, his chivalrous magnanimity at all times and under all circumstances, his urbanity and poise, his quiet massive strength, his loyalty to the Gospel, to the nation, to the Church, to his task and for his unfeigned love for us all.

E. T. Mowbray presented the following resolution, embodying a recent action of the Baltimore Conference, and, on his motion, it was approved:

Baltimore Conference
Tribute to Bishop Wilson.

And what shall we say of our very own brother, friend and governor, the gracious, capable, wise and affectionate Bishop Luther Barton Wilson, D.D.? The pleasure of his visit is only shaded by the thought that in the flight of time, the period of his allotted services as a Chief Pastor in the effective relation, shall by the law of the Church be terminated. We are grateful for the privilege of fellowship with him—but we are hoping and expecting, that at the end of his officially effective days, he may come back to the home of his childhood—to the sacred ashes of his ancestors—aye to those that rest in a certain chamber whose name is peace, that he may be given long years of surcease from toil, before the end of the road. We thank him for his public speech, for his social fellowship, as well as for those intimate official relations performed with the aid of his advisors, the District Superintendents, in determining and fixing the appointments, upon all of which we pray the blessing of God.

In consonance with these resolutions Bishop and Mrs. L. B. Wilson were presented to the Conference and Bishop Wilson made appropriate remarks.

Hymn 556, beginning, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds," was sung, and prayer was offered by Bishop John W. Hamilton.

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, on a question of privilege, presented the following resolution, which, on motion of G. W. Crabbe, was adopted:

Payment World Service Funds.

Whereas, May 31 marks the conclusion of the Fourth World Service Year; and,

Whereas, The needs of the World Work of our Church are so continuous and so urgent; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the General Conference urges that an earnest endeavor be made in each local church to collect all unpaid subscriptions and that all World Service Funds on hand in the local church be remitted so as to reach the office of the World Service Treasurer, 740 Rush Street, Chicago, Illinois, before May 31st.

Secretary Wade, for the World Service Commission, presented the following Minute, which, on his motion, was referred to the Committee on Temporal Economy:

Stewardship
Movement.

Because we agree with the Episcopal address that the building of a Stewardship Church is a vital factor in the success of any missionary or educational program; therefore, we recommend to the World Service Commission that the stewardship department be granted a larger financial support.

We see no way of realizing the hope expressed by the Bishops that the General Conference discover a plan for a more largely organized stewardship movement that will not involve the granting of larger resources to the stewardship leaders.

We suggest reference to the Committee on Temporal Economy.

World Service Commission
Recommendations.

Secretary Wade, for the World Service Commission, presented the following Minute, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Temporal Economy, which motion prevailed:

"Because of the continued changes which must inevitably come in the number and forms of organizations entrusted with and promoting the benevolent causes of the Church, it would seem wise that the World Service Commission, or some other authorized body, should be charged by the General Conference with the duty of building up a central permanent fund, the income of which should be used for the general advancement of the extension work of the Church, or be applied to any specific purpose designated by the donor."

The above recommendation was approved by the World Service Commission at its annual meeting June 28, 1927, and is hereby submitted by the request of the Commission to the consideration of the General Conference.

MAY 9
NINTH DAY.
Morning.

The Executive Committee of the World Service Commission at its meeting on April 5, 1927, recommended that a memorial be submitted to the General Conference providing for a uniform fiscal year for local churches and for the benevolent Boards and so far as may be for other organizations throughout the Church. The Executive Committee also suggested that the dates to be selected for such uniform fiscal year be June 1 to May 31 of each year.

This Committee hereby submits the above suggestion to the General Conference with approval, believing that the authorization of a common fiscal year throughout the Church would not only be of untold value to the benevolent causes, but to the local church as well. For reasons supporting the above conclusion, we would refer the General Conference to a pamphlet published by the World Service Agencies called "The World Service Roll Call and the Every Member Canvass," pp. 5 and 6.

We suggest reference to the Committee on Temporal Economy.

Bishop A. W. Leonard, on a question of privilege, presented a report from the Commission on Social Service Activities, authorized by the General Conference of 1924, which report is printed on page 227 of The Daily Christian Advocate, and, on motion of Secretary Wade, this report was referred to the Committee on State of the Church.

Ray Allen, on a question of privilege, presented the following Minute, which, on his motion, was adopted:

Right to Vote on Constitutional Questions.

"The General Conference of 1924, on May 26, inadvertently adopted Report 27 of the Committee on Itinerancy, professedly permitting ministerial members of Mission Conferences to vote on Constitutional questions, and as a result of such action several Mission Conferences have so voted and the Secretary of the General Conference has reported their votes.

But since Article II of the constitution clearly provides that Constitutional questions shall be voted upon by members of the Annual Conferences, and by members of the Lay Electoral Conferences, therefore this action of the General Conference of 1924 is of no authority and the Secretary of the General Conference is hereby directed to discontinue reporting any such votes from Mission Conferences."

On motion, the time was extended.

Committee on Credentials.

L. M. Potter, Chairman of the Committee on Credentials, presented the following report, which, on his motion, was adopted:

LOUIS M. POTTER, Chairman,
J. R. GETTYS, Secretary.

Secretary Wade moved that the action taken this morning in adopting the Minute presented by Ray Allen, concerning voting on Constitutional questions by ministerial members of Mission Conferences, be incorporated in the Journal for 1928, for the purpose of correcting an error in the Journal of 1924, and this motion prevailed.

I have the honour to introduce to you the Rev. T. Ferrier Hulme, M.A., LL.D., an ex-President of the British Conference, who has been appointed as our Fraternal Delegate to your General Conference now meeting in Kansas City. For many years Dr. Hulme has been one of the outstanding Ministers of the Free Churches in Great Britain as well as one of the most beloved and honoured brethren in our own ranks. No one could be found more worthy to bring you the affectionate greetings of the Mother Church of Methodism.

Dr. Hulme is a winsome and vivacious personality in whom deep spirituality and evangelistic passion blend with sound scholarship and gay humour. His successful ministry in great cities, particularly in the City of Bristol, redolent of the memories of John and Charles Wesley, his ardent enthusiasm on behalf of young people, and his sympathetic and affectionate oversight of Village Churches combine to mark him out as in every respect suitable for the high and honourable mission which he now comes to fulfill.

The warmth of affection with which you have received our Fraternal Delegate in past years inspires the confidence that a most cordial welcome awaits Dr. Hulme. Not only have we this assurance, but we believe that our brother will be the bearer of a message that will enrich your Assembly and be worthy of the Church which he represents.

With fervent prayers that the blessing of God may rest upon all your deliberations, I am

REPORTS OF THE WORLD SERVICE COMMISSION ON PROGRAM OF BENEVOLENT ACTIVITIES FOR THE COMING QUADRENNIUM

NO. 1

The Annuity business of the various institutions and agencies of the Methodist Episcopal Church has already attained to large proportions and is likely to experience a prodigious growth in the years that are to come. This important phase of the business life of our Church should therefore have the most careful supervision and management, representing, as it does, a most sacred trust.

The World Service Commission, therefore, at its meeting in Kansas City, April 30, 1928, passed the following resolutions, requesting that they be submitted to the General Conference as a memorial, and they are hereby so submitted:

Whereas, Institutions or organizations such as hospitals, homes, colleges and universities, Conference Claimants or pension endowment funds, etc., connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church and dealing with the public in any kind of financial undertakings are in reality trading on the good name of the Methodist Episcopal Church and, therefore, to a large extent securing for themselves the advantages of the credit of the Church.

The General Conference feels called upon as an obvious duty to urge upon all institutions and organizations in any way connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church or using its name the utmost care in providing for the fulfillment of all annuity contracts entered into and for the proper conservation of all funds received from donors on annuity agreements.

To this end the General Conference urges upon all such institutions and organizations the observance without variation of the following recommendations and regulations:

(1) That the rate of annuity to be paid shall not be larger than the rate recommended by the World Service Commission for annuity contracts issued by the constituent World Service Boards.

(2) That all moneys received from donors on annuity contracts shall be placed as a reserve fund for the guarantee of the fulfillment of all annuity agreements.

(3) That the reserve fund for the protection of annuity contracts shall at no time be less than 100 per cent of the face value of all contracts in force.

(4) That all annuity reserve funds should be invested only in such securities as are considered proper for the investment of trust funds under the laws governing trust companies or institutions handling trust funds in the respective states in which the institutions or organizations are located.

We suggest reference to the Committee on Temporal Economy.

NO. 2

In order to maintain a suitable and effective correlation of all of the missionary and benevolent work of the Church "in the interest of co-operation, economy and efficiency," the Discipline now provides for a small, representative body known as the World Service Commission which is empowered to "fix the budget of the askings for the Constituent Boards; to fix the plan and ratio of the division of the funds to the several causes; to determine all questions as to credit to be given for Designated and Special Gifts at home and abroad and to correlate the work of the Boards."

It is the conviction of this committee that neither the General Conference nor the Church at large would seriously consider a policy of administration which would not provide the means for the effective correlation and supervision of our great benevolent interests.

The last General Conference evidently believing that such a supervising body as the World Service Commission should become a permanent part of our administrative organization, provided for its incorporation as follows: "In order to give strength and permanency of oversight, the World Service Commission is directed to incorporate under the laws of some State." This instruction has been carried out and the Commission has been incorporated under the laws of the State of Illinois.

Because of the evident necessity and advisability of some organized body to represent the Church and the General Conference in the supervision of the benevolent Boards and their interests and because of the value of permanency in such supervision, this committee believes that the World Service Commission should be continued with much the same powers as were assigned at its inception. And because of the value to the Church of a representative and democratic control of the vast and important interests committed to the World Service Commission and the benevolent Boards, and because any change in the membership of the Commission would necessitate a corresponding change in the Articles of Incorporation or the By-laws of the Commission, this Committee recommends that the membership and personnel of the Commission be continued without change, as is now provided for in the Discipline.

We suggest reference to the Committee on Temporal Economy.

Secretary Wade moved that these reports be referred to the Committee on Temporal Economy, which motion prevailed.

On motion, the time was extended, and Bishop L. J. Birney was granted the privilege of the floor to pay a tribute to Miss Miriam L. Nieh.

Committee on Wesley Birthday Service.

Bishop E. G. Richardson, Secretary of the Board of Bishops, on a question of privilege, presented the following nominations for the Committee on Wesley Spiritual Birthday Service on May 24:

Bishop Joseph F. Berry, Mrs. O. N. Townsend, and I. M. Hargett.

On motion, these nominations were confirmed, and the persons named duly elected.

E. M. Antrim, on a question of privilege, presented the following resolution, which, on his motion, was adopted:

We were wonderfully stirred yesterday by the fraternal address of the Rev. Dr. Harry C. Rogers, of the Linwood Boulevard Presbyterian Church of Kansas City, bearing the greetings of the great Presbyterian Church, in which he voiced sentiments on questions stirring the Christian world to-day, essentially one with those held by the Methodist Episcopal Church; therefore, be it Resolved, That we request our Bishops to select a fraternal delegate to convey our greetings to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church which meets in Tulsa, Oklahoma, this month, and that we instruct the delegate selected to inform our brethren of the Presbyterian Church of the action yesterday taken by this General Conference on Federation and Church Union and of the significance of the resolution.

EUGENE M. ANTRIM.

Bishop Francis J. McConnell, arising to a question of high privilege, presented the following statement:

Statement of Bishop
McConnell.

On reaching the seat of the Conference on the opening day I was informed that charges alleging evil and malicious motive in administration and immorality in administration and in the utterance of alleged views on evolution had been filed with the proper General Conference authorities against me. At the same time, the charges were given to the public press. While a large number of the newspapers were careful to explain that the word "immorality" was not used in the ordinary sense, there were evidently scores of other journals who published the charge of immorality without explanation. It is now the 12th day of May. Although I know that the charges are regularly in possession of the Conference, I am not able to get any clear information as to the course proposed with them. It may be that I can assume that the apparent lack of concern on the part of the General Conference indicates that the General Conference is not taking these charges more seriously than Annual Conferences have been taking similar charges issuing from the same source against Methodist officials during the past twenty-five years, but such assumption does not relieve me of the embarrassment of being unable to deal definitely with correspondents from all over the country. I cannot complain of any special hardship, but the time and energy required to acknowledge and reply to the communications of sincerely disturbed Methodists are almost beyond my resources, in addition to my other duties here. If I were dealing with a complaint on an appeal, I would not think of asking that you consider my case out of its due order, but the matter has been presented as charges alleging evil motive and immorality. I, therefore, ask not as a right, but as a favor, that you inform me as soon as you conveniently can whether you deem the charges of sufficient importance to entertain them or not. If the matters are dismissed as charges I have no objection to their being considered as complaints.

E. H. Cherrington, on a question of privilege, presented the following resolution, and moved its adoption :

Whereas, The word "immorality" in the note prefixed to paragraph 241 in the Discipline is susceptible of a meaning not originally intended but which in popular thought and speech is largely confined to that meaning; and,

Whereas, Absolutely unwarranted use of that word has been made and wide publicity given to the same in the press; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this General Conference emphatically condemn the utterly false and mischievous use that has been made in the public press of the term "immorality," which appears in the note prefixed to Paragraph 241 in the Discipline, thereby tending to traduce the unsullied name of one of the noblest men in Methodism, who is not only loved and held in the highest honor by us all, but is most highly respected and honored in his pre-eminent ability and sterling Christian character in all the churches without regard to denomination, both at home and abroad.

E. H. CHERRINGTON.

H. P. Sloan offered the following amendment, which was accepted by E. H. Cherrington :

And that the charges be dismissed as being totally without foundation in the specifications.

The previous question was called for, and the call sustained.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

On motion of S. W. Corcoran, the Conference voted that the alleged charges of George A. Coke against Bishop F. J. McConnell, now in the hands of the Committee on Episcopacy, be reported to the General Conference on Tuesday, May 15.

P. O. Hanson, on a question of privilege, moved that a cablegram of sympathy be sent by the Secretary of the General Conference to Reverend W. T. Hobart, in China, and to his children in Evanston, Illinois, because of the recent tragic death of Mrs. Hobart.

The motion prevailed.

Report No. 6, of the Committee on Temporal Economy, printed in The Daily Christian Advocate, page 223, was read by the Secretary and its consideration resumed.

The pending amendment offered by Lauritz Miller, printed on page 257 of The Daily Christian Advocate, was read by the Secretary.

W. H. Ford, on a question of privilege, presented the following resolution and moved its adoption:

The call of the roll of our honored Episcopacy on the first day of the General Conference included the name of Joseph F. Berry, in effective relation. The representatives of the Philadelphia Area have waited patiently until to-day, when on the eve of the seventy-second anniversary of our Bishop's birthday, we might have the privilege and the honor of expressing to this General Conference and the entire Methodist Episcopal Church of which he is the honored Senior Bishop, our deep appreciation and sincere acknowledgment of our truly great leader and servant of God.

Fifty-five years of extraordinary service to his fellowmen have been spent in our glorious ministry. Thirteen years in the arduous and fruitful field of the pastorate; eighteen years of brilliant achievement in the Secretaryship of the Epworth League, when he occupied the Editorial Chair of the Epworth Herald, which had its beginning during his administration. Then, twenty-four years of tireless toil and wise administration in the Episcopacy, the last sixteen of which have been spent in the Philadelphia Area.

Bishop Berry's leadership has been magnetic and abundantly fruitful. Our Area has gone steadily forward and increasingly maintained its vital Evangelistic passion. Our Bishop's time, strength and talent have been constantly and unstintedly given as a preacher of the unsearchable riches of our Lord's Christ, and as a fearless and intrepid leader for civic righteousness. To laymen and ministers, by his brotherliness, Bishop Berry has been in a very special sense, all of these rapidly passing years, another "Great-Heart."

We desire to record briefly, what is pre-eminently worthy of more than mention, a few of the outstanding achievements of Bishop Berry's administration in this great Area.

The purchase of the beautiful Episcopal residence, the commanding and increasingly valuable headquarters at 1701 Arch Street, the establishment of our Goodwill Industries, the rebuilding and equipping of our Chinese Mission, the erection of the great Tindley Temple, the Social Hall of the Fifth Street Temple, the dedication of Esther Hall and the Friendship Home, the establishment of the Wesley Foundation, the Carson-Simpson Fresh Air Fund, the purchase of commodious and comfortable district parsonages, the successful financial campaigns: $125,000 for our Deaconess Home and Settlement Work, $600,000 for our new Hospital building, $500,000 for the enlargement and maintenance of our Home for the Aged, and most recent, $71,000 for Asbury University Church, the erection of many beautiful and costly sanctuaries, and the endowment of Pennington and Wyoming Seminaries. All of these and other projects have had the endorsement, enthusiastic support and inspiring direction of our beloved leader.

Notwithstanding that Bishop Berry came to us as he did, rich with a ripened experience, a native aptitude for so great a task, he could not have accomplished all that he did achieve had it not been that he was blessed of God with a faithful and wonderful helpmeet in the elect lady who has graced the Episcopal residence and adorned the Gospel.

To our Bishop, beloved, we bring our most hearty congratulations on another anniversary of his birthday. For our Philadelphia Area and the entire Church, we voice our gratitude for having had such a leader. To our dear friends, Bishop and Mrs. Berry, whose charming personality has endeared her to all our hearts, we express the hope that there may be for them a long and glorious eventide of life, full of delightful fellowships, heart-gladdening ministries and joyful anticipations.

H. L. Davis, Chairman of the Committee on Privileges, presented W. C. Coleman, representative of the Northern Baptist Convention, who addressed the Conference.

Message to the Presbyterian General Assembly.

On a question of privilege, Ray Allen, for the Committee on State of the Church, presented the following memorial, which was before that Committee, and moved that our Fraternal Delegate to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church be requested to bring to the attention of that assembly the contents of this memorial.

The Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, should be united. Their purposes are alike, and they work in much the same territory. Practically their only differences now are in details of organization, and surely those can not justify their remaining apart, for in union there would be added strength.

The Presbyterians have an honorable history, and a commendable spirit, and they are doing a work of magnitude and value beyond measure. To be actually united with that noble people would be to us a joy and an inspiration.

We therefore urge that overtures be at once made looking for early organic union, without reservation or condition.

In the title of Chapter 1, after the word "Quarterly" insert a comma and strike out the word "and" and after the word "Annual" add the words "and Lay Conferences," so that Chapter 1 as amended will read "Pastoral Charges, Quarterly, Annual and Lay Conferences."

Add new Article after Paragraph 36 of 1924 Discipline, as follows:

ARTICLE IV. LAY CONFERENCES

Par. 37, A Lay Conference shall be organized in each Annual Conference and shall be composed of one lay member from each Pastoral Charge within the Annual Conference and have such power as the General Conference may direct.

Also amend Chapter II. The General Conference.

ARTICLE III. LAY DELEGATES

Par. 39, Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, as follows:

Section 1. Each Lay Conference shall be entitled to as many delegates and reserve delegates to the General Conference, as there are ministerial delegates and reserve delegates from the Annual Conference.

Sec. 2. Such lay delegates shall be elected by ballot at the session of the Lay Conference immediately preceding the General Conference. They shall be lay members twenty-five years of age or over, holding membership within the bounds of the Lay Conference, and having been lay members of the Church five years next preceding their election. Delegates-elect who cease to be members of the Church within the bounds of the Lay Conference by which they were elected shall not be entitled to seats in the General Conference.

Be it further Resolved, That should these proposed amendments receive the necessary recommendation of the General Conference, they shall be submitted to the several Annual and Lay Electoral Conferences in the year 1929, for their concurrence, said Electoral Conferences to be called by the Bishops.

If and when the Annual and Lay Electoral Conferences shall have approved these amendments by the necessary majority, the Bishops shall announce this fact through the Church press, then these constitutional provisions shall be thereafter operative under the provisions of Chapter III, Paragraphs 93 and 94 of Discipline, 1924, amended as follows: Strike out "Electoral" in the title and throughout Par. 93 in all its sections and substitute for Par. 94, entitled "Laymen's Associations," the following:

Sec. 3. The Lay Conference shall meet in joint session with the Annual Conference to consider those matters named in Sec. 1 of this paragraph. The officers of the Annual Conference shall be the officers of the joint session. The time of holding the joint session shall be fixed by the presiding Bishop and the president of the Lay Conference.

Sec. 4. Ministerial and lay members of the joint session shall deliberate together as one body. They shall also vote as one body, except when requested by one-third of either order, the vote on any question shall be taken by separate orders, and a majority of each order shall be required to pass a measure.

Be it further Resolved, That if the proposed amendments and the suggested revisions of Paragraphs 93 and 94 are approved by this Gen-

First: Amend Division III, Chapter 1, Article III, Annual Conferences, Par. 36, as follows:

Put a comma in place of a period now after the word "attend," and add the words, "and in whose power shall be retained the right of administration of the rules and regulations of the Church for the admission, continuance, ordination, character and trial of the members thereof," so that the entire Article shall then be found to read:

Par. 36, Section 1. qualifications of its members. It shall have such power as the General Conference may direct. Its members shall be admitted as Lay Delegates from the several Charges to such sessions of the Annual Conference, and with such powers therein, as the General Conference may determine.

Third—Amend present Chapter II, Division III, by substituting for the present entire Article III, Lay Delegates, the following:

ARTICLE III, LAY DELEGATES

Par. 40, Section 1. Each Lay Conference shall be entitled to elect as many delegates and reserve delegates to the General Conference as there are ministerial delegates and reserve delegates respectively from the Annual Conference.

Sec. 2. The Lay Delegates and reserve delegates to the General Conference shall be elected by ballot by the members of the Lay Conference at its session immediately preceding the General Conference. Such delegates and reserve delegates shall be at least twenty-five years of age, and shall have been members of the Church five years next preceding, and at the time of their election and at the time of the session of the General Conference shall be members of the Church within the bounds of the Lay Conference which elected them.

Fourth—Amend present Chapter II, Division III, in the several Articles IV (Credentials), V (Sessions), and XI (Amendments), as follows: Strike out in each of the above Articles IV, V and XI, the word "electoral" wherever it occurs so that the phrase now reading Lay Electoral Conference (or Conferences) in each case shall read "Lay Conference, or Conferences."

Fifth—Rename the various Paragraphs as required by the above insertion.

Correction of Errors.

On a question of privilege, T. P. Potter presented the following resolution, which, on motion of F. R. Bayley, was referred to the Committee on State of the Church:

Whereas, There is a cause for gladness in the fact that, in 1927, in the Conferences of the United States, 123,485 children and 74,932 Adults received the sacrament of Baptism, that 127,429 persons were reported as having been received into preparatory membership; that 188,844 were received from preparatory membership and on confession of faith, and that 138,805 were received by Transfer.

Statistical Decreases.

Nevertheless, we must face the fact that there was an increase over 1926 in only one instance: the number of children baptized, while in the other four there were decreases ranging from 3 to 6%; and,

Whereas, There were recorded as non-resident-inactive members a total of 421,070, an increase of 7% and 10.58% of the number of full members; and,

Whereas, There was reported an increase of 25,430 full members, or 64/100%; and,

Whereas, Of the 16,291 charges reported in 1927, 2,792, or 17%, reported no baptisms, children or adults; 5,363, or 33%, reported no Preparatory members received; 4,569, or 28%, reported none received from preparatory members or on confession of faith; 5,405, or 33%, reported none received by transfer, and that while we received 188,844 from preparatory membership and on confession of faith, we reported 47,012 deaths and an increase of 25,430; this leaves 116,402 of those received unaccounted for.

Now, therefore, we, the members of the Upper Iowa Conference Delegation desire to call the attention of this General Conference to this most vital question, the work which alone justifies our being, the saving and keeping alive, in the faith, of men.

MAY 14
THIRTEENTH
DAY.
Morning.

We rejoice in the success of the recent Mens Council advertised and held in connection with the General Conference. Men's Council.

The addresses and music and all other phases of the program were of high order and cannot but inspire Methodism to greater and more intelligent service in Kingdom building.

We congratulate the Executive Secretary, Bert Edward Smith, and all working with him on the outstanding leadership procured for the Council meetings and recognize that the results of these two days sessions will mean better leadership throughout our Church.

However, we deplore the commercializing of the Sabbath, without the knowledge of the Executive Secretary, in evidence at the close of Sunday afternoon's session in the sale of photographs, and go on record as a General Conference in upholding that section of the General Rules of the Church in Par. 30 of the 1924 Discipline which declares against "profaning the day of the Lord either by doing ordinary work therein or by buying or selling."

Presentation of Bishop James
Cannon, Jr.

Henry L. Davis, for the Committee on Privileges, presented Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who briefly addressed the Conference.

Action of
Missions on Prohibition.

On motion of E. M. Antrim, Bishop Cannon read to the Conference the following paper, embodying the action of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on the question of Prohibition.

The Episcopal Address of 1926 declares: "The industrial, social, educational, moral and religious forces of the nation which overthrew the legalized liquor traffic and secured national prohibition must unite in the fight with equal vigor and persistence against the outlawed criminal traffic and the would-be nullifiers of the law."

This Board of Missions, representing the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the regeneration of the individual and of the entire social order, not only in our country, but on every continent, would emphasize to-day this utterance of the Episcopal Address. We are not met here to-day as Republicans or Democrats, or in any way as partisans of any political party. We are here as representatives of a part of the moral and religious forces of our country. From the beginning of its history Methodism has recognized the inherent evil of the traffic in intoxicants, and for nearly half a century our own great Church has been in the forefront of the battle against the liquor traffic, and there has been no more potent force than Methodism in the adoption of those salutary laws which abolished the crossroads and village bar-room, the city saloon, the breweries and distilleries, and branded future traffickers in intoxicating liquors as criminals and outlaws, and also destroyed the strangle hold of the liquor traffic upon town and city councils, State legislatures and other government officials. It is difficult for our children to realize the strength, the resourcefulness and the desperation of the defenders of the outlawed traffic, or the intensity of the struggle through the succeeding years.

This, the largest and most representative of our Church Boards, faces to-day a situation which demands that it take action clear and unmistakable, as Methodism has always taken at every stage of this great conflict, for before its next meeting that will have occurred which will greatly affect for good or ill the future effectiveness of the national prohibition law. To be specific, whether we like it or not, the future effectiveness of that law will be tremendously affected by the results of the approaching presidential and congressional campaign. It is a fact patent to every well-informed man that a critical time has been reached in the conflict of the forces of sobriety, temperance, righteousness and human betterment with the organized, world-wide, debasing, soul-destroying liquor traffic, and the question of the maintenance of the National Prohibition Law is in our judgment a paramount issue in the Presidential and Congressional campaign in 1928. Therefore

Resolved I: We urge all friends of sobriety, social betterment and good government actively to oppose the nomination or election to public office of any candidate who is not positively and openly committed to a policy of vigorous, effective enforcement of the prohibition law by his utterances, acts and record. The strongest prohibition law enforcement plank would be neutralized, indeed would be practically worthless, if its adoption by any Convention should be followed by the nomination by that same Convention of candidates whose utterances, acts or records have branded them as personally hostile to prohibition, or as unwilling to co-operate actively to secure effective law enforcement, or as unappreciative of the comparative importance of this unprecedented effort to promote the general welfare of all people by the restriction of the hurtful activities of the individuals. We believe that the election of such a candidate, with such a record, at this critical stage of prohibition law enforcement would be a staggering blow to the cause of temperance and prohibition, not only in the United States, but in every mission field of our Church, indeed throughout the world. It would be claimed and declared to be a repudiation of the Eighteenth Amendment; it would inevitably be followed by persistent efforts to increase the alcoholic content of beverage liquors and to weaken the enforcement provisions of the Prohibition Law; it would place in the hands of an unsympathetic and hostile President the appointment of the heads of all Departments of the Federal Government, United States District Attorneys and Marshals, Judges of the United States District and Circuit Courts, and of the United States Supreme Court itself, all ministers, envoys, consuls and special representatives of our nation to all the countries of the world. In short, it would immeasurably strengthen the advocates of the age-long common enemy, the liquor traffic, and weaken the hands of the friends of temperance throughout the world, and make far more difficult the work of all those who are trying to bring in the Kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Resolved II: That we regret the attitude of certain elements of society toward the observance of the prohibition law. Their refusal to place the promotion of the general welfare and loyalty to the Constitution and laws of the country above personal desires and appetite has been productive of much law violation, and has in some sections of the country taken the form of open defiance and nullification of the prohibition law. Notwithstanding their opposition, the salutary effects of the prohibition law have been demonstrated; by it labor has been increased, social conditions improved, public health benefited and general morality promoted. The value of the law has been directly in proportion to the effectiveness of the enforcement of the law. Even at its worst, however, prohibition has proved immeasurably better than the former legalized liquor traffic, for that legalized traffic was almost universally lawless, and besmirched the social and political life of the country. We regret the inefficient enforcement which for several years characterized the Federal Prohibition Department, and are gratified to note the steady improvement under Dr. J. M. Doran. We heartily approve the passing of the bill to promote more efficient enforcement, which is now before Congress with the endorsement of the Government Enforcement officials and the leading prohibition organizations. We condemn the effort now being made to return the whole matter of Law Enforcement to the State Government. The liquor traffic is a national evil, and its persistent refusal to respect either State or Inter-State Prohibition Laws has proven that it can be controlled only by the full co-operation of both National and State Governments.

Conferences.

Wiley A. Keve presented a substitute for the pending amendment by employing the words "in countries outside of the United States of America," which substitute was accepted by J. R. Gettys.

Ray Allen moved to amend the report wherever the term "Central Conferences" is used by substituting "Regional Conferences."

On motion of W. R. Keeseey, this amendment was tabled.

Committee on Credentials.

L. M. Potter, Chairman of the Committee on Credentials, made the following report, which, on his motion, was adopted:

Your Committee on Credentials desires to report and recommend the following adjustments:

William H. McMaster, ministerial delegate, North-East Ohio Conference, excused from the sessions of May 15, 16, 17. Battelle McCarty, first reserve, seated in his place.

C. M. Phillips, reserve lay delegate, Wilmington Conference, seated May 14, in place of W. N. Jackson, permanently excused.

William D. Little, lay delegate Upper Iowa Conference, permanently excused after the session of May 15. Harry I. Brown, first reserve, seated in his place.

J. A. Templin, ministerial delegate, Northwest Kansas Conference, excused May 15. L. R. Templin, first reserve, seated in his place.

L. R. Pounds, regular lay delegate, New York East Conference, has arrived and is seated in place of William H. Foster, first reserve.

M. P. Arrasmith, ministerial delegate, Northwest Iowa Conference, has returned and resumed his seat to-day.

A. M. Hill, first reserve lay delegate, seated from Holston Conference, excused from further sessions of the Conference after May 15.

Your Committee further reports that there is an apparent epidemic among the delegates to step aside for a day or two and allow a reserve delegate to be seated. Your committee is of the opinion that this practice should be discouraged. Delegates with only one or two days' experience, with no contact with the work of committees, can make little or no contribution to the work of the body. On the contrary, it detracts from it.

Another matter of importance is the fact that our supply of delegates' badges is exhausted. There are no more. Therefore, we are obliged to request that delegates vacating their seats either permanently or temporarily should place their badges with delegates taking their place.

LOUIS M. POTTER, Chairman.

J. R. GETTYS, Secretary.

Announcements were made, and the Conference adjourned, with the presiding Bishop pronouncing the benediction.

Message from
gationalists.

Greetings from Ohio Congregationalists. The Congregationalists of Ohio, assembled in their Annual State Meeting at Hudson, heartily endorse the suggestion recently made in your General Conference, looking toward organic unity between your great Church, the Presbyterian and the Congregational bodies. The consummation of such an event would be in harmony with our Lord's last prayer. We urge that further investigation be made as to the possibility of such an enterprise. Fraternally yours, JUDGE A. C. SHATTUCK, Moderator.

A. L. Miller presented the following resolution, which, on motion of Daniel L. Marsh, was referred to the Committee on State of the Church.

Whereas, In previous General Conferences, notably that of 1924 at Springfield, Mass., a special service was set aside in which a strong evangelistic note was sounded forth; and,

Whereas, Methodism has always been and should always continue to be a mighty evangelistic force—her spirit rather than her polity being the explanation of her wonderful history; and,

Whereas, certain legislation becomes necessary from time to time in the expansion of her work and in caring for her manifold activities and interests, yet if she is not to lose her distinctive mission in the world, the supreme emphasis must be placed, not upon machinery, but upon the salvation of souls; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we request the Board of Bishops to arrange for a special service toward the close of this General Conference session, preferably the last Sunday night we are to be together—a service in which there shall be set forth the need and opportunity of evangelism.

Recognition
of Bishop
Thirkield's
Retirement.

The Chattanooga Area requests the privilege of expressing a very brief word of appreciation for her resident Bishop, Wilbur P. Thirkield, who, by reason of age, will retire from the effective duties of the episcopacy at the conclusion of this General Conference.

For forty-five years Bishop Thirkield has labored in the South, including one quadrennium in Mexico. He brought this career to a fitting climax by four years of service as resident bishop of the Chattanooga Area. His peculiar gifts as a scholar, a Christian Mystic, an able administrator and a warm-hearted brother, together with his long experience in the South fitted him peculiarly for this task. Our churches and educational institutions have prospered greatly under his inspiring leadership.

Mrs. Thirkield has been not less active than the Bishop. She not only directed with great skill the work of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of which she was the National President for seventeen years, resigning recently, but she has also found ample time to inspire and guide the women of our Area.

Even if there were time for a long statement, words would fail to express our appreciation and affection for these two servants of God and His Church. We have tried to show this to them by deeds during the quadrennium, and we simply request the privilege of entering upon your records this tribute of gratitude and esteem. We pray that their lives may be spared for many more years of inspiring service.

ARLO A. BROWN.

ference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in a Pastorate or District Superintendency, or under appointment to an institution or organization under the control of, or under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church, excepting those institutions or organizations providing an annuity for years of service in them. Judicial Question.

The motion of Secretary Wade to refer the following question to the Committee on Judiciary prevailed:

Whereas, on January 7, 1928, Bishop William F. Anderson issued the following ruling:

"Paragraph 213 of the 1924 Discipline reads:

"A Bishop, when he judges it necessary, may unite two or more Pastoral Charges for Quarterly Conferences purposes, without affecting their separate financial interests or pastoral relations."

"In the belief and hope that it may contribute to the efficiency and larger ministry of the Methodism of in-town Boston churches, I propose, if agreeable to all parties concerned, to make use of the provision herein stated in uniting First Church, Copley, and Tremont Street Churches in one Quarterly Conference."

Whereas, on January 10, 1928, Bishop William F. Anderson further ruled:

"It is my belief that in-town Methodism of Boston can be largely improved and Christ's kingdom advanced by simplification in the administration of our resources, therefore, by virtue of the power resident in me as Bishop of the Boston Area to 'Fix the appointments of the preachers,' and hence in accordance with Paragraph 607 of the 1924 Discipline, entitled 'Consolidation of Churches'; and Paragraph 213 (quoted above), I propose that First Methodist Episcopal Church, Boston, should be united with the Copley-Tremont Street Methodist Episcopal Church, which are now united under the legal name of 'The Methodist Religious Society in Boston.' I further propose that as there is to be only one Board of Trustees, so there shall be but one Quarterly Conference, but for the time being, there shall be maintained three Pastoral Charges, with three pastors, and three Official Boards."

Whereas, certain officials of the churches concerned have raised the question as to whether or not this proposal may be legally carried out.

Therefore, as one of the pastors of the Methodist Religious Society in Boston, I respectfully request the Committee on Judiciary to render a decision on the following question:

Has a Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church power, when he judges it necessary, to unite two or more Pastoral Charges for Quarterly Conference purposes without affecting their pastoral relations, but so as to bring all of the property interests under the control of one Board of Trustees?

LYNN J. RADCLIFFE.

Tribute to
Judson S. Hill.

That the apostle Paul was dominated by the divine touch, when he saw and heard the man of Macedonia calling: "Come over and help us," no one doubts.

We like to think that John Wesley, the founder of our beloved Methodism, was especially in the spirit, when he exclaimed, "The world is my parish," and that our beloved Church in her endeavors to make Wesley's dream of the world-wide conquest real, was also inspired of God.

In this conquest the Church has been called to administer to all races of mankind; among those who have been beneficiaries of his spiritual touch, is the American Negro.

To his redemption, the Church has truly dedicated the best brain and heart of her noblest sons and daughters.

Time fails to tell of R. S. Rust, J. M. Walden, J. M. Braden, W. P. Thirkield and Judson S. Hill, who, through faith subdued Kingdoms, wrought righteousness, stayed the mouths of lions, waxed valiant in fight and turned to flight the armies of the aliens.

Whereas, Of this group of nobles of whom the world was not worthy, Dr. Judson S. Hill, President of the Morristown Normal College, is the sole active educational survivor; and,

Whereas, He is carrying on to-day on the same spot on which he began his work forty-seven years ago, and,

Whereas, The old slave pen, then valued at $500, in which he began his work, has given place to a modern school property worth $500,000; and,

Whereas, His exploits in the development of human character have been equally striking, which is evidenced by the fact that one of the faculty of the School was formerly sold as a slave in the old building; and,

Whereas, Dr. Judson S. Hill is the oldest college president in the United States in years of service, having given nearly fifty years of his life to the education of the Negro. During these years he has been a member of a Negro Conference which has shown its appreciation and love for him by electing him for seven quadrenniums as their only delegate. He is the only member now living who was a member of the Conference when it was organized. More than 2,000 teachers have been furnished to the schools in the South; over 100 of the students have gone into the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church and other denominations; and,

Whereas, His devoted and charming wife, Mrs. Hill, has labored with him during all these years, in a most beautiful and sacrificial way, we also make acknowledgment of our gratitude and appreciation for God's gift of her to our people; therefore, be it Resolved, We desire to express our appreciation of the value and extent of the great work of this Christian man and his wife and we ask that J. B. F. Shaw escort Dr. Hill to the platform and present him to the General Conference.

NELLIE L. FORREST.

In harmony with this resolution, Judson S. Hill was presented to the Conference and made appropriate remarks.

Whereas, Time did not permit the delivery of the entire address and but a limited number of this body were able to be present because of one other meeting held at the same time; be it

Resolved, That we request that this address be published in The Daily Christian Advocate, or that it be printed in some other suitable form and distributed to all members of the General Conference.

HOWARD E. SIMPSON.

Secretary Wade presented the following resolution, which, on his motion, was referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

Whereas, This General Conference has adopted a proposed amendment to the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church and passed a resolution calling for a special session of the several Lay Electoral Conferences to consider and vote on the same; and,

Whereas, There has been considerable confusion in the past because of the uncertainty as to whether delegates elected to the last Lay Electoral Conference serve throughout the quadrennium, or whether the churches must elect new delegates for each and every special session of the Lay Electoral Conference; and,

Whereas, A failure to call a special session in a proper and legal manner may make it possible for some one to call in question the legality of the entire proceedings; therefore, be it

Resolved, The Judiciary Committee be requested to render a decision on the following question:

"Are delegates to Lay Electoral Conferences elected for the Quadrennium, or must there be a new election in the regular way by the churches for each and every special session of the Lay Electoral Conference?"

R. CLARENCE BROWN.

Communica-

Anton Bast.

To the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church:

Having received and in earnest prayers considered the sentence passed by the Committee of Seventeen, I respectfully beg to leave the following statement:

1. First, I want to express my deep gratitude to God and the Church, because I again am declared in good standing and am permitted to minister in the Church according to my inner heavenly calling.

2. Next, I want to communicate to the General Conference that I do not want to claim my right to appeal regarding to what is against me in the verdict. For while I maintain my uttermost protest against the charges raised against me, and my innocence in what I am accused for, I at the same time am exceedingly sorry for what the Church has suffered on account of this sad case, and in view of the fact that the Church as such has no responsibility for the circumstances which brought me into these sufferings or for certain procedure in the case, I would find it improper and illoyal also to put the burden of an appeal upon the heart and means of the Church and its good men, and therefore I hereby declare that I definitely give up my right to appeal in the case, as far as it concerns the Church.

3. Having said that, I in this way beg to extend most heartfelt thanks to my noble and able counsel for defense, the Rev. Dorr F. Diefendorf, for what he has done for and been to me in conducting the defense in such an intelligent and manly way, and to the beloved Church for what I received of comfort and help.

I feel, that I am now out of the furnace, and only what was of no use was burned. God be praised.

For my future standing, work and support I entirely trust God and the Church.

I shall from this day, by the grace of God, earnestly seek to drop and leave this case and its details behind me and give my life entirely and wholeheartedly to rebuilding of what has been hurtled and to promotion of the Kingdom.

For this I ask your prayers and support.

Respectfully,

Kansas City, May 21, 1928.

Report of the Committee on Memorial Day.

V. F. Brown presented the following report as Chairman of the Committee on the Observance of Memorial Day:

Your Committee on the Proper Observance of Memorial Day, would most respectfully, through the Church, call attention to the spirit of the day in which we live, reminding ourselves that, in the midst of our great national prosperity, we as a nation, are in danger of forgetting the God of our Fathers, and the fathers themselves, who, under God, by their patriotism, and heroism, and sacrifice and devotion to the right, gave their all, that this nation—"of the people and for the people"—might live and not perish.

This day should not be made a day for pleasure alone, though these pleasures may be innocent. It should not be a day to be commercialized by sports, even though innocent and enjoyable, but a day of devout praise and sincere gratitude, that the youth of our day and all the people might be continually reminded that the patriotism of the fathers should be reproduced in the lives of their posterity—and to this end all our pleasures and all services should contribute. Less pleasure, more patriotism; less of commercialism and more of consecration to country and right and God.

HYMN 207.....Bishop McConnell

The church's one foundation
Is Jesus Christ her Lord;
She is his new creation
By water and the word:
From Heaven he came and sought her
To be his holy bride;
With his own blood he bought her,
And for her life he died.

Elect from every nation,
Yet one o'er all the earth,
Her charter of salvation,
One Lord, one faith, one birth;
One holy name she blesses,
Partakes one holy food,
And to one hope she presses,
With every grace endued.

'Mid toil and tribulation,
And tumult of her war,
She waits the consummation
Of peace for evermore;
Till, with the vision glorious,
Her longing eyes are blest,
And the great church victorious
Shall be the church at rest.

Yet she on earth hath union
With God the Three in One,
And mystic sweet communion
With those whose rest is won;
O happy ones and holy!
Lord, give us grace that we,
Like them, the meek and lowly,
On high may dwell with thee.

Amen.

Enable with perpetual light
The dullness of our blinded sight

Anoint and cheer our soiled face
With the abundance of thy grace;

Keep far our foes, give peace at home;
Where thou art Guide, no ill can come.

Teach us to know the Father, Son,
And thee, of both, to be but ONE;

That through the ages all along
This may be our endless song;

Praise to thy eternal merit,
Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

Lord, hear our prayer.
And let our cry come unto thee.

HYMN 180—(Tune, Miles' Lane).....Bishop Locke

All hail the power of Jesus' name!

Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown him Lord of all.

Ye chosen seed of Israel's race,
Ye ransomed from the fall,
Hail him who saves you by his grace,
And crown him Lord of all.

Sinners, whose love can ne'er forget
The wormwood and the gall;
Go, spread your trophies at his feet,
And crown him Lord of all.

Let every kindred, every tribe
On this terrestrial ball,
To him all majesty ascribe,
And crown him Lord of all.

O that, with yonder sacred throng,
We at his feet may fall!
We'll join the everlasting song,
And crown him Lord of all.

Amen.

Resolution Appreciative of
J. J. Wallace.

We regard the editorship of our periodical press among the most important and influential positions known to our Church economy. Our editors speak by the printed pages to large numbers, thus molding and determining the life of our Methodism.

Since our delegations are advised of the retirement of Dr. John J. Wallace from the editorial chair of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate—

And, since Dr. Wallace has served for five quadrenniums as the efficient, able editor of our regional Advocate—

And, since he has, in the judgment of many of our highest Church officials, been one of the ablest editors of our family of Advocates—

And, since under his editorship the circulation of our Advocate reached its peak in the life of the paper; be it, therefore,

Resolved, 1. That we who represent the regional territory bespeak our highest appreciation of the sterling character of our retiring editor; for the intellectual and spiritual contributions made to us and the Kingdom of Righteousness during his twenty years of editorial service and for the enviable position which our Advocate has held under his directing genius.

2. That we wish for him all the joys and blessings so well earned, as he goes out to the less arduous duties in the years that are before us.

DANIEL WESTFALL, BATTELLE McCARTY,

L. H. On motion of W. E. Shaw, this motion was placed on the table.

Secretary Arters introduced the following motion, which was adopted:

Revision Delegated to Editor of Discipline.

I move that because of the almost continuous session of the Conference the last three days, and because of the large amount of legislation which has been passed, the Committee on Revision, because it cannot complete the task assigned it before adjournment, be given the privilege of revising all unrevised reports, and that the same for that purpose be referred to the editor of the Discipline, with authority to make such verbal changes as do not change the meaning of our action.

Report of George W.
Dixon.

Secretary Arters presented the report of G. W. Dixon, our designated delegate to the dedication of the new Wesleyan Methodist Church in Belfast, Ireland, concerning the Irish-American Memorial, and moved that it be printed in The Daily Christian Advocate without reading, and in the General Conference Journal.

This motion prevailed.

The report is as follows:

The plans for the erection of the Irish-American Memorial in Belfast have now been completed and have been approved by the Irish Conference.

The placing of the contract has been delayed, owing to the insufficiency of money in hands to start operations. Up to the present about $45,000 in actual cash has been received from America and is in the hands of the treasurers in Belfast.

The present contemplated project will necessitate the raising of $100,000 more.

The site upon which the new building is to be erected is one of the finest and most valuable in the city. It is on the square directly facing the elegant City Hall. On the left corner of this site stands the old mother Church of Irish Methodism, dating back to the days of John Wesley, and is the only church building of any sort at the center of the city.

The plans provide for a suite of buildings which will be known as the "Irish-American Methodist Memorial." The entire cost of this building, it is hoped will be defrayed by American contributions. It will stand as a visible token of appreciation of American Methodism of the three Irish Methodists who introduced Methodism to the great American continent—Barbara Heck, Philip Embury and Robert Strawbridge—and also of the frequent contributions in men that the Irish Methodist Church has made to the great Methodist Episcopal Church of America since.

The site has a frontage of ninety-one feet and a depth of eighty feet.

The building will have six shops on the ground floor in front, including accommodation for the Irish Methodist Book Concern.

Behind the shops will be the main Sunday School Auditorium, capable of seating 700 people. Above the shops will be a Minor Hall, offices and reception rooms for the use of the American visitors, tourists and others.

The project includes the overhauling of the present church at the cost of $50,000. This outlay will be borne by the members of the congregation. Several Memorial windows and Memorial seats are to be put in by the American friends.

Senator George W. Dixon, the esteemed national treasurer, visited Belfast for two days on May 10 and 11. He met the Committee in the Grand Central Hotel, where a luncheon was arranged. The President of the Irish Conference presided. A very sincere and enthusiastic welcome was accorded to Senator Dixon. Warm speeches of welcome and appreciation of his work for the success of the Irish-American Memorial were given by Revs. Dr. W. L. Northridge, J. McCaffrey, R. C. Phillips (President designate), Messrs. S. T. Kirkpatrick, Secretary of the Trustees, and R. S. Charlesson, Treasurer of the Forward Movement.

Senator Dixon delivered a witty and forceful address, after which he deliberated for some considerable time with the committee as to the best methods of bringing the project to a successful issue. At his suggestion it was finally agreed that a deputation visit America in the autumn. He very graciously undertook to solicit the sympathy and co-operation of his friends, the Bishops and leading laymen, and organize a short campaign for the raising of the balance of the money. His visit has been much appreciated and has put heart and renewed enthusiasm into us all.

W. L. NORTHRIDGE,
J. McCAFFREY.

R. A. Colpitts, Chairman of the Committee on Complimentary Resolutions, presented the Report of that Committee, and on his motion, it was adopted, as follows:

Committee on Complimentary Resolutions.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION

The Committee on Courtesies, in cheerful compliance with your assignment, desires to present the following:

This General Conference now nearing adjournment gratefully acknowledges the comfort and convenience in which its work has been done. Every important need has been graciously anticipated and for each the most ample provision has been made. Others have labored indefatigably. We have entered into their labors. It is the purpose of the Conference that both the labors and the laborers shall receive a recognition that is highly merited.

And first: The Conference acknowledges its debt to the large and distinguished group of persons who prepared the way for its coming and who exercised a benign care after it had arrived. The roll of these benefactors includes the Commission on Entertainment, with its trinity of officers unexcelled; and also the several local committees, the members of which have regarded no request as either too trivial or too unreasonable to be accorded full and fair consideration. Of the work of these, and of all their unknown and unnamed colleagues, the Conference records its high appreciation.

Again: The Conference acknowledges its debt to those who, with manifest fidelity have served it through the agency of the pen and all that that instrument represents: To our former Secretary, who has been signally honored by the Conference, and to his worthy successor and their perfectly co-operating staff: To the Editor of the Daily Christian Advocate and his corps of capable assistants who, capturing all the words of the Conference (wise and otherwise) have gathered them into an invaluable book of Methodist remembrances, and also to the printers of the Daily Christian Advocate, who, upon the testimony of the Editor, have given him the most constant and efficient co-operation: To the public press, which not only has given generous space to the proceedings, but has interpreted them with unusual sympathy and discrimination: To all who thus have served by the written word, our profound obligation is heartily expressed.

Another group meriting words of warmest appreciation are those who, for our delectation, have played skillfully upon instruments of music, or have brought the minstrelsy of song. These have come from the East and the West, the North and the South. They have repeatedly lifted us from prosaic care into the very presence of God. Their gracious ministry remains a part of that imperishable memory which, with gladness, we shall carry to our homes. To them we say a hearty and a very sincere "Thank you."

The profound gratitude of the Conference is extended to yet another group: To our Chief Pastors, who, through good report and ill, now gently, now firmly, but always happily, have guided so expeditiously through the tortuous channels of Conference business. The inspirations of the morning messages and the high challenges of the Episcopal Address from these, our chosen chieftains, compel confidence in their leadership, their courage, and their devotion. For Bishop Waldorf, whose persuasive eloquence was largely responsible for bringing the General Conference to Kansas City, and who so far has betrayed no evidence of regret that we came, the committee has naught but words of profound appreciation.

And what shall we say more? For the time would fail to tell of our sincere gratitude to the mayor of the city and various civic organizations; to business houses, hotels and clubs, to lodges and churches, and particularly those whose buildings have been put at our disposal; to telegraph companies, microphone operators, bureau of transportation and postal officials; to Bethany Hospital and the nurses detailed for service at the Hall; to police, firemen, ushers, clerks, stenographers, typists, pages, and to all others whose kindly ministries have made us thrice glad that the Conference of 1928 has brought us to this great American metropolis. As we turn our steps homeward we salute Kansas City and her hospitable citizens with fervent gratitude and abiding love, and in the name of Him whose we are and whom we serve.

CHARLES O. THIBODEAU, Secretary.

Re Final Roll Call.

Secretary Arters gave direction to the Chairmen of delegations in order to expedite the final roll call, and moved that the record of attendance for this morning's session be considered as effective at 12:30 o'clock P. M., and be so entered.

This motion prevailed.

Forming the Areas Deferred.

On a question of privilege, Bishop T. S. Henderson, for the Board of Bishops, announced that, owing to the late presentation of the report of the Committee on Episcopacy, dealing with assignments of Bishops, it would be necessary for the Bishops' Committee on Forming the Areas to complete their work after the adjournment of the General Conference, and then to print the results.

General Conference Reference Library.

H. L. Jacobs, on a question of privilege, presented the following resolution, which, on motion, was adopted:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the General Conference is hereby directed and authorized to create a General Conference Reference Library for the use of the delegates to the General Conference during its sessions, the same to be in his office. He is hereby empowered to draw on the Treasurer of the General Conference Expense Fund for all expense in drayage and freight, and for the purchase of needed Journals of the General Conference, copies of The Daily Christian Advocate, Disciplines, and books that are recognized authorities on the Discipline, Constitution of the Church, and the judicial decisions of the General Conference.

In harmony with this resolution, H. L. Jacobs tendered to the General Conference as a nucleus for a reference library his complete set of Journals of the General Conference, sets of the Daily Christian Advocates from 1860, bound, except that of 1924, set of Disciplines, together with works and books by Merrill, Emery, Baker, Sherman, Cooke, Sanford, Neely, Buckley, and others.

On motion, the Conference voted to accept this gift, with appreciation to the donor.

H. L. Jacobs called attention to the fact that in Report No. 17, Committee on Itinerancy, printed in The Daily Christian Advocate, page 397, and recently adopted, there were certain phases of this legislation overlooked, which now seem to make the legislation impracticable, and, on his motion, the Conference voted to postpone the operation of this legislation until May 2, 1932.

D. L. Marsh moved that the Secretary of the General Conference be authorized and directed to prepare a Digest of Legislation and Rulings of this General Conference for the use of the Bishops in the Fall Conferences before the Discipline is prepared.

The motion was duly seconded and thereafter adopted.

Secretary Arters moved that after the announcements, the calling of the roll and suitable devotional exercises, the General Conference stand adjourned.

This motion prevailed.

The announcements were made, and the Secretary called the roll of the Bishops, to which the following Bishops responded:

William F. Anderson, Brenton T. Badley, James C. Baker, Lauress J. Birney, Edgar Blake, Wallace E. Brown, Charles W. Burns, Matthew W. Clair, Frederick B. Fisher, George R. Grose, Theodore S. Bishop William F. McDowell delivered the closing address of the General Conference as follows:

Closing Address.

I will ask the Conference to allow me in behalf of the entire Church to thank you and those who have been associated with you during this month for the fidelity, the devotion, the consecration with which you have performed the tasks which the Church has committed to you. I have not seen any General Conference throughout the years which has worked more laboriously or in finer spirit or in more Christian fraternity than this Conference has exhibited.

I believe that it would be fairly agreed that more than one action which you have taken constitutes the basis for words that were once used to characterize the original Methodist Movement, namely, for a spiritual leap forward in all the world.

In the name of Jesus Christ, in the presence and power of the Holy Spirit we came; in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord and Master, in the presence and power of the Holy Spirit, let us now go to the ends of the earth, and may we in all the lands fulfill his supreme purpose of redemption. I especially ask, and take especial pleasure in thanking you in behalf of your Bishops for the uniform, the distinguished, the extraordinary courtesy and consideration you have given to us. But I am especially moved to thank you and to thank God for what I believe to be the achievement of this Conference for the work of our Church in the lands outside the United States as well as in it. May our best hopes be fulfilled; may our supreme purposes be realized for the Master's sake, God give you journeying mercies. God protect you as you go; some of you on very long journeys, to your homes.

"God be with you till we meet again,
Keep love's banner floating o'er you;
Smite death's threatening wave before you."

Prayer was offered by Bishop Herbert Welch.

Hymn 5, beginning, "From All That Dwell Below the Skies," was sung, and Bishop McDowell declared the thirtieth delegated General Conference adjourned, and the benediction was pronounced by Bishop J. W. Hamilton.

REPORT NO. 14. CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT ON EPISCOPAL TERM

On the proposal referred to it by the General Conference your Committee recommends:

That Division III, Chapter II, Article X, Section 3, of the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church be amended by adding these words: "and may elect General Superintendents for such term, or terms, as it shall determine," so that the entire section shall read: "The General Conference shall not change nor alter any part or rule of our government so as to do away Episcopacy, nor destroy the plan of our itinerant General Superintendency; but may elect a Missionary Bishop or Superintendent for any of our foreign missions, limiting his episcopal jurisdiction to the same respectively; and may elect General Superintendents and Missionary Bishops or Superintendents for such term, or terms, as it shall determine."

2. That we request the General Conference to vote on this proposed amendment, and if it shall receive the necessary recommendation of the General Conference, it shall be submitted to the several Annual and Lay Electoral Conferences meeting during the year 1929 for their action.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 15. SUPPORT OF REV. ANTON BAST

Your Committee, to which was referred for favorable consideration the matter of support of the Rev. Anton Bast, after careful study and consideration respectfully reports as follows:

We recommend the payment of eight hundred ($800) from the Episcopal Fund to the Rev. Anton Bast, to cover support for the month of June and for expenses of the return journey, and payments from the same Fund of Seventy-five dollars ($75) monthly, until he shall receive an appointment in an Annual Conference, or obtain other employment outside of the Church; such payments not to continue, however, for more than six months after July 1, 1928.

Adopted, May 28.

REPORT NO. 16.—RESIDENCE AT SEOUL-MANILA

Your Committee, after full consideration of the subject of residence, respectfully recommends:

1. That the residences at Seoul and Manila be combined into one residence, to be called Seoul-Manila.

2. Pending the election of a bishop or bishops by the Eastern Asia Central Conference, we recommend to the Board of Bishops that supplemental episcopal supervision be granted to the Conferences of Eastern Asia;

Furthermore, it is understood that the resident bishop assigned to Seoul-Manila divide the time of his residence between Seoul and Manila, according to his best judgment.

NOTE:—For the above report the following was substituted: "that the residences remain as they now are at Seoul and Manila."

Report, as substituted, adopted May 25.

REPORT NO. 17. MISSIONARY BISHOP FOR SINGAPORE

Your Committee, having considered the subject of Episcopal Supervision in Southeastern Asia, respectfully recommends that this General Conference make Singapore a residence for a Missionary Bishop.

Adopted, May 26.

NOTE:—Later action on the same date eliminated Manila as an Episcopal Residence, and requested the Bishops to place the former Manila Area with Singapore.

REPORT No. 22.—MATTER OF FIRST CHURCH, OSHKOSH, WISCONSIN

Your Committee, to which was referred the petition of First Church, Oshkosh, Wisconsin, recommends to the General Conference the appointment of a Committee of Seven, consisting of Bishop E. H. Hughes, Bishop Charles E. Locke, Rev. John Thompson, Rev. F. W. Harris, Rev. J. A. Holmes, Rev. E. D. Kohlstedt, and George A. Jacobs, to continue inquiry and investigation and that they be authorized to represent the Methodist Episcopal Church in seeking to heal the hurt of this Church, and to further any steps for the relief of said Church.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT No. 23. JUDICIAL PROCEDURE

Your Committee, having considered Memorials Nos. 1160, 1207, 692 and 882, presents the following recommendations:

1. Amend Discipline, ¶ 244, by adding the words, "Complaints or charges under this paragraph shall be designated 'Teaching contrary to the standards of the church,'" so that the paragraph as amended, shall read:

¶ 244. If a Bishop be charged with disseminating publicly or privately doctrines which are contrary to our Articles of Religion, or our other present existing and established standards of doctrine, the same procedure shall be observed as is prescribed in ¶ 241, or he may be brought to trial before the General Conference. Complaints or charges under this paragraph shall be designated, "Teaching contrary to the standards of the Church."

2. Amend ¶ 245 by adding the words, "Complaints or charges under this paragraph shall be designated 'Maladministration.'" so that the paragraph as amended shall read: "Complaint against the administration of a Bishop may be forwarded to the General Conference and entertained there; provided that in its judgment he has had due notice of such complaint. Complaints or charges under this paragraph shall be designated 'Maladministration.'" "

3. Add new paragraph to follow ¶ 245, to read as follows:

"¶ 246. Charges against a Bishop of 'Teaching contrary to the standards of the Church,' or 'Maladministration' shall not be entertained unless signed by not less than five Traveling Elders."

4. Amend ¶ 246 by striking out the words, "or when charges against a Bishop are presented directly to the General Conference," making the paragraph as amended § 1 of ¶ 247, to read as follows:

"¶ 247, § 1. When a Bishop has been suspended by a Committee of Investigation, the General Conference shall try the accused in due form, etc., etc."

5. Add to ¶ 247, a new section which shall read:

"§ 2. When charges against a Bishop are presented directly to the General Conference said charges shall be presented to the Secretary of the General Conference in the same manner as memorials and shall be referred to the Committee on Episcopacy, which committee shall duly consider said charges and shall make report to the General Conference with recommendations, either that the charges be not entertained or that trial be ordered under provisions of ¶ 247, § 1."

6. In Part V, Chapter 1, under the head, "Trial of a Bishop," omit the "Note." "Throughout Part V of the Discipline—Judicial Administration—the term 'Immorality' (see page 195, Disc., 1924) is used to include any violation of the moral law."

We further recommend that a Commission consisting of five persons be named at this General Conference by the Committee of Chairmen, to report to the General Conference of 1932 recommendations for a revision of the entire subject of Judicial Procedure.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT No. 25. "SUPPORT" AND "OFFICIAL TRAVEL" OF BISHOPS

In response to Memorials 638 and 643, dealing with allowance for "support" and "official travel" of Bishops, your committee begs leave to recommend the following, to be inserted in the Appendix of the Discipline, as directed to the Book Committee, which has authority in these matters.

"Official travel" of an effective Bishop shall be interpreted to include all visitations within his Area to Church institutions or enterprises of the Methodist Episcopal Church, where the call of need or opportunity warrants his presence and service. "Official travel" shall include also such journeys outside his Area as are within the meaning of "travel through the Connection at large." For all such official travel within and outside his Area, an Effective Bishop shall have right of claim upon the Episcopal Fund, upon presentation of itemized voucher, as prescribed by the Book Committee. No part of the expense of such visitations shall be accepted from local Methodist Episcopal Churches or enterprises within the Bishop's Area, or of visitations made while in official "travel through the Connection at large."

The allowance for salary of effective Bishops shall be interpreted to mean compensation in full for all services rendered by a Bishop to Church institutions or enterprises of the Methodist Episcopal Church within his Area, or while on official "travel through the Connection at large." All such services are included under the "Duties of a Bishop."

Nothing in this interpretation is intended to preclude the acceptance of an honorarium for special or non-official engagements of a Bishop outside his Area, or for services rendered upon invitation from other than Methodist Episcopal Church enterprises within his Area, provided, that such engagements do not interfere with his official duties. It is evident that the salary allowance of effective Bishops for the quadrennium ending in 1928, is inadequate when measured against expenses incident to the office, and the salary standards of our larger churches. The Book Committee is hereby authorized to provide adequately and equitably in fixing the salary allowances of the Effective Bishops.

Adopted, May 29.

II. JUDICIARY

REPORT NO. 1. RIGHT OF GENERAL CONFERENCE TO GRANT POWER TO CENTRAL CONFERENCE TO ELECT BISHOPS FOR THEIR RESPECTIVE FIELDS

The Committee on Judiciary has been instructed by the General Conference to report its opinion on the question "Whether the General Conference may authorize and empower the several Central Conferences, or any of them, to elect a Bishop or Bishops for their respective fields, under such conditions, tenure, powers and privileges as the General Conference shall determine."

We answer that, in our opinion, the General Conference has no such power.

Sub-paragraph 3 of ¶ 46 reads as follows:

"The General Conference shall not change nor alter any part or rule of our government so as to do away Episcopacy, nor destroy the plan of our itinerant General Superintendency; but may elect a Missionary Bishop, or Superintendent for any of our foreign missions, limiting his Episcopal jurisdiction to the same respectively."

Clearly, under this restrictive rule, the General Conference has power to elect a Missionary Bishop or Superintendent for foreign mission, but no further power is given.

To permit the Central Conferences to select their own Bishop would be giving unwarranted authority. Such action would be contrary to the restrictive rule.

We, of course, express no opinion upon the desirability or otherwise of the Central Conferences acting for themselves; only suggesting that if considered wise the Constitution can be easily amended by following the method laid down in ¶ 47 of the Discipline (1924) under the subject "Amendments."

Adopted, May 10.

REPORT NO. 2. POWER OF DELEGATE TO REFUSE TO PRESENT A PETITION WITH WHICH HE DOES NOT AGREE

Your Committee on Judiciary has been instructed by the General Conference to report its opinion on the question: "Is it illegal for a delegate to refuse to present a petition because he does not agree with it?"

Your Committee in passing upon the above question has considered it purely from a legal standpoint. In the statement of facts it is undisputed that any member of the Methodist Episcopal Church may present a petition to the General Conference without the agency or assistance of a delegate to the General Conference.

One means of getting a petition before the General Conference is provided by Rule 34, which says:

"Rule 34. Memorials, Petitions, etc., for reference to Committee may be mailed to the Secretary of the General Conference at any time within four months previous to the session of the General Conference, for early classification and reference to the several standing Committees."

"This rule clearly provides an avenue for a petitioner whereby he may get his petition before the General Conference without calling upon a delegate to present the same.

Your Committee is of the opinion that there is no law of the Church compelling a delegate to present a petition.

Adopted, May 11.

REPORT NO. 3. SEATING OF A RESERVE DELEGATE

Your Committee on Judiciary, to which was referred a question concerning the place to be taken by a Reserve Delegate when a vacancy occurs in the Delegation, reports that there is no law governing the matter, and that precedents are not uniform.

Therefore, having in mind the rights of Regular and Reserve Delegates and the necessity that the work of the General Conference proceed with least interruption, your Committee suggests the following practice:

Since the Annual Conference and the Lay Electoral Conference obviously wished to be represented by a Reserve Delegate only in case of a vacancy in the regular delegation, a Reserve Delegate should take last place in the Delegation when such vacancy occurs before the General Conference meets.

Adopted, May 11.

REPORT NO. 4. EXPENSES OF THE BISHOP BAST INVESTIGATION

Your Committee on Judiciary, to whom were referred certain questions relative to expenditure made by order of the Book Committee to provide for certain expenses incurred in the conduct of the case of Bishop Bast, report as follows:

While there is no precedent for such a case, and while there is no law of the Church authorizing such expenditures, nevertheless, in view of the facts which have been brought to the attention of this Committee we advise that the General Conference approve the payments amounting to $26,901.29, made by the Book Committee in this case, that the expenses of the Bishop who presided at the investigation amounting to $1,516.56 be charged to the Episcopal fund, and that the other items amounting to $25,384.70 be charged to the General Conference expense fund.

Adopted, May 11.

REPORT NO. 5. POWER OF BISHOPS TO APPOINT DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS

The Committee on Judiciary, to which was referred Memorial, 444, signed by T. J. Myers and others of the Iowa Conference, concerning "The Appointing Power in Reference to District Superintendents," begs leave to submit the following report.

1. Question: "Under the Constitution and the decisions thereupon does the Presiding Bishop have sole power to 'choose and appoint the District Superintendents annually?'"

Answer: Yes. This was so decided by the General Conference of 1924. (See Daily Christian Advocate, 1924, p. 610, and Journal of 1924, p. 374.)

2. Question: "Does the General Conference have the legal right to limit a presiding Bishop in his power to appoint the District Superintendents by providing that he shall not reappoint a District Superintendent who has served six years in a consecutive twelve?"

Answer: The General Conference, in passing the provision found in Article 208, § 2, "He shall not allow a District Superintendent to preside in the same district more than six consecutive years, nor more than six years in any consecutive twelve in the same Annual Conference," is directing where and how a presiding Bishop may use a power that is solely his. For years, pastors were compelled to be appointed to other charges at the end of certain fixed periods of time. This did not limit the Bishop in exercising his power of appointment, but rather directed when he must exercise a power that was solely his.

Therefore, by analogy and by force of a practice long continued in regard to other appointments, we are led to decide that under our Constitution the General Conference has the right to direct a Bishop not to reappoint a District Superintendent who has served six years in any consecutive twelve in the same Annual Conference.

Adopted, May 11.

REPORT NO. 6. CONCERNING THE ELECTION BY A LAY ELECTORAL CONFERENCE OF CHAIRMAN OR SECRETARY, NOT MEMBERS OF THE BODY

The Committee on Judiciary, to whom was referred the question, "Is it proper for the Lay Electoral Conference to elect to the office of chairman or secretary persons who are not members of that body?" reports that in the light of ¶ 39 of the Discipline, and particularly the words in § 1, "It shall be composed of members, one from each pastoral charge," and also Section 3, "The Lay Electoral Conference shall organize by electing a president and secretary, shall adopt its own Rules of Order," it is not proper to elect as chairman and secretary persons who are not members of said Conference.

Adopted, May 14.

REPORT NO. 7. IN REFERENCE TO THE UNITING OF TWO OR MORE CONFERENCES BY IMMEDIATE ACTION
WITHOUT AN ENABLING ACT

The General Conference referred to the Judiciary Committee two questions from the Committee on Boundaries, as follows:

1. "When duly requested by a majority vote of the Conferences involved, may the General Conference, through its Committee on Boundaries, unite the two or more Annual Conferences, making the request, by immediate action, without resorting to the use of an enabling act?"

To which question we make answer:

The General Conference has such power under the provisions of Chapter I, pages 393-405 of the Discipline of 1924.

2. "When duly requested by a majority vote of the Annual Conference involved, may the General Conference, through its Committee on Boundaries, dissolve said Conference and organize a mission in its stead by immediate action without resort to an enabling act?"

Our answer is that when duly requested so to do, by a majority vote of an Annual Conference, the General Conference has full power to organize such Annual Conference into a Mission or a Mission Conference.

Adopted, May 14.

REPORT NO. 8. AUTHORITY OF BISHOP TO PLEDGE THE CREDIT OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN HIS AREA

The General Conference has referred to the Committee on Judiciary the following question:

"What authority does a Bishop have to pledge the credit of the Methodist Episcopal Church in his area, the credit of any Annual Conference therein, or the credit of any Church institution in it to the payment of any debt created by any Annual Conference or Church institution in it?"

In response to this inquiry, your Committee answers as follows: A Bishop has no authority except as it is conferred by the Discipline of the Church. He has no authority to pledge the credit of the Church or of any part of it. ¶¶ 207 and 208 of the Discipline of 1924 prescribe his duties, ¶¶ 209 to 213 define his powers, and ¶ 573 holds him responsible for the administration and supervision of the temporal interests of the Church in his Area.

Section 8 of ¶ 207 imposes on the Bishop the duty "To oversee the spiritual and temporal business of the Church." This duty so far as it relates to the temporal business of the Church is one of oversight or supervision of the acts of those bodies which are authorized to transact the temporal business of the Church. This part of the Discipline does not authorize the Bishop to do the business that should be done by these bodies, nor allow him to compel them to do otherwise than as they wish, provided such bodies transact their business in conformity with the provisions of the Discipline. Though limited to oversight and supervision, a Bishop is not excluded from advising in respect to the temporal interests of the Church or of any part of it. His advice should always be sought by those transacting the temporal business of the Church and his efforts to advance those interests are heartily endorsed and commended.

Part of § 1 of ¶ 573 of the Discipline of 1924 reads as follows: "We recommend that in the intervals of the Annual Conference sessions, each resident Bishop shall be held responsible for the administration of the spiritual and temporal interests of the Church in those Conferences adjacent to his residence." This provision of the Discipline must be construed in connection with all the provisions giving powers to annual, district and quarterly Conferences, to Pastors, to Boards of Trustees of schools, colleges, and hospitals and homes, and to all the temporal institutions of the Church. The powers given to these bodies are expressly conferred by the Discipline and must control.

What is meant by responsibility for the administration of the temporal interests of the Church? Does it mean that the Bishop is given control over those interests? Such a power would necessarily conflict with the powers given by the Discipline to other persons, organizations and bodies. Under these circumstances, the responsibility of the Bishop for the administration of the temporal interests of the Church extends to supervision and oversight of these interests, not to the control of them. He has no power to replace or supersede those persons directly responsible for the control of those interests, nor is power conferred on the Bishop to make any contract concerning these interests. This provision is intended to secure supervision and oversight of them by the Bishop. It does not go farther than that.

The Bishop can recommend action by the body authorized to act, but he cannot compel action. He can approve or disapprove action that has been taken, but he cannot annul such action.

Property of the Church or of any Church institution cannot be affected by any pledge that a Bishop may make; he cannot make anyone liable but himself.

Adopted, May 18.

REPORT NO. 9. PETITION OF HERVEY C. IRWIN

Report of Committee on Judiciary, to which was referred the Petition of Hervey C. Irwin from decision of a Bishop while presiding at the Philadelphia Conference,

The questions involved in this Petition arise from alleged irregularities in the election of Trustees of "Cynwyd" Church, near Philadelphia.

Your Committee is of the opinion that this matter is not properly before us for the reason that the power to review an election of Church Trustees is vested in the Quarterly Conference.

¶ 108, § 1, page 112.

In the event of an alleged illegal election, redress may be had either by appeal to the next Quarterly Conference, Discipline ¶ 348, page 253, or by application to the civil courts.

Adopted, May 18.

REPORT NO. 10. WHEN IS A METHODIST CHURCH ORGANIZED?

A memorial submitted by the California Annual Conference desires an answer to the following questions:

(a) Does the organization of a Methodist class meeting constitute the organization of a Methodist Church? or

(b) Does it require Quarterly Conference action to constitute the organization of a Methodist Church?

Answer: We have in the Discipline a chapter on Classes and Class Meetings (¶¶ 60 to 64) in which, however, no reference is made to the organization of Methodist Churches, but we do find in ¶ 193 a provision that has a bearing on this subject. It is as follows:

"A District Superintendent, or a Preacher acting under authority of the District Superintendent, may organize a local Church by calling together the persons interested, receiving them into the Church as preparatory members, or by letter, or on profession of faith from other denominations; and by appointing Class Leaders, Stewards, and such other Church officers as may be necessary for the initial period of the Charge, until it is in condition to be more fully organized in the regular way according to the Book of Discipline."

On the basis of this provision your Committee takes the position that while the organization of a Class Meeting may be the nucleus to the organization of a Methodist Church, nevertheless a Methodist Episcopal Church is not actually constituted without the authority of a District Superintendent or a Preacher acting under his direction.

Adopted, May 18.

REPORT NO. 11. LEGALITY OF RATIO OF ONE TO FORTY-FIVE MEMBERS FOR REPRESENTATION IN GENERAL CONFERENCE

The Committee on Temporal Economy has asked whether a General Conference, under ¶ 38, as now amended, may legally fix the ratio of representation at one ministerial delegate for every forty-five members of the Annual Conference.

Our answer is "yes." ¶ 38 of the Discipline of 1924, as amended, explicitly gives this right to the General Conference to fix the ratio at one to forty-five members. The second half of the second sentence, granting an additional delegate for a fraction of two-thirds of the number fixed, must be read as modifying the first half of this sentence, and the ratio fixed at forty-five is not illegal, although it may permit two delegates for less than 90 members by virtue of an additional delegate granted for the fraction of two-thirds over the forty-five fixed ratio.

Adopted, May 18.

REPORT NO. 12. REGARDING THE WITHDRAWAL OF SURRENDERED CREDENTIALS

Your Committee on Judiciary has been asked to answer the following question:

"When a Minister has surrendered his credentials and has presented a statement to an Annual Conference recording his purpose to withdraw from the ministry, and the Conference has concluded its action thereon, may the Minister so withdrawing allege at a subsequent time that his withdrawal was for the purpose of joining the ministry of another church and, upon the basis of such allegation, demand the return of his credentials?"

The answer of your Committee is that a Minister cannot under such circumstances demand, in the sense that he would thus compel, the return of his credentials.

Your Committee has also been asked to answer the following question:

"When a minister presents his credentials to an Annual Conference, alleging his purpose to join the ministry of another church, must he support his allegation of purpose by evidence of the readiness of another church to receive him into its ministry?"

The assumption in this inquiry is that the Minister so presenting his credentials is asking that these be returned to him with the disciplinary notation suggested in ¶ 172.

The answer of this Committee to this inquiry is that the Annual Conference may ask for such evidence before granting the request to return his credentials to a member who is about to withdraw from its membership. The return of credentials is a favor or courtesy to the Minister which the law of the Church does not compel an Annual Conference to grant. That body may or may not make such return of credentials. It follows, therefore, that the Conference may determine the conditions on which it will grant this favor or courtesy.

Adopted, May 18.

REPORT NO. 14. QUESTION CONCERNING THE CANONICAL SCRIPTURES

There has been referred to the Judiciary Committee a petition from a member of the Des Moines Conference wherein he asks a certain question concerning the canonical Scriptures. The document does not show that any person or persons have been charged with any violation of the law of the Church and calls for an opinion wholly without the authority of the Judiciary Committee to give.

Your committee respectfully calls the attention of the General Conference to a resolution passed by the General Conference of 1888 through its Judiciary Committee which has never been changed. It reads as follows:

"Resolved, That the Committee on Judiciary be relieved from the consideration of all abstract questions of law referred to them, and that they shall report such matters only as are involved in actual cases submitted." (Journal 1888, page 275. Reports on Judicial Decisions, pages 54 and 55.)

We reaffirm that decision and respectfully return the petition unanswered.

Adopted, May 18.

REPORT NO. 15. AS TO VALIDITY OF APPENDIX, PARAGRAPHS 565-625

The question is asked, "Whether or not these sixty pages (565-625) are in effect at this time and will continue in effect after the General Conference, provided they are not re-enacted by this General Conference?"

Answer: Chapter IV is headed, "General Conference Reports and Resolutions." These reports and resolutions were collated and placed in the appendix by the Editor of the Discipline because he believed them "sufficiently important to justify publication." Whenever any one of them has not lost validity because the situation to which it refers no longer exists (e. g., "Resolutions Concerning the Plan of Unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South") it is still in effect and will so continue unless and until it is contravened by some action of a succeeding General Conference.

Adopted, May 18.

REPORT No. 18. CONSTITUTIONALITY OF ELECTION OF BISHOPS FOR A LIMITED TERM

The General Conference has referred to the Committee on Judiciary the following specific question (No. 1191) for answer, to wit:

"Whereas, The question of the election of Bishops for a limited term of years is now before the General Conference, the report of the Committee on Episcopacy dealing with this subject having been printed in The Daily Christian Advocate; and

"Whereas, A primary consideration in reaching a conclusion on this matter is the constitutionality of such an election; therefore be it

"Resolved, That the General Conference hereby requests the Committee on Judiciary to report at the earliest possible moment a decision on the constitutionality of the election of Bishops for a limited term of years with or without provision for re-election."

Reduced to its simplest form this is the question: "May the General Conference elect Bishops for a limited term?"

Two primary considerations at once are suggested:

1. Is it expedient, and
2. Is it lawful, so to elect?

The General Conference in its consideration of the question propounded is sitting as a judicial body. It is a pure question of law which we are called upon to decide. The Judiciary Committee must endeavor to answer this question with impartiality and so should the members of the General Conference, free of bias and prejudice.

Much of inaccuracy has crept into prior discussions and the questions of expediency and of laws have been confused.

We shall not, nor should the General Conference permit itself to, discuss the matter of expediency. That has nothing to do with the law of the case. Therefore, we shall consider the matter solely as to whether it is lawful so to elect.

Our founder, John Wesley, believed in the Episcopal form of Church government and as early as 1756, he said: "I believe the Episcopal form of Church government to agree with the practice and writings of the Apostles." Under date of September 10, 1784, in his letter to "Dr. Coke, Mr. Asbury and our brethren in North America," he referred to the Church of England when he wrote: "I think it the best constituted national Church in the world," and speaking thus directly to our early brethren, he added: "They are now at full liberty simply to follow the Scripture and the primitive Church."

Quoting from an original copy of the Discipline of 1808 now before us, it is stated:

"Our venerable friend, who under God, had been the Father of the great revival of religion now extending over the earth, by the means of the Methodists, determined to ordain ministers for America; and for this purpose, in the year 1784, sent over three regularly ordained clergy, but preferring the Episcopal mode of Church government to any other, he solemnly set apart, by the imposition of his hands, and prayer, one of them, viz.: Thomas Coke, Doctor of Civil Law, late of Jesus College in the University of Oxford, and a presbyter of the Church of England, for the Episcopal office and having delivered to him letters of Episcopal orders, commissioned and directed him to set apart Francis Asbury, then General Assistant to the Methodist Society in America, for the same Episcopal office, by prayer, and the imposition of the hands of the said Thomas Coke, other regularly ordained Ministers assisting in the sacred ceremony, at which time the General Conference, held at Baltimore, did unanimously receive the said Thomas Coke and Francis Asbury as their Bishops, being fully satisfied of the validity of their Episcopal ordination." (Pages 5, 6, Discipline 1808.)

Thus the fact that the Conference of 1784 unanimously elected Coke and Asbury is confirmed by the record made twenty-four years later.

We are all familiar with the fact that Wesley claimed: "I firmly believe that I am a Scriptural Episcopos, as much as any man in England or in Europe."

No one within the Church disputes that John Wesley performed the duties and exercised the powers of Episcopal authority in England so long as he lived. If our Episcopacy be challenged, may not Wesley's assertion be equally disputed? Wesley by his actions and words instituted the proceedings whereby the Methodist Episcopal Church was founded in America, in 1784, as we find recorded in the Discipline of 1808. This ancient record can hardly be challenged after the lapse of one hundred and twenty years.

It may be conceded that Wesley without any reference to the question of tenure rebuked those General Superintendents thus created for using the title of Bishops and that some of his followers at subsequent periods rebelled against their alleged authority and that there have been other protests made since, but the great majority of those followers have been loyal to the form of government thus founded and administered and the Church has seemingly been prospered under God.

When the delegated General Conference was created in 1808, the Third Restrictive Rule was prescribed, and was enacted as follows:

"They shall not change or alter any part or rule of our government, so as to do away Episcopacy, or destroy the plan of our itinerant General Superintendency." (§ 14, Discipline 1808.)

Such rule has remained firmly imbedded in our Constitution for one hundred and twenty years. Its interpretation ought to be comparatively easy, but has been rendered difficult by reason of disagreement as to the essential or concrete meaning of the word "Episcopacy." Many, also, overlook the words following, or fail to give effect to them, namely: "or destroy the plan of our itinerant General Superintendency."

Our interpretation of the rule is that it did not mean merely the name of a function to be exercised nor a mere paper plan. It means just what it has ever been, and meant to be, so understood and interpreted by John Wesley to mean and be, namely, General Superintendents (commonly designated by recognized custom and courtesy by the title of Bishops) of the Methodist Episcopal Church, performing the duties and exercising the powers of the Episcopacy, amenable to the General Conference according to the accepted law of our Church, as set forth in its Discipline, elected by the General Conference as such, to serve so long as their spirit, practice and doctrine becometh the Gospel of Christ and they shall submit to the Discipline and order of the Methodist Episcopal Church. So these have been chosen, set apart, ordained or consecrated in the same manner during our entire history of one hundred and forty years.

Continuously for so long a period, as a Church we have recognized those who have thus been elected, as overseers of the work, so long as they were efficient and until duly retired by action of the General Conference and in accordance with the Discipline.

It is an interesting and perhaps pertinent fact that the development of the constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church and of the United States practically were contemporaneous.

Observation and study teach us that a Constitution, from its very nature, never has and cannot enter into a minute specification of all minor elements of description and detail. Those are naturally and obviously included in the words used, and from them others are implied.

The men who wrote the Constitution of the Church were doubtless influenced by the arguments and discussions then so universally employed by statesmen as well as churchmen. It should be noted that the Constitution is silent upon the question of tenure. This is an undisputed fact. Had the fathers intended to create an Episcopacy with a possibility for limiting its tenure it could have been easily accomplished by using appropriate words to that effect. This was not done.

By reason of this omission, we at once are led to ask what was in the mind of the brethren when using the word "Episcopacy," which could not be destroyed, or those other words, "nor destroy the plan of our itinerant General Superintendency."

Some method of interpretation must be employed. With Professor Lieber, it may be said:

"That the very basis of all interpretation is, that no sentence or form of words can have more than one true sense, and the whole object of interpretation is to find the precise meaning of the words employed, and above all there must be exercised good faith, without which the object of all interpretation will be destroyed."

Turning to the Federal Constitution by way of example, we find it was therein declared that the "judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court, etc.," but nowhere did it define what was judicial power.

A distinguished writer upon constitutional interpretation speaking with reference to this omission said:

"It was doubtless regarded as unnecessary to enter into a detail of the specific powers of the judiciary. Courts did not originate in constitutions, they originated in the common law, and their powers were then as well established and understood as any other question. Their powers existed and were known at common law. By adopting a judicial department, they, by implication, adopted their powers, and to whatever extent the constitution, or statutes enacted under it, conferred a new, or limited an existing power, the authority of the judiciary was so extended or restricted as the case might be. Without such extension or restriction, the constitution and statutes are to be interpreted by the common law." (Potter's Dwarris on Statutes, 340.)

If the above is regarded a safe rule in all the courts of the land, as it is, will the General Conference, in this greatest of all ecclesiastical tribunals in the world, go far afield, if they are guided by the same unerring doctrine?

Again we find the method adopted by all the Courts to be, that, "in construing a statute of doubtful meaning, the Courts will give weight to the practical construction placed thereon by those charged with the duty of executing and applying it. This rule is especially applicable when the construction has long prevailed and the practical construction of the officer or department has received the implied approval of the legislative body."

Bishop Thomas B. Neely said as late as 1924 that: "The common law of established usage, there being no written law to the contrary, is among the best forms of law, and unwritten law is good law." ("Vital Points in the Methodist Episcopal Church," page 48.)

This rather blunt statement of the law is borne out by many authorities of which we cite some.

"A custom is a usage which has obtained the force of law. In other words, it is a law established by long usage." 17, Corpus Juris, 446. § 1.

Definition of "Custom" by Webster: "Long established practice considered as unwritten law and resting for authority on long consent; a usage that by long continuance acquired a legally binding force."

"Custom is unwritten law, established by Common Consent and uniform practice from time immemorial." (2 Greenleaf 248, quoted from 12 Federal Reporter 504 at 506.)

The Supreme Court of the United States said in 1832 that it would be "a solemn mockery" if it should be required to exclude "from our consideration usages and customs which are the law of every government." (Italics by the Court.) (United States vs. Arrendondo, 6 Peters (U. S.) 715.)

Supported by our traditions, our history, the words, acts and conduct of John Wesley and the Fathers of our Church, as well as by reason and authority we can answer the question asked, as to whether it would be constitutional to elect Bishops for a limited term of years, only in one way, that is to say: No.

The election of Bishops for a limited term can be accomplished only by the adoption of a constitutional amendment in the manner provided by the Discipline—and this remedy is of easy application whenever desirable.

Adopted, May 23.

MINORITY REPORT

A minority whose names are appended beg leave to submit the following report:

The third restrictive rule upon whose interpretation the majority report is based reads as follows: "The General Conference shall not change nor alter any part or rule of our government so as to do away Episcopacy, nor destroy the plan of our itinerant General Superintendency." Here are two things which a General Conference cannot do. They are, stated in inverse order, (a) Change or alter any part or rule of our government so as to . . . destroy the plan of our itinerant General Superintendency; (b) Change or alter any part or rule of our government so as to do away Episcopacy. As to ("a") there would seem to be little difference of opinion. Clearly a term long enough for a Bishop to travel as an itinerant General Superintendent would not violate this rule.

The difference of opinion is as to ("b"). What is the General Conference prohibited from doing? Certainly not to change or alter any part or rule of our government, but it is prohibited from changing or altering any part or rule of our government so as to do away, i. e., destroy, Episcopacy. It is the opinion of this minority that the election of Bishops for one or more quad-renniums would not destroy Episcopacy. It leaves the office unaffected. It changes and alters the length of time the incumbent remains in the office. It does not destroy any of his powers.

It is therefore clearly within the power of the General Conference without changing the constitution to provide for the election of Bishops for a limited term.

REPORT NO. 19. DECISION AS TO VALIDITY OF APPENDIX

The Judiciary Committee to which was referred Memorial No. 1199 submits the following report:

Question: Who shall decide the period of valid life on matters contained in the Appendix of the Discipline?

Answer: Referring to Report No. 15 of the Committee on Judiciary (page 397, Daily Christian Advocate), the validity of a General Conference resolution contained in the Appendix of the Discipline is determined by (a) A situation to which it refers continuing to exist, and (b) no contravening action by the General Conference. The question as to whether one resolution contravenes another is for the General Conference to decide.

Adopted, May 26.

REPORT NO. 20. APPEAL OF SELDON EWING

The appellant was tried upon duly formulated charges before a Select Number appointed for that purpose by the Puget Sound Annual Conference, of which he was a member, in September, 1924; he appeared in person and was also represented by counsel; five of the six charges were sustained and he was found guilty as charged of unministerial and unchristian conduct; thereupon he was deposed from the Ministry and expelled from the membership of the Church.

Within the prescribed time an appeal was taken to a Judicial Conference; such a conference, properly constituted and competent to hear the appeal was convened October 6, 1925; the Appellant had due notice of the time and place of the meeting thereof and was expressly advised in writing by the Bishop assigned to preside at the Judicial Conference that in case of his failure to appear either in person or by Counsel he would lose the right of further appeal.

The Appellant did not appear in either fashion and the Judicial Conference declined to entertain the appeal because of such non-appearance and on the further ground of the Appellant's refusal to abide by the findings of the trial court in failing to surrender his credentials after repeated demands. (Discipline. 1924, ¶ 313, § 1.)

The notice of appeal to the General Conference assigns errors alleged to have infected the proceedings in which the accounts, contracts and circumstances of the supposed delinquent were officially inspected pursuant to ¶ 259 of the Discipline (1924) and the proceedings of the Investigating Committee under ¶ 252, § 1, that antedated the trial before the Select Number.

The notice of appeal also challenges a review from decisions of the presiding Bishop of the Judicial Conference made intermediate as regards the trial at Annual Conference and the meeting of the Judicial Conference.

No appeal lies from the conduct of the official inquiries instituted under ¶ 259 and ¶ 252, § 1, of the Discipline (1924) when they are followed by a trial at the Annual Conference, Discipline (1924) ¶¶ 261, 262. When a trial does not follow, provision for the correction of errors in the preliminary proceedings is made in ¶ 264, § 2, Discipline (1924).

While an appeal directly to the General Conference from decisions of a Bishop is permissible in certain specified conditions such an appeal cannot be entertained in the first instance in case an appeal has been taken to a Judicial Conference; here there was such an appeal and the decisions of the Bishop were reviewable by the Appellate tribunal. Discipline (1924) ¶ 313, § 13.

There being, therefore, no provision for an appeal from the initial inquiries, and the appeal from the decisions of the presiding Bishop being inseparably associated with the appeal from the findings of the Select Number, there remains now to be determined only the propriety of the disposition by the Judicial Conference of the major ground of the appeal.

The appeal was not entertained; it was held that the Appellant had forfeited his right to a review for the reasons above stated; though the Appellant could forfeit his right to an examination of the facts or of the merits, he could not forfeit by his conduct, however contumacious, the right of the Church to correct its error, if any, or exonerate it from the obligation of doing so; it is the duty of the Church to be just, its high privilege to be merciful.

The Appellant was found guilty of unministerial and unchristian conduct; this verdict should stand for the reasons given by the Judicial Conference; a denial of the right to review the facts does not preclude the right nor obviate the duty of scrutinizing the penalty imposed if it be of doubtful legality or is unduly severe; the General Conference is not foreclosed from the performance of this duty, or denied this privilege unless we sacrifice substance to a strict adherence to forms of procedure; forms should dominate only to preserve the substance. The penalty for unministerial conduct can only affect the ministerial function; such conduct together with behavior characterized as "high imprudence" subjects the offender to the maximum penalty of deprivation of his ministerial office and credentials. Discipline (1924) ¶¶ 171, 263, 266; "unchristian conduct" is not found in our terminology and for it no penalty is prescribed.

We find, therefore, that the penalty imposed is of questionable legality and unduly oppressive, and constitutes such a serious error that justice requires its correction. (Discipline 1924, § 300.)

Our decision is that the penalty imposed by the Trial Court be changed by striking out therefrom the provision expelling the accused from membership in the Church, and that the judgment so modified shall stand, provided the Appellant within sixty days surrenders his credentials to the Secretary of the Puget Sound Conference; in case of his failure so to do the decision of the Trial Court is to remain unchanged.

Your Committee was attended by Rev. Francis LaViolette and Rev. E. M. Hill as accredited Counsel for the Church and for the Appellant, respectively; the Appellant had due notice of the appointed hearing of his appeal but was unable to be present, as your Committee was informed by his Counsel.

Adopted, May 26.

REPORT NO. 21. TERM OF DELEGATE TO LAY ELECTORAL CONFERENCE

Your Judiciary Committee has been requested to answer the following question:

"Are delegates to Lay Electoral Conferences elected for the Quadrennium, or must there be a new election in the regular way by the Churches for each and every special session of the Lay Electoral Conference?"

We find no direct provision in the Discipline covering this question but by inference based on what clearly seems to be a fair interpretation of parts of two different paragraphs of the 1924 Discipline, we reach the conclusion that delegates to Lay Electoral Conferences are not elected for the Quadrennium. ¶ 39, § 1, reads in part as follows:

"A Lay Electoral Conference shall be constituted quadrennially, or whenever duly called for by the General Conference, within the bounds of each Annual Conference, for the purpose of electing lay delegates to the General Conference, and for the purpose of voting on constitutional changes."

¶ 41, § 3, after providing for special sessions of Annual Conferences continues as follows:

"They (General Superintendents) may also in such cases call extra sessions of the Lay Electoral Conferences for the purpose of electing Lay Delegates to the General Conference."

In the first paragraph quoted we call special attention to the words "or whenever duly called by the General Conference." To hold that Delegates to Lay Electoral Conferences are elected for the quadrennium would render the above quoted provisions meaningless and superfluous. The fact that these two provisions are inserted in the Discipline clearly indicates that the General Conference did not intend Lay Electoral Conferences to be elected for the quadrennium.

Adopted May 28.

REPORT NO. 22. THE RULINGS OF THE BISHOPS

Your Committee on the Judiciary, acting under ¶ 566, Rule 40, § 3, of the Discipline of 1924, (2) hereby reports that we have carefully reviewed the rulings of the Bishops during the Quadrennium 1924-1928, and we recommend that they be approved. The rulings as reviewed and approved are as follows:

RULINGS ADOPTED NOVEMBER, 1924

Question 93—Are the Lay Electoral Conferences that are required by General Conference action to vote on the proposed Constitutional Amendments during the calendar year 1925 the Conferences that were last elected, or is it necessary that there should be a new election?

Answer—We recommend the election of new Lay Electoral Conferences to vote on the Constitutional Questions ordered by the General Conference to be submitted for a vote during the calendar year 1925 whenever it is possible to elect the delegates in the Disciplinary manner. Where this cannot be done because the first and third Quarterly Conferences have already been held, the Lay Electoral Conferences last elected shall be recalled to vote on these Questions.

Question 94—Is it legal to appoint a Conference Evangelist whose work will not be entirely within the bounds of his Conference?

Answer—Inasmuch as the phrase, "within the Conference," has been dropped from Paragraph 208, Section 4, Sub-section 8, relating to Conference Evangelists, it is our opinion that the Bishop on the proper request of an Annual Conference is at liberty to appoint a Conference Evangelist whose work need not be entirely confined within that Conference.

Question 95—If a minister is appointed to serve an institution or organization not under the control of, or under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church, does he lose his claim for the years he serves such an institution?

Answer—He does. See ¶ 341, Sec. 2.

Question 96—Is the calling of an adjourned session of a regular General Conference in the interim between two quadrennial General Conferences legal?

Answer—The General Conference has approved the calling of such a session in its ruling adopted in 1920. Such a session is therefore legal.

Question 97—Was the action of the District Superintendents of the Pittsburgh Conference in refusing to entertain charges of maladministration against Bishop McConnell in connection with the case of the Rev. R. H. Little of the Pittsburgh Conference legal?

Answer—The District Superintendents of the Pittsburgh Conference refused to consider a restatement of the substance of matters that had been before the Committee on Episcopacy of the General Conference and had been dismissed by this Committee. In deciding that no further action needed to be taken, as no new matter had been presented, they acted in accordance with the Law of the Church.

Question 98—Was the ruling of Bishop McConnell in refusing to entertain the renewal of charges against Rev. R. H. Little of the Pittsburgh Conference legal?

Answer—The only appeal from a legal ruling by a Bishop is to the General Conference.

Question 99—Is the General Conference estopped by the General Rules, or by the Restrictive Rules, from changing the Law of the Church on Divorce?

Answer—This is a question to be answered by the General Conference, and not by the Board of Bishops.

RULINGS ADOPTED MAY, 1925

Question 100—Have the Stewards of an Annual Conference the right to grant a retiring allowance to a member of the Annual Conference in the interim between Conference session without the vote of the Annual Conference granting the brother the retired relation?

Answer—There is no law giving the Board of Stewards this right.

Question 101—Can a Conference member over sixty-five years of age retire during the interim between Conference sessions?

Answer—He cannot. All changes of Conference relation are made at and by vote of the Annual Conference. See Paragraph 188, Section 2, and Paragraph 81, Section 4, Discipline of 1924.

Question 102—Has the Board of Stewards of an Annual Conference the right to withhold all or a part of a retired minister's claim during the interim between Conference sessions for any cause which may seem to them sufficient?

Answer—There is no law definitely determining this possible action.

Question 103—A petition from the Des Moines Conference requested the enforcement of the Disciplinary law concerning prorating. In the paper occurs this question, What is the attitude of the Board of Bishops in regard to the enforcement of the law concerning the matter of prorating?

Answer—The duty of the Bishops in this particular is found in the Discipline of 1924, Paragraph 87. This duty the Bishops scrupulously perform.

Question 104—Can Trustees of an Annual Conference give money that they have received from the sale of churches to the Conference Endowment Fund for retired ministers?

Answer—They cannot. Under Paragraphs 360, 361, and 363, Discipline of 1924, Trustees of an Annual Conference are not authorized to use the proceeds of abandoned church property for the veteran preachers' Endowment Fund.

Question 105—When a Conference is changed from Spring to Fall, or vice versa, how long a time must elapse between Conference sessions in order that the time so elapsing may be counted as a full Conference year?

Answer—Under these conditions more than six months may be counted as a full Conference year.

Question 106—Is it possible for an Annual Conference to reconsider a vote which has been taken on proposed Constitutional Amendments?

Answer—There is no Disciplinary provision for such reconsideration. See Discipline of 1924, Paragraph 47 and Paragraph 602, Section 3.

Question 107—Certain questions have arisen about church properties that were formerly in the North German Conference that has been merged with the Minnesota Conference. The question is asked concerning these property rights.

Answer—Any property rights that pertain to properties formerly in the North German Conference now inhere in the Conference with which the North German Conference has been united, or to which the property in question may have been transferred.

Question 108—Under what circumstances may church property be declared abandoned, and its sale ordered?

Answer—When the Trustees, if there is no Quarterly Conference involved; the Quarterly Conference that has immediate jurisdiction; or the Annual Conference within whose jurisdiction the church is located decides that it is desirable or necessary that these steps be taken. Discipline of 1924, Paragraph 362.

Question 109—What are the rights of the unorganized community in which abandoned church property is located, particularly the member of the community who may have contributed to the erection of the buildings and the maintenance of worship?

Answer—No such rights have been defined, and in our judgment, no such rights exist.

Question 110—What are the claims of contiguous Methodist Episcopal Churches in the event of the sale of abandoned church property?

Answer—The decision as to just claims of this nature lies with the Annual Conference. Discipline of 1924, Paragraphs 360 and 362.

Question 111—A circuit has two or more church properties, each held by a separate Board of Trustees. One such church is abandoned. Can the trustees of this abandoned church convey the equity to another Board of Trustees in the same circuit?

Answer—This may be done by the direction of the Quarterly Conference. Discipline of 1924, Paragraph 361.

RULINGS ADOPTED NOVEMBER, 1925

Question 112—Has a District Conference power to license a candidate in his absence?

Answer—The Discipline requires that the candidate shall be examined on Doctrine and Discipline in the presence of the Quarterly Conference. See Discipline 1924, Paragraph 220, Item 1. It is our opinion, therefore, that a candidate cannot be licensed in his absence.

Question 113—Has an Annual Conference the right to grant probationers the privilege of the Conference floor? If so, does this right include the right to make and second motions?

Answer—The general extension of the right to debate to probationers in an Annual Conference seems to us of doubtful legality and more than doubtful wisdom. The extension of the right to the floor in an Annual Conference is one that should be exercised by the Conference only when, in its judgment, the interests of the Church can best be served by such extension. It is a courtesy, not a right that any group can claim. In any case, such extension does not carry the right to make or second motions.

Question 114—Does the Discipline, 1924, contemplate the election and meeting of a Lay Electoral Conference in a Mission Conference for the purpose of voting on proposed changes in the Constitution of the Church? If such Lay Electoral Conference meet and vote on changes in the Constitution, is the vote valid?

Answer—The General Conference of 1924 removed from the members of Mission Conferences the disability of being debarred from voting on proposed changes in the Constitution. However, no provision has been made by the General Conference for the laity in a Mission Conference to elect representatives for the purpose of voting on such proposed changes. We therefore hold that under the law of the Church a Lay Conference may not legally be convened in a Mission Conference for the purpose of voting on proposed Constitution changes. If any such Electoral Conference has met and voted, the validity, or otherwise, of the vote so cast is left to the General Conference.

Question 115—Can members of a church be marked as withdrawn by the pastor or the official board without having asked in writing to be allowed to withdraw, or without having united with any other church?

Answer—According to Paragraph 59 of Discipline, 1924, a member of the Church cannot be considered as withdrawn unless he communicates his purpose to withdraw to the pastor in writing. A pastor or official board has no power to determine the status or membership of a member of the Church except as provided in the Discipline.

Question 116—Can Mission Conferences participate in the distribution of the Chartered Fund?

Answer—According to Paragraph 509, Discipline, 1924, the interests of the Chartered Fund shall be divided into as many equal parts as there are Annual Conferences. According to this Paragraph it does not appear that Mission Conferences have any claim upon the Chartered Fund.

Inasmuch, however, as the purpose of the Chartered Fund as stated in Paragraph 509, Section 1, would include members of Mission Conferences, we recommend that the next General Conference provide for their participation in the distribution of the Fund.

Question 117—By what method may a Conference be transferred from one Area to another in the interval between General Conferences? Also, how are newly organized Conferences to be assigned for Area supervision?

Answer—Upon the death of a Bishop during a quadrennium, or upon any other emergency deemed by the Board of Bishops sufficient to require such action, the law of the Church authorizes the Board of Bishops to make such changes in the supervision of the Areas as will best conserve the interests of the work. In any emergency, therefore, the General Superintendents have a right to make changes in Area Assignments between sessions of the General Conference. This includes the assignment of newly organized Missions or Conferences. See Paragraph 573, Section 3, Discipline, 1924.

RULINGS ADOPTED MAY, 1926

Question 118—Is a candidate for admission on trial in an Annual Conference obliged to serve three years under a District Superintendent before he can be admitted on trial?

Answer—This Rule, Paragraph 617, Section 2, Discipline of 1924, applies only to candidates for admission on trial in an Annual Conference who have not completed a course of study equivalent to the University Senate requirements for admission to college. When a candidate has not completed such a course of study, he cannot be legally admitted on trial in an Annual Conference until after he has served three years satisfactorily under a District Superintendent, and then only by a two-thirds vote of the Annual Conference.

Question 119—Under the Seminary Rule, Paragraph 179, Section 4, Discipline of 1924, is a minister eligible to election to Elder's Orders one year after his election to Deacon's Orders under the Seminary Rule, Paragraph 176, Section 2?

Answer—In May, 1911, the Bishops ruled (see Ruling 208), and the General Conference of 1912 approved the Ruling, that "An Annual Conference is not authorized to elect a preacher to Elder's Orders under the Seminary Rule one year after his election to Deacon's Orders under said Rule, although he may have complied with all the other requirements in Discipline Paragraph 179, Section 3." In view of the fact that there has been no change in the wording of the Seminary Rule since 1911, we reply: Under the Seminary Rule, Paragraph 179, Section 4, a minister is not eligible to election to Elder's Orders one year after his election to Deacon's Orders under the Seminary Rule, Paragraph 176, Section 2.

Question 120—In the application of Paragraph 68, is a minister authorized to accept any other ground for divorce except that shown on the court records?

Answer—The application of Paragraph 68, Discipline of 1924, must be based upon the action of the civil court. That alone has power to decide the cause of any particular divorce. This decision is strictly in harmony with the action of the General Conference taken May 13, 1924.

Question 121—The General Conference of 1924 revised Paragraph 95 of the Discipline relating to the organization and powers of Central Mission Conferences so as now to provide for two kinds of Regional Conferences; "Central Conferences" and "Central Mission Conferences." The General Conference neglected to classify the existing Regional Conferences under these two heads. All had previously been listed under Central Mission Conferences, but all, without regard to their qualifications, are now entered in Paragraphs 519 to 522 as Central Conferences. Until the next General Conference, what should these Conferences assume as to their standing and powers?

Answer—The evident intention of the General Conference was that all Regional Conferences meeting conditions of Paragraph 95, Section 1, Sub-sections 1 and 2, should be allowed the larger powers authorized to Central Conferences. We therefore advise that such Regional Conferences as meet these conditions regard themselves as duly organized and authorized Central Conferences. Those not meeting the conditions to be regarded as Central Mission Conferences.

Question 122—To whom do the words, "Mission Superintendents" in Paragraph 418, Section 1, Discipline of 1924, refer?

Answer—The words "Mission Superintendents" in Paragraph 418, Section 1, Discipline of 1924, refer only to the Superintendents of organized Missions and do not include all District Superintendents in that mission field.

Question 123—Under Paragraph 241, Discipline of 1924, must the four traveling elders be selected from the District in which the alleged offense was committed; or may the four traveling elders be selected by the District Superintendent from any Annual or Mission Conference?

Answer—The District Superintendent is not restricted to any one Conference in his selection of the four traveling elders called for in Paragraph 241, Discipline 1924.

Question 125—When a member of an Annual Conference who has been retired for disability before reaching the age of 65 shall reach the Discipline age of retirement, can he have the basis of his retirement changed to that of age without being made effective and given an appointment?

Answer—A member of an Annual Conference who has been retired because of disability before the age of 65 may, upon reaching the age of 65, and having in the meantime recovered from his disability, request the Conference to order an entry upon the records which will show that from this time forward his retirement is granted under Paragraph 188, Section 2, Discipline of 1924, on the ground of having reached the Disciplinary age for voluntary retirement. The Conference shall grant this request when made under these conditions.

Question 126—Under Paragraph 341, Section 3, Discipline of 1924, when does the Annuity Claim of a widow begin?

Answer—The Annuity Claim of a widow begins immediately upon the death of her husband. The Claim of the husband conversely ceases with his death.

Question 127—What body in the Methodist Episcopal Church has the power to retire a Deaconess from active service?

Answer—Under Paragraph 239, Section 1, Discipline of 1924, a Deaconess may be retired by the General Deaconess Board on proper recommendation. The power to retire a Deaconess now inheres in the Board of Hospitals, Homes, and Deaconess Work, the legal successor of the General Deaconess Board.

Question 128—Has the preliminary committee called for under Paragraph 241, Discipline of 1924, the power to include other accusations that may have been or may be made in the case?

Answer—The preliminary committee provided for under Paragraph 241 may include additional accusations if it so desires.

Question 129—Can a local preacher resign from the local preacher's office without the consent of the quarterly or district conference that has licensed him?

Answer—The surrender of a local preacher's license and his resignation from that office cannot take effect without the consent of the quarterly or district conference that gave the license.

RULINGS ADOPTED NOVEMBER, 1926

Question 130—Should baptized children be counted and reported as church members?

Answer—Paragraph 90, Section 8, Discipline of 1924, distinctly states that baptized children shall not be counted as preparatory members in making reports of membership. This language precludes their being counted as members in full. Baptized children are to be listed as preparatory members for purposes of instruction and of ultimate reception into membership in accordance with the Ritual found in Paragraph 528, Discipline of 1924.

Question 131—If a preacher is granted a year's leave of absence by a Bishop and shortly thereafter is given a regular appointment by the Bishop, is he eligible for leave of absence before seven years have elapsed?

Answer—Leave of absence is a relief from appointment for one year granted by the Bishop on vote of the Annual Conference in response to the minister's request. Paragraph 207, Section 6, Discipline of 1924, gives the Bishop the power to change the appointments of preachers between the sessions of an Annual Conference as necessity may require and the Discipline direct. Under this law the Bishop may give an appointment to a man who has been granted a year's leave of absence. If such appointment occurs within the first six months of the year for which the minister was granted leave of absence, he retains the right which he had to ask for a year's leave of absence.

Question 132—Under Paragraph 341, Section 2, Discipline of 1924, is a minister's claim for Annuity years of service limited to two years only on trial?

Answer—It is our judgment that the law of the Church limits a minister's Annuity years on trial to two years only.

Question 133—Is it necessary that the record of membership called for in Paragraph 48, Section 5, Discipline of 1924, be kept in a book, or is a Card Index record sufficient?

Answer—The Discipline does not prescribe the form in which the record should be kept. A properly kept Card Index may be as good as a book record. We recommend, however, that the record of membership be kept in a suitable book.

RULINGS ADOPTED MAY, 1927

Question 134—The General Conference of 1924 incorporated in the Constitution the amendment changing the ratio governing General Conference representation. The General Conference of 1924 took no action on the ratio that should govern the elections for the General Conference of 1928. What ratio should govern in these elections?

Answer—Since the General Conference of 1924 did not take any action on the ratio of representation in the election of the succeeding General Conference, the ratio fixed by the General Conference of 1920 stands as the ratio governing the elections for the General Conference of 1928.

Question 135—Are minor children of living ministers who are Conference Claimants themselves Conference Claimants?

Answer—The clear implication of the law is that only minor children who are orphans of deceased ministers are Claimants. Paragraph 341, Section 5, Discipline of 1924, says that the Annuity Claim of a dependent child of a minister shall take effect upon the death of the father.

Question 136—Can a member of an Annual Conference in the retired relation, who is serving as a supply in a Conference other than his own, vote for General Conference delegates from the Conference in which he is at work?

Answer—No.

Question 137—Is it legal to recognize the orders of a man who was an ordained elder of the Protestant Episcopal Church, who subsequently became a priest in the Roman Catholic Church, and who now renounces his connection with the Roman Catholic Church and requests that his orders as an ordained minister of the Protestant Episcopal Church be recognized?

Answer—It is not. It appears that this man, at his own request, was deposed from the ministry of the Protestant Episcopal Church. He has never been restored to his status as a minister in the Protestant Episcopal Church. He cannot, therefore, have his former standing in that Church recognized by our Church.

Question 138—The California German Conference, in accordance with Paragraph 571, Sections 5 and 6, Discipline of 1924, has voted to merge with the Southern California Conference. Some of the charges of the California German Conference lie within the territory of the California Conference. Can such charges belong to the Southern California Conference?

Answer—They cannot. These charges must belong to the Conference within whose geographical boundaries they lie.

RULINGS ADOPTED NOVEMBER, 1927

Question 139—In a Church Trial or Investigation, can counsel be other than a minister or member of our Church?

Answer—No. See Paragraph 310, Discipline of 1924.

Question 140—The General Conference of 1880 ordered that Rulings made by the Bishops should be submitted to the succeeding General Conference. Whose duty is it to see that these Rulings are handed in to the General Conference?

Answer—The Rulings of individual Bishops presiding at Conference sessions go to the General Conference in the Journals of the Annual Conferences. If these have been contradictory Rulings, any member interested would be at liberty to have the question referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

Question 141—What is the process by which a member of an Annual Conference is located without consent apart from the location of a supernumerary or retired preacher who fails to report to his Conference, or the automatic location provided for those who do not pass through the Course of Study in a specified time?

Answer—The process does not seem to be clearly defined in the Discipline. The General Conference should clear this matter up.

Question 142—If a minister leaves the Evangelical Church and enters the Roman Catholic Church, later returning to the Evangelical Church and being restored to their ministry, can his orders then be recognized in our Church?

Answer—Recognition of orders in another Church is one of the prerogatives of an Annual Conference. We are of the opinion that in the case mentioned above an Annual Conference would be justified in recognizing these credentials.

Question 143—When the General Conference authorizes the organization of an Annual or Mission Conference, or a Mission, does the new organization take full authority over both the congregations and the properties belonging to them? Or does the new organization merely consist of the congregations and properties for purposes of appointment?

Answer—The statistics of the several Charges of a Mission are to be reported in the Journal of the Mission and not in the Journal or Journals of the Conference or Conferences in which the ministerial members of the Mission hold membership.

In the organization of a Mission or Conference of previously existing pastoral charges, the control of churches and parsonages for the use of regularly appointed pastors is automatically transferred to the Mission or Conference so created. Administrative authority over the membership of such charges is automatically transferred to the Mission or Conference.

In such cases, however, the title to the property must be adjusted in accordance with the provisions of the Discipline at the time in force, if such provisions are in agreement with the laws of the State or Territory within the boundaries of which the property is located.

Adopted, May 26.

REPORT NO. 24. THE CONSTITUTIONALITY OF THE APPOINTMENT OF DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS BY THE BISHOPS ON NOMINATION BY THE ANNUAL CONFERENCES

On the afternoon of May 23, 1928, there were referred to the Judiciary Committee Report No. 13, Committee on Itinerancy, and the minority report following (Serial No. 103, page 353, Daily Christian Advocate), with the request that we give our conclusion upon the Constitutionality of those portions of said report 13 which read as follows:

"Whenever there is to be a change in the Superintendency of a District he (the Bishop) shall state that fact to the Annual Conference and immediately, without nomination, the Conference shall take a ballot, and he shall appoint one of the three effective elders receiving the highest vote on this ballot."

The questions involved in this proposed amendment are divided under three heads in a minority report as follows:

"1. To elect District Superintendents by vote of the members of the Annual Conference.

"2. To require the Bishop to submit a number of names to the Annual Conference, the Annual Conference to elect one of this number as District Superintendent.

"3. To enable the Annual Conference to nominate three men, one of whom the Bishop shall appoint as District Superintendent."

This question twice recently has been passed upon by the General Conference; each time the answer was that such proceedings would be unconstitutional. These facts would warrant the Committee in saying that until changed it is bound by them.

At the General Conference in 1924 a lengthy and historic statement of the whole matter was given and adopted (pages 426, 427, and 428, Christian Advocate, 1924).

We quote from that opinion Paragraph 2 of the conclusion:

"At the time the Constitution was adopted the power to appoint the presiding elders in the Districts was in the Bishop who presided over the Annual Conference within which the Districts existed. It was as much a part of the plan of our Episcopacy as was the power to make the appointment of the Preachers to Pastoral Charges. To withdraw the power to appoint the presiding elders is to alter the plan of our Episcopacy, as much so, as it would be to withdraw the power to appoint the ministers to their charges."

A minority report was made and is found printed in the Christian Advocate on pages 483 and 484:

The whole subject was fully discussed pro and con (see pages 605, 607 and 610). It was finally adopted May 24, 1924 (pages 610 and 753 of the Daily Christian Advocate).

Again, at this Conference the matter came before us, and our report is found in Serial No. 40, page 267, of the Daily Christian Advocate. That report followed the decision of the General Conference of 1924, and was adopted by this body.

The only question here suggested is how far are those decisions binding upon the Conference at this time?

The Courts of our country uniformly hold that the principle of Stare Decisis applies with special force to the Construction of Constitutions, and an interpretation once deliberately put upon the provisions of such an instrument should not be departed from without grave reasons. (Black's Const. Law 71, Maddox vs. Graham, 2 Metcky 56.)

The Court in the Kentucky case quoted with approval the decision of the Court of Appeals of Pennsylvania in the case of Commonwealth vs. Allegheny Co., and said:

"The question (involved in that case) should be considered at rest. (Italics ours.)

"We cannot agree with Counsel, that because it is a Constitutional question it should be treated as always open. (Italics ours.)

"Where the meaning of the Constitution on a doubtful question has been once carefully considered and judicially decided, the instrument is to be received in that sense, and every reason is in favor of a steady adherence to the authoritative interpretation thus made."

May we call the attention of the Conference to the fact that the Methodist Episcopal Church has a Constitution by which we are controlled. The right of amendment exists and if the change suggested is desired the Church at large has a right to be heard on that question. This can only be done by having a Constitutional amendment presented to them.

Following the precedents already established we hold that the proposed change in the Discipline is unconstitutional and the questions asked in the minority report must be answered in a like manner.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 25. POWER OF BISHOPS TO UNITE TWO CHARGES

Your Judiciary Committee to which was referred Memorial No. 1202 begs leave to submit the following report:

"Has a Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church power, when he judges it necessary, to unite two or more Pastoral Charges for Quarterly Conference purposes without affecting their pastoral relations, but so as to bring all of the property interests under the control of one Board of Trustees?"

Answer:

A Bishop has full power under the law and usage of the Methodist Episcopal Church to unite two or more Pastoral Charges for Quarterly Conference purposes. A Quarterly Conference so created may elect a Board of Trustees to control all the property interests unless the law of the State prevents.

(See Discipline, 1924, Paragraphs 213 and 607, 345 and 348.)

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 26. APPEAL OF JOHN P. INGERSLEW FROM EXPULSION FROM ANNUAL CONFERENCE AND CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

Your Committee on Judiciary, to whom was referred the complaint made by Rev. John P. Ingerslew of his expulsion from the Denmark Annual Conference and from the Church, report thereon as follows:

Rev. Mr. Ingerslew, after serving charges in New Hampshire and Baltimore, went to Denmark in 1919 and became assistant to Rev. Anton Bast, then pastor of Jerusalem Church of Copenhagen. On the election of Mr. Bast to the Episcopacy, Mr. Ingerslew was made the pastor of Jerusalem Church. For a number of years before and after such election there was more or less agitation concerning the financial transactions and moral conduct of Anton Bast, resulting, October, 1924, in a request made by Rev. Mr. Ingerslew and eight laymen to the public prosecutor for an investigation into alleged irregularities in the financial affairs of Central Mission, which was under the supervision of Bishop Bast. On February 8, 1925, C. Nielson, a District Superintendent of Denmark Conference, preferred charges against Rev. Mr. Ingerslew, that contrary to the General Rules of the Discipline, Paragraphs 30, 33 and 284, "and in spite of repeated warnings and requests, last by the District Superintendent—jointly signed a complaint to the civil prosecuting authorities against Bishop Anton Bast, before the matter in question had been passed through the channels prescribed by the Discipline. Likewise—by this mode of action and otherwise contrary to Paragraph 282 of the Discipline sown dissension in the Church and thereby brought shame and calamity over the Church."

The time fixed by the Bishops for the Denmark Annual Conference was the first week in July, 1925. A purported session convened February 19, 1925, under the presidency of one of the Bishops and was opened with the following statement made by him: "The present session of the Denmark Annual Conference is a regular session of said Conference. For good and sufficient reasons unknown to the Bishops when the date for the Conference was fixed, the meeting of the Conference has been advanced until to-day. Therefore, the Conference business will be conducted accordingly."

In so holding that the body so convened was a regular session of the Annual Conference, the presiding Bishop, in the opinion of your committee, erred.

Of the forty main Disciplinary questions, some of them having several sub-divisions, outlined as the order of business for the Annual Conference (Paragraph 80 of the Discipline) only two were dealt with at all, first, Question 15, "Was the character of each preacher examined?" There were three districts in the Denmark Annual Conference, but the characters of the District Superintendent and of the pastors of Copenhagen District were the only ones examined. Second, Question 25, "Who are the supernumerary ministers?" was taken up. The District Superintendent informed the Conference that he had received a written complaint on John P. Ingerslew from District Superintendent C. Nielson. Then follows a record of the proceedings of the trial of John P. Ingerslew (we may note that it is contended by Mr. Ingerslew that this record is erroneous and incomplete). None of the other thirty-eight questions referred to in Paragraph 80 of the Discipline was considered or referred to until the Annual Conference held in July. The body was convened for the particular purpose of trying the charges against John P. Ingerslew.

The General Conference in 1924 adopted the report of the Judiciary Committee reported on page 239 of the "Reports of the Committee on Judiciary," which reads in part as follows:

"Nothing is said and no provision is made for calling a special session of a single Annual Conference for the consideration of matters special to it. Does it follow that no special session can be called, and if called, that action at a session so called would be invalid? We think it plain that no authority has been conferred on a resident Bishop to call a special session of an Annual Conference. As he has not been given the power by constitutional or statutory provision he does not possess it. The fact that no authority exists to issue a call for a special session might not necessarily invalidate the proceedings taken at such session if all the members attended and participated in the proceedings. . . ."

Bishops sometimes change the date of an Annual Conference a week or more so that it has become an unwritten law that a Bishop can make such a minor change in order to make necessary or desirable local adjustments. There is no law under which a Bishop may advance the date of an Annual Conference as fixed by the Bishops, four or five months for the transaction of particular business, while the regular business of the Conference awaits the established date.

Your committee is of the opinion and so reports that the convening of the so-called regular Annual Conference in February, 1925, was without authority under the law of the Church, was illegal and that the body so convening was not an Annual Conference, was wholly without competency to hear or pass on the charges under consideration and that its findings and judgment are a nullity.

On February 21, 1925, the vote was put on the charges (which seemed to have been amended) as follows:

"Has Rev. John P. Ingerslew denounced Bishop Anton Bast to the civil authorities without first having taken the necessary steps to try to get the matter settled before the courts of the Church, as is provided for and required by the Discipline?"

"Has Rev. John P. Ingerslew violated Paragraph 284 of the General Rules, Paragraph 30 of the Discipline, which forbids 'brother to go to law with brother'?"

The vote was in favor of sustaining these charges, also of the charge of sowing dissension. Whereupon judgment was rendered whereby Mr. Ingerslew was "expelled from the Annual Conference and from the Methodist Episcopal Church."

Your committee is further of the opinion and reports that these so-called charges against Mr. Ingerslew, if sustained by evidence, accused him of nothing which is or can be a violation of the law of the Church or of the land or of good morals. The paragraphs of the Discipline on which the charges were founded are 30, which declares that it is expected that all who continue in the "United Societies" shall refrain from "brother going to law with brother"; Paragraph 284, which declares "that if any member of the Church, in case of debt or other dispute, shall refuse to refer the matter to arbitration, when recommended to do so by the Preacher in Charge, or shall enter into a lawsuit with another member before these measures are taken, he shall be brought to trial. . . ." Paragraph 282, "If a member of the Church shall be accused of endeavoring to sow dissension in the Church by inveighing against its Doctrines or Discipline, its Ministers or Members, or in any other manner, the person so offending shall—if he persist in such pernicious practice, be brought to trial, and if found guilty, shall be expelled."

These paragraphs have, and under elementary principles of law and morality can have no reference to violations of the criminal laws—offenses against the State. It is not to be admitted that the Church, in case of the commission of crime by one of its members, may or does require the accuser, if he is also one of its members, before complaining to the public officials, to approach the accused, thus giving him warning and opportunity to escape, or that the Church may or does require the accuser to first invoke the mediation of the ecclesiastical authorities, thereby undertaking to shield the alleged criminal, or to conceal or compound crime.

The charge of sowing dissension or strife in the Church as voted on, was as follows:

"Has Rev. John P. Ingerslew sown dissension and strife in the Church by accusing Bishop Anton Bast and by denouncing him to the civil authorities?" Thus it was limited in its scope to the accusation against Bishop Bast and denouncing him to the civil authorities. The charge postulates the same proposition, namely,

That a member of the Church before accusing another member of crime to the law enforcing officers of the state must first endeavor to effect a settlement out of court.

Some months after the expulsion of Mr. Ingerslew, Anton Bast was brought to trial before one of the criminal courts of Denmark, found guilty of crime, and sentenced to prison. It is neither charged nor proved that the complaint made against him was malicious and without probable cause.

It follows that the attempted expulsion of John P. Ingerslew from the Annual Conference and from membership in our Church, is void because it was not the act of the Church or of its authorized agencies and because no good cause for such expulsion was alleged.

We are unable to find that Rev. Mr. Ingerslew properly took and prosecuted an appeal as provided by the Discipline. Claim is made that this was because the record of the proceedings of February 20, 21, 1925, were so defective and incomplete that an appeal could not be properly perfected; that announcement of purpose to appeal was made March 17, 1925 (within the required time), to the Secretary of the Annual Conference, and that the Secretary referred it to the presiding Bishop; that the Bishop made no response until July 4, 1925, when he declared that specifications would have to be submitted. Your committee deems it unnecessary to examine into the merits of the excuse for not appealing.

The General Conference is the supreme law making, as well as executive and judicial authority of the Church, subject to such restrictions as are contained in the Constitution and subject to the further limitation that the General Conference may not act arbitrarily and unreasonably or against common right to the injury of its members or of strangers. The rules and regulations concerning the right of appeal found in the Discipline were made by the General Conference in the interest of orderly procedure and to facilitate the transaction of Church business. Such rules and regulations were made the better to secure justice, not to defeat it. The attainment of justice inheres in the purpose of the Church organization and is one of its supreme purposes. It is the effort of good governments to provide some extraordinary safeguard in judicial administration for use when ordinary remedies fail. The General Conference hitherto has not found it necessary to resort to the exercise of its sovereign authority apart from its prescribed ordinary procedure to prevent a denial of justice. Absence of occasion for and of the exercise of the power is not argument for its non-existence. One General Conference cannot (in this case, has not attempted to) tie the hands of its successors. It is provided by Paragraph 300 that "The General Conference on appeal or on complaint shall carefully review the decisions of questions of law contained in the records and documents transmitted to it from Judicial Conferences; and in case of serious error therein, shall take such action as justice may require." This provision is in harmony with the purpose of the Church to see that justice is done, not only through the process of appeal, but also on complaint.

The judgment of expulsion under review was not rendered by a legally constituted authority of the Church, was rendered on a charge of conduct which was not in violation of the law of the State or of the Church, or of good morals; was wholly without jurisdiction and void.

For these various reasons the General Conference in the exercise of its sovereign power should, regardless of its prescribed rules for ordinary procedure, so declare and direct the reinstatement of John P. Ingerslew to his rights of membership in the Church and in the Annual Conference.

By way of caution we may say it does not follow that the General Conference should be called on in this extraordinary manner to correct mere errors or irregularities.

Related questions are discussed in connection with the other reports made by this Committee at this time.

Adopted, May 26.

REPORT NO. 27. APPEAL OF L. C. HANSEN AND OTHERS FROM EXPULSION FROM MEMBERSHIP IN JERUSALEM CHURCH, COPENHAGEN

Your Committee on Judiciary to whom was referred the complaint of L. C. Hansen and others who were expelled from Jerusalem Church of Copenhagen, January 16, 1925, now make report as follows:

Your Committee incorporates herein reports made herewith on the complaint of John P. Ingerslew and on that of S. N. Gaarde and others. The present complainants, L. C. Hansen, Philip Berger, Sven A. Nielsen, Robert Gyldentorp, laymen of Jerusalem Church, joined with Mr. Ingerslew in the complaint against Anton Bast made to the public prosecutor or to the criminal courts of Denmark which resulted in the conviction of Anton Bast and his imprisonment as previously noted.

Substantially the same charges were made against these laymen before the Quarterly Conference as those lodged against Mr. Ingerslew in the Annual Conference, and upon them the laymen were expelled from membership in the Church. They assert that they appealed but that the sentence of expulsion was confirmed by the Appeal Court in March, 1925. What further became of the case except the complaint lodged with this General Conference does not appear. For the reasons stated in accompanying report the charges made against these laymen on which they were expelled cannot be sustained in law, civil or ecclesiastical, or in morals, and the sentence of expulsion should be pronounced by this body to be void, and they be reinstated in their Church membership.

[Complainants say that they have incurred for the sake of the Church in these matters outlays of more than $3,000, for which they ask reimbursement from the Church. Our observations on the petition of S. N. Gaarde and others returned herewith apply to this case and we can only make here our recommendations made there.]

Adopted, May 28, with the exception of the final paragraph as bracketed. This paragraph was referred to a "Commission of Nine on Financial Aspects."

REPORT NO. 28. REQUEST OF DENMARK ANNUAL CONFERENCE
FOR ADVICE FOR DEFRAIVING EXPENDITURES CONNECTED WITH JOHN P. INGERSLEW EXPULSION AND SUIT

Your Committee on Judiciary to whom was referred the petition of S. N. Gaarde and others for instructions as to ways and means to cover the expenses of the Denmark Annual Conference in connection with the John P. Ingerslew case, makes reference to report herewith relating to the John P. Ingerslew complaint.

Mr. Ingerslew, after his expulsion, brought suit in the civil courts of Denmark against "the Methodist Episcopal Church, Annual Conference in Denmark," to recover for wrongful deprivation of his living, outlays and losses sustained thereby and was awarded judgment for 40,000 crowns. The Conference incurred large expense in defending. An appeal was taken which is still pending. Petitioners estimate that the total expense will reach $24,000, if the judgment is affirmed. They have already borrowed for use in the litigation 15,000 crowns.

They say the Annual Conference is unable to pay these large sums; that the situation is unprecedented in the Church, and Petitioners ask the advice and assistance of this body.

The Danish trial court was evidently laboring under a misapprehension of the polity of the Methodist Episcopal Church and of its civil obligations to its members and ministers. Your Committee is not advised as to the status of the Church as a corporate entity or as to the liabilities that may be incurred thereby under the civil laws of the Kingdom of Denmark. It may be and it is to be hoped that the judgment against the Church will be reversed on the appeal now pending.

Rev. Mr. Ingerslew quite likely found himself in a seemingly hopeless predicament professionally as a result of his expulsion. He claims that the congregation first brought action against him to evict him from church property, and that his action was a counter-suit which he was compelled to resort to in self-defense. Whether or not this is correct, the litigation, whatever its immediate occasion or the final result, was certainly unfortunate.

The General Conference now has at its disposal no fund for defraying local expenditures or liabilities of the character of those in question. While this Committee has made quite an extensive investigation into these matters and given to them much thought, it finds itself unable to offer any solution of the problem now before you. [The Committee can only suggest that this and the still larger matter of the good of the kingdom of Jesus Christ, the recovery of ground lost and the dissipated results of the work of our Church, resulting from the deplorable events involved in the various proceedings, growing out of Anton Bast's affairs that have come before this General Conference for consideration, be referred to our Board of Foreign Missions for special study and for such action thereon as that Board may deem best.]

Accepted, May 28, with the exception of the final sentences as bracketed. The subject matter contained in these bracketed sentences was referred to a "Commission of Nine on Financial Aspects," and by later action the entire report was so referred.

REPORT NO. 29. WHETHER OTTO FABRICIUS IS ENTITLED TO REMUNERATION FOR SERVICES RENDERED IN THE BAST TRIAL

Your Committee on Judiciary, to whom was referred the request of Otto Fabricius for ruling, respectfully report:

It is our opinion that Otto Fabricius is entitled to remuneration for any service that he actually rendered the counsel for the Church in the Bast trial, as conducted at the seat of the General Conference, and we recommend that the matter be referred to the Special Commission of Nine.

Accepted, May 28, and later referred to the "Commission of Nine on Financial Aspects."

GENERAL CONFERENCE ACTION OF MAY 28. (HAVING TO DO WITH REPORTS NOS. 27, 28, 29, COMMITTEE ON JUDICIARY)

Whereas, In view of the large sums of money that have been expended and may yet be involved, and in view of the many questions of policy and morals concerning the trial of Bishop Bast and matters connected therewith, and in view of the lack of time in which this matter can be properly discussed on the floor of this General Conference, and in view of the absence of many official papers and other proofs,

It is moved that in lieu of the recommendations and suggestions contained in Reports Nos. 27, 28 and 29 of the Committee on Judiciary, Serial Nos. 265, 266 and 267, respectively, pages 592 and 593, of the Daily Christian Advocate, these matters be referred to a commission of nine, to be nominated by the Board of Bishops and elected by the General Conference; three of whom shall be Bishops, three other ministers and three laymen, said laymen to be selected from the Committee on Judiciary; said commission to make a full investigation and to have full power and authority as to all matters involved, and to carry out their conclusions, or report to the next General Conference.

REPORT NO. 30. RULINGS OF BISHOPS—QUESTIONS 92 AND 124

In Answer 92 in Rulings of Bishops which was referred back to the Judiciary Committee, the Committee would add the following explanation to this answer:

Question 92—Does the “automatic location” called for in Paragraph 617, Discipline of 1924, require a trial before the automatic location goes into effect?

Answer—In the case of automatic location, the facts must be presented in regular charges and established by regular trial. [Unless the candidate shall waive his right to trial under ¶ 46, § 5 of the Discipline of 1924.] When so established, location automatically follows.

Explanation—It seems clear that the intent of the law is that a member of Conference who fails to comply with the provision of this paragraph as shown by the records of the Board of Examiners shall become automatically located, unless he claim the right of trial as guaranteed in Paragraph 46, Section 5 of the Constitution.

In regard to Question 124, we find the answer correct, as follows:

Question 124—A layman in the Korea Conference has secured a divorce from his wife, but not on statutory grounds. He has not remarried. Charges have been preferred against him for putting away his wife without due cause. In his defense it is urged that under Paragraph 68 of the Discipline the divorce itself is not actionable, but only remarriage after such divorce.

According to Paragraph 68, is divorce on other grounds than adultery an offense actionable under the law of our Church; or can an action lie only against one who remarries after such divorce?

Answer—The divorce itself is not actionable, but remarriage after a divorce (except of the innocent party to a divorce for the cause of adultery or of divorced parties seeking to be reunited in marriage) is ground for Disciplinary action.

Adopted, May 28.

REPORT NO. 31. RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF THE COMMITTEE PROVIDED FOR UNDER PARAGRAPH 358 OF THE DISCIPLINE

The Committee on Judiciary has been requested to define the rights and duties of the committee provided for under Paragraph No. 358 in the 1924 Discipline.

We answer that the facts that inspired the question have not been supplied the Committee, and it cannot therefore give a reply that is related to a concrete case; we can speak therefore only in general terms.

The Judicious Committee provided for in Paragraph No. 358 in the Discipline is not a committee to apply but one to estimate the cost of building, and when it has done that its appropriate function has been exhausted; it properly can do no more, except with express authority of the General Conference. The provisions of the paragraph under scrutiny and of kindred ones is the answer of the Methodist Episcopal Church to the pertinent inquiry long ago propounded, "For which of you intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first and counteth the cost whether he have sufficient to finish it?"

Adopted, May 28.

REPORT NO. 32. QUESTIONS PRESENTED BY REVEREND FLETCHER HOMAN IN RESPECT TO THE ADMINISTRATION OF BISHOP ADNA W. LEONARD

The questions in Memorial No. 1204 referred to the Committee, presented, as phrased, abstract questions of law involving in the main the pastoral relation in regard to its continuance during the year of which the inquirer was appointed, and the right of the resident bishop to transfer him to another Conference between the sessions of the Annual Conference of which he was a member.

The Committee, however, has been placed in possession of the facts to which the questions are related, both by written and oral presentation, both parties appearing in person before the committee, and our decision therefore is predicated upon these facts.

We find not only that the resident Bishop in the Buffalo Area did not violate any administrative law of the Church, but acted in accordance therewith, but also that in dealing with a perplexing situation and in seeking a just solution to a difficult problem, he acted in true Christian brotherliness toward the questioning pastor, and with genuine solicitude for his welfare and protection.

The questions propounded have been rendered academic, but it may be said in defense thereto that the power to appoint preachers is solely in the hands of the Bishop; that the law that he shall appoint preachers to pastoral charges annually, Paragraph 208, Section 1, must not be interpreted to mean that he cannot change the appointments between the sessions of the Annual Conference. See Paragraph 207, Section 6.

Adopted, May 28.

REPORT No. 33. COMPLAINT OF EDMUND J. BRISTOW AGAINST THE CALIFORNIA CONFERENCE

We have carefully considered the complaint of Edmund J. Bristow against the California Conference. It is clear that no action can be taken by the Committee in the absence of any proof that notice has been given to the alleged defending agencies, that its proceedings will be reviewed. The complaint as presented is a statement of fact; the accused is entitled to a like opportunity. Obviously no decision ought to be made on the ex parte statement. The complaint should be dismissed.

Adopted, May 28.

REPORT No. 34. COMPLAINT OF EDMUND J. BRISTOW AGAINST
THE BOARD OF BISHOPS

Complaint of malfeasance in office is herein laid against the Board of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church; to wit, that in the matter of married and divorced persons they have usurped the legislative functions of the General Conference, making a law for their own government and that of the Church; aside from the law of the Church and in addition thereto, and that they have referred to this, their own law, and have attempted to make it effective, as if it were the law of the Church.

By reference, we find, first, that the Discipline makes no provision for dealing with a complaint against the Board of Bishops; second, that the facts are as stated. The Bishops have simply voted to apply the law as it was interpreted by decision of the General Conference of 1924.

Neither in the law nor in facts as presented is there a warrant for the complaint, and it should be dismissed.

Adopted, May 28.

REPORT No. 35. INQUIRY OF OTTO FABRICIUS RE BAST TRIAL

The Judiciary Committee has examined the request contained in the communication of Otto Fabricius dated May 25, 1928, and referred to this Committee by the General Conference.

The letter relates wholly to rulings made and acts done in connection with the investigation at the Hague and rulings made by the Committee of 17.

Our answer is that the trial of Anton Bast has been concluded and the report of that Committee has been duly reported to the General Conference for entry on its journal under Paragraph 246 of the Discipline. That decision is final, subject only to the right of said Anton Bast to appeal to the General Conference through this Committee within thirty days after conviction, upon giving notice of intention to appeal to the Secretary of the General Conference. The records show that said Anton Bast has accepted the decision and has sent a written communication to the General Conference to the effect that he will not appeal from such decision.

We do not, therefore, feel called upon to pass upon questions involved in the trial at the Hague or by the Committee of 17, and respectfully return the communication unanswered.

Adopted, May 28.

III. ITINERANCY

REPORT NO. 1. RELATING TO ORDINATION OF DEACONS AND ELDERS

Amend ¶ 176, § 2, of the Discipline of 1924, by changing Item 3 from "shall have been received on trial" to "shall have been received on trial, or shall have been on trial for at least one year," so that the amended section of the paragraph shall read as follows:

¶ 176, § 2, "Those who (1) have been Local Preachers for two full years; and (2) also at and during the same time have been regular students in one of our theological seminaries; (3) shall have been received on trial, or shall have been on trial for at least one year; and (4) shall have completed, satisfactorily to the Annual Conference, the first two years of the Conference Course of Study."

Amend ¶ 179, § 4, of the Discipline of 1924, by inserting after the words "the Conference Course of Study," in lines 4 and 5 these words, "have been deacons at least one year," so that the amended section shall read as follows:

¶ 179, § 4. "Those who (1) have been received on Trial and elected to the office of Deacon under the provisions of ¶ 176, (2) have completed, satisfactorily to the Conference, the Conference Course of Study; (3) have been Deacons at least one year, and (4) have been admitted into full membership."

Adopted, May 9.

REPORT NO. 2. APPOINTMENTS PERMISSIBLE FOR A BISHOP TO MAKE

Amend ¶ 208, § 3, of the Discipline of 1924, by inserting after Item 5, "Preachers For Seamen," a new item to be known as "Item 6," and to read "Ministers For Community and Federated Churches," and changing the numbering of the remaining items to conform to the insertion here provided for, so that the amended section shall read as follows:

¶ 208, § 3—"He may make the following appointments annually, provided that no member of an Annual Conference shall be appointed to any form of service outside the regularly constituted organizations of the Methodist Episcopal Church except chaplains in the Army and Navy, unless such appointment is recommended by the District Superintendents and confirmed by a two-thirds vote of the Conference to which he belongs:

(1) The Corresponding Secretaries, Assistant Corresponding Secretaries and Recording Secretaries of our Connectional Benevolent Boards and Societies.

(2) The Publishing Agents at New York, Cincinnati and Chicago.

(3) The Editors and Assistant Editors at New York, Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago, Kansas City, San Francisco, Portland, New Orleans, and Athens, Tenn., and the Editor of Zion's Herald.

(4) Chaplains in the Army and Navy, and to Prisons, Reformatories, Sanatoriums and Charitable Institutions.

(5) Preachers for Seamen.

(6) Ministers for Community and Federated Churches.

(7) Ministers in the service of the American Bible Society or of any State Bible Society auxiliary thereto; or of the Sunday League of America.

(8) The Presidents, Principals and Teachers of institutions of learning under our care.

(9) The Secretaries and Superintendents of City Missions."

Adopted, May 10.

REPORT NO. 3. TERM OF A DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT

V. TEMPORAL ECONOMY

REPORT No. 1. MEMBERSHIP REGISTER

Amend Paragraph 48 by the addition of Section 6 to read as follows:

Section 6. Each church shall provide in addition to such records of membership, a Membership Register having space for home address and date and manner of admission into membership. Each person at the time of admission into membership shall be required to sign this register, which shall be a bound volume.

Adopted, May 9.

REPORT NO. 2. TRUSTEES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Amend Paragraph 370 of the Discipline of 1924 to include after the words "United States of America" in the last line the words:

"and to intervene and take all necessary legal steps to safeguard and protect the interests and rights of the Methodist Episcopal Church anywhere in all matters relating to property and rights to property, whether arising by gift, devise or otherwise, or where held in trust or established for the benefit of the Methodist Episcopal Church or its membership; or abandoned church property where Annual Conference Trustees neglect to take necessary steps to protect the interests of the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in such property."

So that the paragraph as amended shall read:

Paragraph 370. The Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church, located at Cincinnati, Ohio, and incorporated under the laws of the State of Ohio, pursuant to the action of the General Conference, should not be confounded with local Boards of Trustees of Church property referred to in Paragraphs 345-352 of the Discipline, which local Boards have the care only of Church property within the several Pastoral Charges to which they are related, and are amenable to their respective Quarterly Conferences. The Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church are constituted by the General Conference and made amenable thereto, in order that the Church may have competent representation in legal proceedings and have an authorized body to care for and administer all the property conveyed to it, or committed to it in trust, within the jurisdiction of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States of America, and to intervene and take all necessary legal steps to safeguard and protect the interests and rights of the Methodist Episcopal Church anywhere in all matters relating to property and rights to property, whether arising by gift, devise or otherwise, or where held in trust or established for the benefit of the Methodist Episcopal Church or its membership, or abandoned church property where Annual Conference trustees neglect to take necessary steps to protect the interests of the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in such property.

It is further recommended, that the Articles of Incorporation be so amended as to give the Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church such additional authority.

Adopted, May 14.

REPORT No. 3. MINISTERIAL SUPPORT

Reporting on Memorial No. 469 on Ministerial Support, your committee recommends that Paragraph 90, Section 4, of the Discipline, reading as follows: "The amount raised for 'Ministerial Support' shall include the several sums raised for the support of the pastor, the support of the Conference Claimants, the support of the District Superintendent and the support of the Bishops; also the house rent paid for the pastor; or in case the pastor occupies a parsonage, a sum equal to a fair rental of the parsonage. Missionary appropriations should not be included. If desired, separate columns may be used for House Rent and for Traveling Expenses," be changed to read as follows: Paragraph 90, Section 4: "The amount raised for 'Ministerial Support' shall include the several sums raised by the charge for the support of the Pastor, District Superintendent, Bishops and Conference Claimants, also house rent paid by the charge for the pastor or a fair rental value, if the pastor occupies a parsonage. It shall not include any moneys paid by the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension or City or District or Conference Missionary or Sustentation Societies, or Board of Foreign Missions."

Adopted, May 9.

REPORT No. 4. JASON LEE CENTENNIAL

Answering Memorial 171 signed by Carl G. Doney et al. on subject of Jason Lee Centennial, we report as follows:

Whereas, in 1934 will occur the one hundredth anniversary of the coming of Jason Lee and his co-laborers to the Pacific Northwest, in response to the red men's call for the "Book of Heaven," and

Whereas, this marks the beginning of the Old Oregon Mission from whence proceeded the heroic spirit of consecrated pioneers, which has given Christian quality and character to a vast territory, and

Whereas, the fruits of this enterprise are seen in the churches and colleges, in homes, hospitals and other enterprises of Kingdom building, and

Whereas, history records few if any movements more epochal or more charged with inspiring romance,

Therefore, be it resolved, that the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of 1928 approve the commemoration of this event by a celebration which shall recall appropriately the mighty heroism of our Missionary fathers, and be a challenge to the followers of Christ to-day.

Adopted, May 10.

REPORT NO. 5. STEWARDSHIP ORGANIZATION IN LOCAL CHURCH

In consideration of Memorial 228 signed by J. M. M. Gray and others, we report as follows:

STEWARDSHIP ORGANIZATION IN LOCAL CHURCH

Whereas, our chief pastors in the Episcopal Address express the growing conviction of the Church that "some form of organized stewardship in the local church is essential if the best results are to be secured," and also express the hope that "the General Conference may discover a plan for the crystallization of the conviction of our people on this vital question," and

Whereas, such organization appears to us to afford enlarged opportunity for leading all our people toward that devotion which utterly and gladly yields to God self and all it holds,

Resolved, that the Benevolence Boards be instructed to make an adequate plan for instruction and promotion of stewardship organization in the local church.

Adopted, May 10.

REPORT NO. 6. SALE OF ABANDONED CHURCH PROPERTY

In consideration of Memorial 377, signed by J. Phelps Hand, of the Baltimore Conference, and others, your Committee reports as follows:

We recommend that Paragraph 362 of the Discipline, which reads as follows: "Whenever a local society in the United States is no longer able to maintain itself without encumbering or making liable its real estate for current expenses, or whenever by reason of the reduction of its membership or the changing character of the community or population which the church is intended to serve, it shall become desirable or necessary to discontinue or abandon such location, it shall be the duty of the trustees and members of such local society, when so authorized and directed by a two-thirds vote of the Annual Conference within the bounds of which it is located, and with the consent of the Resident Bishop and of a majority of the District Superintendents, to sell such property and pay over the proceeds to the said Annual Conference; or at the option of said local society to convey such property to the Annual Conference; subject, however, to return in the same manner and upon the same contingencies as named in Paragraph 360"; be changed as follows:

By inserting in line 7, after the word "serve," the words "or whenever by reason of the overlapping of fields of service in the same territory by Protestant denominations."

By striking out the word "become" in line 7, and substituting the word "seem."

In line 8, after the word "location," strike out "it shall be the duty of the trustees and the members of such local society, when so authorized and directed by a two-thirds vote of the Annual Conference within the bounds of which it is located, and with the consent of the Resident Bishop and of a majority of the District Superintendents," and insert the words "the District Superintendent of the District within whose bounds the society is located shall call together the district Board of Church Location for a thorough study of the situation. If, in the judgment of this Board of Church Location, the discontinuance or abandonment of said location shall seem to be for the best interest of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the district Board of Church Location shall so report to the Annual Conference at its next session. If the Annual Conference, with the consent of the Resident Bishop and of a majority of the District Superintendents, shall authorize and direct, by a two-thirds vote, the discontinuance or abandonment of said location, it shall be the duty of the trustees and members of said local society."

The paragraph, as amended, will then read:

"Whenever a local society in the United States is no longer able to maintain itself without encumbering or making liable its real estate for current expenses, or whenever by reason of the reduction of its membership or the changing character of the community, or whenever by reason of the overlapping of fields of service in the same territory by Protestant denominations, it shall seem desirable or necessary to discontinue or abandon such location, the District Superintendent of the district within whose bounds the society is located shall call together the district Board of Church Location for a thorough study of the situation. If, in the judgment of the Board of Church Location, the discontinuance or abandonment of said location shall seem to be for the best interest of the Methodist Episcopal Church, this Board of Church Location shall so report to the Annual Conference at its next session. If the Annual Conference, with the consent of the presiding or resident Bishop, and of the majority of the District Superintendents shall authorize and direct by a two-thirds vote of the Annual Conference, the discontinuance of said location, it shall be the duty of the Trustees of said local society to sell such property upon such terms as may be determined by the Annual Conference, and if, for any reason, the said local Board of Trustees refuses, or is unable to act in such matter, the Board of Trustees of the Annual Conference is hereby authorized and empowered to sell and convey said property in accordance with the directions of the Annual Conference.

"The proceeds of the sale of such property shall be paid to the Annual Conference to be held and used by it in accordance with the provisions of the Discipline.

"Provided, however, that said local society may elect, in the first instance, to convey such property to the Annual Conference and in such event, said Annual Conference shall sell or administer such property in accordance with the provisions of the Discipline."

Adopted, May 12.

REPORT NO. 8. ADMISSION OF LAYMEN TO ANNUAL CONFERENCES

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

In the title of Chapter I, after the word "Quarterly" insert a comma, and strike out the word "and," and after the word "Annual" add the words "and Lay Conferences," so that the title of Chapter I, amended, will read

"Pastoral Charges, Quarterly, Annual and Lay Conferences."

Amend Division III, Chapter I, Article III—Annual Conferences, Paragraph 36, as follows:

Add to the present article the following words: "There shall be reserved to the Annual Conferences the right to vote on Constitutional Amendments, the election of Ministerial delegates to General Conference, all matters relating to the character and Conference relations of its members, and the ordination of ministers," so that the Paragraph as amended shall read as follows:

"Paragraph 36. The Traveling Preachers shall be organized by the General Conference into Annual Conferences, the sessions of which they are required to attend. There shall be reserved to the Annual Conferences the right to vote on Constitutional Amendments, the election of Ministerial delegates to General Conference, all matters relating to the character and Conference relations of its members, and the ordination of Ministers."

The Lay Conference shall be composed of lay members, one from each pastoral charge within the bounds of the Annual Conference, elected by the lay members of the charge, over twenty-one years of age, in such manner as the General Conference may direct. Each pastoral charge shall, also, in the same manner, elect one alternate.

"Section 2. The Lay Conference shall meet with the Annual Conference to consider and act upon all business other than those matters reserved to the Annual Conference as specified in Paragraph 36, of Article III, Division III, entitled 'Articles of Organization and Government,' and those matters that relate wholly to lay activities.

"Section 3. The Ministerial and Lay members of the united sessions shall deliberate as one body. They shall also vote as one body, except when requested by one third of either order present and voting; then the vote on any question shall be taken by separate orders, and a majority of each order shall be required to pass a measure.

"Section 4. Qualifications for laymen admitted into any Annual Conference within the boundaries of a Central Conference may be determined by the Central Conference in which the Annual Conference is located."

Renumber the present Paragraphs 37 and 38, Discipline, 1924, so as to be numbered 38 and 39. Substitute for the present Paragraph No. 39, the following:

ARTICLE III. LAY DELEGATES

"Paragraph 40, Section 1. Each Lay Conference shall be entitled to as many Delegates and Reserve Delegates to the General Conference as there are Ministerial Delegates and Reserve Delegates from the Annual Conference.

"Section 2. Such Lay Delegates shall be elected by ballot at the session of the Lay Conference immediately preceding the General Conference. They shall be lay members twenty-five years of age or over, holding membership within the bounds of the Annual Conference, and having been lay members of the Church five years next preceding their election. In case of reorganization of said society, and the erection of a new Church building, on a site to be selected in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 448, within five years after such transfer of funds, then the said Annual Conference shall repay the said new corporation the moneys which it has received from the Church or society."

REPORT No. 17. CHURCH UNION IN KOREA

Considering Memorial No. 493 from the Korea Annual Conference, which reads as follows:

"Under the blessing of God the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Korea, has grown and prospered until in the two Annual Conferences there are now 63,866 adherents, including 28,430 baptized members, 7,193 probationers and 288 employed preachers. For these results, first of all we give thanks to God who has so manifestly guided and empowered His servants who have labored in this field. We also record our deep gratitude to the missionaries and the Boards of Missions that have made possible these great accomplishments.

"In presenting this memorial, we wish it clearly understood that there is no lack of appreciation for the work of the missionaries and the Mission Boards, and no desire to sever the cordial relations which have existed and do now exist between the Church in America and the Church in Korea. It is our belief that for many years to come the service of the missionaries and the financial assistance of the Mission Boards will be needed in Korea.

"However, there is a strong conviction among preachers and members that the two Methodist Conferences in Korea should be organically united. The existence of two Methodist Churches in Korea calls for the constant defense before the non-Christians. It is our conviction that the many new and pressing problems which now confront the kingdom of Christ in Korea can best be met and solved by a united, self-governing Church, and that such a Church would be the most powerful agency for the great work of evangelization yet to be done in this land.

"Therefore, the Korea Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church respectfully memorialize the General Conference:

"1. To authorize the Korea Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church to be united with the Korea Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and to be organized into the Methodist Church in Korea, provided such authorization is also given by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to its Korea Annual Conference.

"2. To request the Bishops to appoint a Commission to meet with a like Commission of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and with a similar Commission from the two Annual Conferences in Korea, which Joint Commission shall be authorized to formulate a basis of union, to call an Autonomous Conference in Korea, and to perform such other acts as may be necessary in the organization of the Methodist Church in Korea.

"3. To instruct the Joint Commission in preparing the basis of union and planning the organization of the Methodist Church in Korea to provide for continued organic relationship with the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"4. To authorize the Commission to draw on the General Conference Expense Fund for the expenses incurred."

Your Committee recommends concurrence in this memorial.

Adopted, May 18.

Charges listing the askings separately for each Constituent Board according to the ratios established.

Section 3. The Local Church World Service Council, in harmony with other local Church organizations, is urged to arrange for an Annual Every-Member canvass for the World Service budget, after it has conducted a thorough campaign of education covering the needs of the Constituent Boards. The collections shall be remitted monthly to the Central World Service Treasury.

Section 4. It shall be the duty of the Area, District and Local Church Councils to promote the program of World Service in co-operation with the other organized agencies of the Church. These Councils shall represent the needs of the various causes of the Constituent Boards.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE STEWARDS

¶ 315, § 1. There shall be elected in each Pastoral Charge by the Annual Meeting, members over twenty-one years of age only voting, not less than five nor more than thirty-five Stewards, except that in charges of over five hundred members there may be added one Steward for each additional one hundred members.

§ 2. In case two or more Pastoral Charges shall be united, the Stewards of the several charges shall hold office until the first Annual Meeting of the new Pastoral Charge.

§ 3. Quarterly Conference Stewards, commonly designated as "Stewards" of a local charge, shall be members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at least twenty-one years of age, competent to transact the temporal business of the charge. In the case of institutional Churches, foreign-speaking Churches, or Mission Churches, it shall be required simply that the Stewards be member-affiliated members of the Pastoral Charge.

§ 4. The duties of Stewards, whether in Leaders' and Stewards' Meeting, ¶ 113, the Official Board ¶ 112, the Quarterly Conference ¶¶ 104-110, are such as these several organizations require.

MINISTERIAL SUPPORT

¶ 316. The claim for ministerial support from each Pastoral Charge shall include provision for support of Bishops, District Superintendents, Pastors, and Conference Claimants.

¶ 317. The specific amounts for the several forms of ministerial support shall be determined as hereinafter provided. These amounts shall be pro rata claims and no one claim may be paid in greater proportion than the other claims are paid.

SUPPORT OF BISHOPS

¶ 318, § 1. It shall be the duty of the Book Committee to make an estimate of the amount necessary to furnish a competent support for each effective Bishop.

§ 2. It shall be the duty of the Book Committee, in fixing the allowance of Retired Bishops and of the widows of Bishops and minor or helpless children of deceased Bishops, to inquire carefully into the financial condition of each and to fix the allowance in every case at such a sum as may be required for a comfortable support; provided, that the amount so fixed for a Retired Bishop shall not exceed one half the amount allowed for the support of Effective Bishops, excluding house rent and clerical assistance.

¶ 319. The Bishops are authorized to draw on the Treasurer of the Episcopal Fund for the amounts allowed to them, inclusive of properly authorized amounts for official travel, clerical assistance, and house rent, or maintenance, as provided by the Book Committee.

¶ 320. The Book Committee shall apportion the aggregate sum required to be raised for these purposes among the Annual Conferences, on the basis of the total amount raised in the respective Annual Conferences for Pastoral Support, including rental value of the parsonages, but exclusive of Missionary appropriations, and the Annual Conferences shall apportion the same to the several Districts.

¶ 321. The Treasurer of the Episcopal Fund shall be elected quadrennially by the Book Committee; he shall charge the sums paid to the Bishops, and to the widows and minor or helpless children of deceased Bishops, to the Episcopal Fund; and all collections received from the different Charges for the support of the Bishops shall be credited to said fund. The Treasurer shall report annually to the Book Committee and Annual Conferences the amount received from the several Annual Conferences on account of said fund, and also the expenditures made; and shall also make to the General Conference a full and detailed exhibit of such receipts and expenditures for the preceding four years.

SUPPORT OF DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS

The support of District Superintendents shall be provided by either of two plans:

PLAN NO. 1—DISTRICT STEWARDS' MEETING

¶ 322, § 1. There shall be held annually a meeting of District Stewards:

(1) To estimate amount necessary to provide comfortable and equitable support for the District Superintendent, and suitable provision for expenses.

(2) To receive the claims for support of Bishops as apportioned to the District by the Annual Conference.

(3) To apportion the support of Bishops and Superintendents among the Pastoral Charges of the District.

§ 2. The District Stewards shall elect a District Treasurer, and shall determine when payments shall be due, provided at least quarterly, there shall be a Settlement Day on which date pro-rate payments shall be made by the Treasurer of the Local Budget of each Pastoral Charge for all claims for ministerial support. The support of District Superintendents and Bishops shall be forwarded to the District Treasurer. The District Treasurer shall remit to the District Superintendent and to the Treasurer of the Episcopacy Fund.

PLAN 2—COMMISSION ON FINANCE

¶ 323, § 1. An Annual Conference may establish a "Commission on Finance" to consist of the several District Superintendents, together with one Minister and two Laymen from each District.

§ 2. The Ministerial Member, and, after the first year, one lay member, shall be elected annually by the Annual Conference, each to serve until his successor is chosen.

§ 3. The Commission shall organize by electing its own officers. These shall be a President, Secretary and Treasurer. The Treasurer shall be bonded in an approved surety company, in an amount fixed by and at expense of the Commission. There may be a Financial Secretary in each district to collect the funds of that district.

§ 4. It shall be the duty of the Commission on Finance to make an estimate of the amount necessary to furnish a sufficient and equitable support for the District Superintendent of each District in the Conference, including suitable provision for expenses.

§ 5. The "Commission on Finance" shall make provision that the Treasurer may be able to and shall remit monthly to the several District Superintendents.

§ 6. The Commission on Finance shall apportion the sum required to be raised for this purpose among the Pastoral Charges on such basis as the Annual Conference may direct. On the same basis the Commission shall apportion to the Pastoral Charge the amount apportioned to the District by the Annual Conference for the support of the Bishops.

§ 7. The Commission on Finance shall when directed by the Annual Conference, include in its duties the apportionment to Pastoral charges of General Conference Expenses (¶ 384, § 1) and make provision for collection of same.

§ 8. The Commission on Finance shall, when directed by the Annual Conference, apportion to the several Pastoral Charges the Annual Conference Expenses and make provision for collection of same.

§ 9. The Commission on Finance, when ordered by an Annual Conference, shall provide for a Sustentation Fund to assist in support of Pastors serving charges where the salary is inadequate, apportioning, collecting and disbursing same as the Annual Conference may direct.

SUPPORT OF PASTOR

¶ 324, § 1. It shall be the duty of the Quarterly Conference of each Pastoral Charge at the session immediately preceding the Annual Conference, to determine the minimum amount the charge shall pay for Pastoral Support for the ensuing year.

§ 2. In case it may seem desirable to increase this amount, the Finance Committee, after conferring with the Pastor, shall report the amount of support agreed upon for that year to the First Quarterly Conference, to the action of which the report shall be subject.

§ 3. The Traveling and Moving Expenses of a new appointee to a Pastoral Charge shall be a separate additional claim upon that Pastoral Charge.

¶ 325. Should a Pastoral Charge served by a member of an Annual Conference fail to pay amount agreed upon for Pastoral Support, the member may present a claim for the same to the Annual Conference.

The Conference may authorize the Conference Stewards to pay a part, or all, of said claim out of funds at its disposal for such purpose, and shall include in its report the name of the Pastoral Charge with the amount paid. In no case, however, shall the Church or the Conference be held accountable for a final deficiency.

¶ 326. It shall be the duty of each Annual Conference, whenever practicable, to organize Conference Sustentation Fund Societies to supplement the inadequate ministerial support in those pastoral Charges which are unable to furnish a sufficient support.

(Note—For apportionment for Conference Claimants, see ¶ 337.)

¶ 58. First line. Strike out "Committee on Church Records" and insert in its place "Membership Committee."

¶ 97. Insert in the fifth line from the end of the paragraph after the words, Ladies' Aid Society, the words "one President of the Methodist Brotherhood or kindred organization."

¶ 101. Insert § 7 and renumber succeeding sections.

§ 7. To inquire into the condition of the organized manpower of the local churches, the existence of Brotherhood, Men's Clubs or Classes and to adopt suitable measures for their promotion.

¶ 102, § 3. Insert new § 11, renumbering succeeding sections.

§ 11. From each President of a Methodist Brotherhood or kindred organization regarding Men's Work done in the Charge he represents.

REPORT NO. 23. HOLDING GENERAL CONFERENCES OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES

There have been referred to your sub-committee No. 8, Memorials Nos. 174, 202 and 256 from Korea and China, asking that steps be taken to make it possible that a session of the General Conference be held in China at some time in the future, and to that end requesting that the provision making it necessary for the General Conference to meet "in the United States of America" be removed from the Discipline.

We appreciate the invitation, and hope it may be possible for such an invitation to be accepted, at some time in the future, but in view of the fact that any action on these memorials would necessitate the sending down to the Annual Conferences of another proposal to change the constitution, we think it best at this time to vote non-concurrence.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 24. METHODIST FEDERATION IN MEXICO

Considering Memorial No. 1208 from the delegates of the Mexico Annual Conference amended and reading in part as follows: "The Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are represented in Mexico by one Annual Conference each, under the comity agreements of 1919, occupying separate territories but carrying on educational, evangelistic and social work identical in spirit and purpose.

"It has long been the desire of the people of the two Methodisms in Mexico to enter upon closer organic relations, as was evidenced by the strong vote in favor of unification. The existence of a division into two separate camps of our common Methodism is a distinct disadvantage to the entire work. The constitution of Mexico and conditions there make a change advisable, not to say imperative."

In view of these and other related facts, we respectfully memorialize the General Conference:

1. To authorize the Mexico Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church to be united with the Mexico Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and to be organized into the Methodist Church of Mexico, provided such authorization is also given by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to its Mexico Annual Conference.

2. To request the Bishops to appoint a commission to meet with a like commission of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and with a similar commission from the two Annual Conferences in Mexico, which Joint Commission shall be authorized to formulate a basis of union, to call an Autonomous Conference in Mexico and to perform such other acts as may be necessary in the organization of the Methodist Church of Mexico. It is recommended that all possible preliminary steps be taken in this direction prior to the next session of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

3. To instruct the Joint Commission in preparing the basis of union and planning the organization of the Methodist Church of Mexico, to provide for continued organic relationship of the present Conferences with the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, respectively.

4. To authorize the Commission to draw on the General Conference Expense Fund for the expenses incurred.

Your committee recommends concurrence in this memorial.
Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 28. TRANSFER OF PROPERTY OF MERGING CHARGES

Whereas our Foreign Language Conferences are among the weaker Conferences, usually having insufficient funds for Conference Claimants, and

Whereas the money for their church property has usually been collected by their pastors from the foreign language people, and

Whereas, we believe that property disposed of according to the paragraph recommended below is handled according to the wishes of the contributors, and

Whereas, the following paragraph safeguards an eventual transfer by requiring the consent of a majority of all the members of a Quarterly Conference.

Therefore, we, the members of the District Meeting of the Pacific German Conference in session at Portland, Oregon, do hereby memorialize the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Kansas City that the following section be added to the Discipline:

That Paragraph 364 of the Discipline be entitled "Transfer of Property of Merging Charges" and that said paragraph read:

When a foreign language charge merges with one or more English-speaking charge or charges, thereby abandoning their church and parsonage property, such property may, by vote of the Quarterly Conference, a majority of all the members of such Quarterly Conference concurring, be prior to such merger, conveyed to the Trustees of the Annual Conference, within whose geographical territory the property is located, at the time of the merger, in trust for the benefit of the Conference Claimants of said Annual Conference.

And, further, that the succeeding paragraphs of the Discipline be renumbered.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 30. UNION OF MISSIONS IN BALKAN PENINSULA

Whereas, there is a feeling among a group of evangelical leaders in Bulgaria that the interests of the kingdom of God in that land and the rest of the Balkan Peninsula would be best promoted if the Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church and that of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions (Congregationalists) should be united under either of the two Boards and thus become one evangelical church for the whole of Bulgaria, be it therefore

Resolved, that whenever two-thirds of the members of the Bulgaria Mission Conference, together with the missionaries of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of our Church in Bulgaria and likewise two-thirds of the workers of the Mission of the American Board in Bulgaria, shall express their desires by registered vote for such a union, because of the reason given in the above preamble, the Board of Foreign Missions and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of our Church shall be authorized to carry on negotiations with the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions in Boston, if said organization be likewise minded. Whenever the two Boards deem it wise so to do, the Board of our Church shall be empowered to consummate such union, so far as said Board is concerned, and the Board may feel that its responsibilities before our Church as promoters of the kingdom of God and custodians of the property interests of our Church in the Balkan Peninsula are discharged and the Board is convinced that such transfer is desired by two-thirds of the Methodist membership concerned.

Adopted, May 29.

Concurred in by a Committee of Conference from the Committee on Book Concern, J. L. Hillman, Valorous F. Brown and John H. Race.

In order to secure economy and uniformity in the general statistics of the Church and the various Boards and Societies, the General Conference of 1928 directs that the General Minutes and the Year Book, under the control of the Publishing Agents and the Book Committee, shall be the authorized agency to which all figures relating to the various activities of the Church, its Boards and Societies, shall be sent for verification, correction and compilation.

REPORT NO. 36. EQUALIZATION OF SALARIES

In consideration of Memorial No. 345 and some fifteen other memorials seeking equalization of salaries, minimum salaries, adequate ministerial support and equitable apportionment, we report the following resolution:

Whereas, there is general recognition of the need of adjustment of the apportionment of the claim for ministerial support to the respective abilities of the several pastoral charges to pay the same.

Whereas, every member of an Annual Conference and every Supply Pastor appointed by the Bishop in charge of labor in a Pastoral Charge is clearly entitled to a comfortable support.

Be It Resolved:

First: That we recommend that each Annual Conference seek to establish for its members, who are regularly appointed Preachers in Charge, a minimum salary, with such conditions pertaining thereto as the Annual Conference may determine.

Second: That each Annual Conference provide a sustentation fund to be used to supplement ministerial support where it seems impossible otherwise to provide an adequate support.

Third: That each Annual Conference create a commission of seven, three of whom shall be laymen, to study the problem of adequate support and equitable apportionment, which commission shall report for publication in the Minutes of said Annual Conference.

Fourth: That this General Conference appoint a Commission of seven, three of whom shall be laymen, to study the problem of adequate support and equitable apportionment, to review the reports of similar commissions appointed by the Annual Conferences and report its findings and recommendations to the General Conference of 1932, all without expense to the General Conference.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 38. BOARD OF CHURCH LOCATION

We, the undersigned, members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, memorialize the General Conference to amend § 448, as follows:

In line 9 of the Discipline insert the words "and parsonage" after the word "Church"; in line 17 insert the words "or the purchase or erection of a parsonage" after the word "one," so that the paragraph shall read:

¶ 448. There shall be, in each District of an Annual Conference, a Board of Church Location, consisting of the District Superintendent and three Ministers and three Laymen, nominated by the District Superintendent and approved by the Conference. It shall be the duty of the Board to prevent the selection of improper sites, and consider and determine all questions relating to the selection of new Church and parsonage locations which may be referred to it by the District Superintendent or by the vote of any Quarterly Conference. The decision of said Board shall be final, unless overruled by the Annual Conference. It also shall be the duty of this Board, when requested by the District Superintendent or the Quarterly Conference of a Church contemplating the erection of a new edifice, or the extensive remodeling of an existing one, or the purchase or erection of a parsonage, to consider carefully the entire situation, and report to the District Superintendent and the Quarterly Conference its opinion as to the feasibility of the enterprise.

VI. STATE OF THE CHURCH

REPORT NO. 1. OBSERVANCE OF WESLEY ANNIVERSARIES

On June 17, 1928, it will be 225 years since John Wesley, the father of Methodism, was born.

The great work which God started through John Wesley was from the beginning a revival movement, emphasizing a personal experience of salvation in Jesus Christ, the duty of saving sinners and spreading scriptural holiness over the world.

This General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, meeting in Kansas City in the year 1928, composed of 864 Delegates from nearly all parts of the world, represents the largest body of Methodism. Millions of members and friends of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and other communions, are looking to this General Conference with the expectation that it may awaken a new spiritual impulse.

There is a deep feeling in the Church that the manifold problems which we face—the problems of leadership, finance, foreign and home missions, education, social reform and all other activities of the kingdom of God—can be solved only if the Lord shall send us a new revival of the spiritual life.

Therefore, we recommend:

I. That the following address to the Church be adopted and copies sent at once by the secretary of this General Conference to the Methodist editors of the world, to the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to any other Methodist General Conferences now in session and to the general secretaries of the other denominations bearing the name Methodist:

To the People Called Methodists:

The 225th Birthday of John Wesley, June 17, 1928.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church now in session in Kansas City, Mo., United States of America, with its 864 Delegates from all parts of the world, deeply impressed by the problems facing the Church, appeals to the people called Methodists to celebrate Sunday, June 17, 1928, the 225th birthday of John Wesley, as a day of thanksgiving, repentance and prayer—thanksgiving for our glorious heritage, repentance wherein we have failed to live and labor in the power of our fathers, and prayer that our Heavenly Father may cleanse us from our sins and give us a new outpouring of His Holy Spirit—a renewal of the spiritual life as in the days when Wesley and Whitefield preached the old gospel with new tongues.

In the language of the recently uttered Episcopal Address, "May our Church never outgrow the passion of Wesley and Asbury, nor be led by our philosophy or program to accept any merely intellectual readjustments as a substitute for conversion. To-day, as yesterday, the aim of Methodism is and must be that of our Master, that the world shall be saved. We cannot really as a Church outlive that passion, for if it should cease, Methodism would be dead."

II. That a special program be arranged for a devotional service of this General Conference at 11 A. M. on May 24, 1928, the 190th anniversary of that notable day when John Wesley felt his heart strangely warmed, such observance to be arranged by a committee of three persons appointed by the Bishops.

Adopted, May 9.

REPORT NO. 2. RESOLUTION BY H. E. WOOLEVER, REFERRED TO THE COMMITTEE ON STATE OF THE CHURCH, MAY 2

In accord with the desire for world peace by understanding as often expressed by the Methodist Episcopal Church, be it

Resolved, That we as a General Conference request the Congress and the President of the United States to withhold their support of the naval bill now before the Senate looking to the laying down of more cruisers beyond the fiscal year ending June, 1929, and to any clause in such a bill which would restrict the President in his power to suspend construction of cruisers authorized in the event of the calling of an international conference for further reduction of naval armaments.

The secretary is instructed to wire this petition to the President and to the Senate of the United States.

Adopted, May 9.

REPORT NO. 3. COMMISSION ON CHURCH UNION

In reply to Memorials Numbers 149, 607, 687, and 787, the Committee on State of the Church makes the following recommendations:

a. We recommend that all existing commissions dealing with the subject of Church union, unification or federation, be superseded by a new Commission consisting of seven Bishops, fifteen other Ministers and fifteen Laymen, to which all matters relating to these subjects shall be referred, and that such Commission shall be appointed by the Board of Bishops.

b. We recommend that this Commission be authorized to make a careful study of the communication from the World Conference on Faith and Order at Lausanne, 1927, and to make a suitable response thereto to co-operate with that body, with the World Conference on Life and Work of Stockholm, 1925, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and other organizations seeking to promote understanding and co-operation between the various branches of the Christian Church. To this end we urge the heartiest support of State, Regional and National Conferences. (See address of General Superintendents.)

c. We recommend that this Commission be authorized to act for the Methodist Episcopal Church in all questions of comity, in the United States of America, and we earnestly recommend prompt and effective measures for dealing with over-churched and underchurched communities, except in the matters especially committed to the Boards, Annual Conferences and local churches.

d. We recommend that this Commission be authorized to make overtures to and receive overtures from like-minded churches, looking toward closer co-operation and union.

e. We recommend that the personnel of this Commission be announced by the Board of Bishops not later than Monday, May 21.

f. We recommend that the Treasurer of the General Conference be instructed to pay the necessary expenses of this Commission.

Adopted, May 11.

REPORT NO. 4. RECOGNITION OF THE ASSOCIATION OF METHODIST HISTORICAL SOCIETIES

In disposing of Memorials Nos. 214, 249, 312, and others, asking for recognition of the Association of Methodist Historical Societies this committee recommends non-concurrence and calls attention to the fact that there is already an authorized "General Conference Historical Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church" whose duties include those suggested. (See 1924 Discipline, ¶ 596.)

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 5. REVISION OF ARTICLES OF RELIGION

In disposing of Memorial No. 465, asking a commission ordered to revise our Articles of Religion, this committee recommends non-concurrence.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 6. METHODIST COMMISSION ON WORSHIP AND MUSIC

Referring to Memorials 136, 336, 358, 359, 499, 594, 664, on subject of Church Music and others, on the same subject, and to the report of the Commission on Music and that portion of the Episcopal Address dealing with worship and music this committee reports:

1. We heartily commend the work which has been done during the past quadrennium by the Methodist Commission on Music. We recommend in accordance with a request from said Commission that the name be changed to The Methodist Commission on Worship and Music, and that the General Superintendents be authorized and instructed to appoint, for the ensuing quadrennium, such a commission of fifteen members, to consist of five General Superintendents, five other Ministers, and five Laymen.

2. We recommend that $2,500.00 a year be provided by the Book Committee to cover the expenses of this Commission's work.

3. We recommend that this Commission be instructed to prepare, in accordance with the recommendation of the Episcopal Address, at least two Orders of Public Worship, which shall be printed in the Discipline in place of ¶ 72 for the use of our churches.

4. We recommend that in each Annual Conference there be appointed a Commission on Worship and Music to co-operate with this general Commission within the several Conferences.

Adopted, May 14.

REPORT NO. 7. COMMITTEE ON NEAR EAST RELIEF

The Committee on State of the Church approves the Report of the General Conference Committee on Near East Relief, including endorsement of the over-seas work and the campaign to insure its orderly completion.

We recommend and request the General Conference that a committee named by the General Superintendents be continued to advise with other similar church and inter-church committees concerning the remaining service of Near East Relief, the conservation of its work, and the international observance of Golden Rule Sunday.

Adopted, May 21.

REPORT NO. 8. COMPULSORY MILITARY TRAINING AND USE OF GOVERNMENT POSTMARKS TO ADVERTISE TRAINING CAMPS

The Committee on State of the Church recommends that the General Conference adopt the following resolution:

We record our appreciation of the efforts being made by the Government of the United States of America looking toward world peace. There are, however, certain policies now in vogue which tend to weaken these efforts, and against which we protest.

We are opposed to all military training in high schools, and to all compulsory military training in colleges and universities.

We are opposed to the advertising of military training camps by government postmarks on mail matter, the distribution of which, in this and foreign countries, tends to create a wrong impression regarding the attitude of the United States toward universal peace.

Adopted, May 21.

REPORT NO. 9. PROHIBITION AND UNION LABOR

The Committee on State of the Church has considered Memorial No. 1153 and recommends the following resolution:

WHEREAS, Certain high officials of the American Federation of Labor have been active in an endeavor to modify the Volstead Act so as to permit the sale of light wines and beer; and

WHEREAS, The American Federation of Labor has from time to time officially gone on record as opposing prohibition; and

WHEREAS, There are many churchmen who are members of various unions of the Federation who both regret and oppose this activity upon the part of the American Federation of Labor; and

WHEREAS, Certain labor organizations have gone on record as favoring the honest enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and the maintenance of prohibition in this land;

Therefore, Be It Resolved, That we record our appreciation of the work of men within the ranks of organized labor who are opposing the activities of certain leaders who seek to modify the Volstead Act and the official actions of the American Federation of Labor on prohibition. While we recognize the right of any group to seek to repeal laws in the constituted way, we believe that these actions of certain officials of the American Federation of Labor do not represent the rank and file of the men who toil, nor the sentiment of the American people.

Adopted, May 22.

REPORT NO. 10. DECLARATION ON SPIRITUAL LIFE AND STANDARDS OF FAITH

In response to numerous memorials and resolutions from various parts of the Church, the General Conference of 1928 desires to go on record in reaffirmation of our faith as set forth in the Articles of Religion and our other doctrinal standards. We respectfully call attention to the Episcopal Address delivered to this General Conference and affirm our agreement therewith, especially that portion entitled "The Preacher," from which we quote, as printed in The Daily Christian Advocate of May 3, 1928, pages 62 and 63:

"The Pastor is the immediate interpreter of our message. It is necessary that he be loyal to the basic principles of our faith. . . . At a time when so many forces are with hostile intent moving in upon our faith, the Pastor, who is the expounder of our creed, is to present the vital beliefs in the language of the day . . . This man of the pulpit is to make clear and convincing the great appeal of the gospel, affirming without apology belief in the supernatural. With his beliefs vitalized by personal Christian experience, he will strive to bring men to grips with God, setting in compelling impressiveness sin and salvation. He will turn the faces of men toward Jesus Christ, God's only begotten Son, whose name is above every name, the virgin-born, the manger-cradled, the crucified, the risen, the ascended Lord and Saviour of men, able to save unto the uttermost all who come unto God by Him, the same yesterday, to-day and forever. We steadfastly maintain our unshaken loyalty to the great basic doctrines, but we would not be silent as to the widely discussed conflict of science and religion . . . If we are afraid to go into the laboratory with the scientist or into the geological field with true and reverent investigators, then we are doubting God. This preacher may go with the scholar wherever reverent and honest scholarship can go. His very loyalty to God will free him from the fear of finding anywhere the footprints of another creator or of discovering another cross in which to glory. If this man is able to confess, 'I know whom I have believed,' he will be prepared the more boldly to affirm his determination not 'to know anything among men save Jesus Christ and Him Crucified.' His very faith at once unfetters him and holds him. He is free indeed . . . It is inescapable that there shall be landmarks indicating the boundaries of denominational belief, but within these landmarks of our denominational heritage we will stand for the liberty of the sons of God, and if in anything it appears that the hedges have been broken through or the fair limits transgressed, the Church has prescribed the procedure in the case and all the proprieties demand recourse to the method so provided . . . In the Church, as in the State, the formulated law is at once the guarantee of immunity from unwarranted aspersion and extra-judiciary penalties, as it is also the surest deterrent of offense."

Besides the Apostles' Creed and those Articles of Religion whose truths we hold in common with the Universal Church of Christ, the Methodist Episcopal Church has added as principles of doctrine sermons by John Wesley and his Notes on the New Testament. Therefore, the central strength of Methodism is not only in those teachings found in the historical standards of faith, but also in her emphasis on the dispensation of the Holy Spirit, by which we possess not only the historical Jesus, but a present Living Christ who is the object of saving faith and the source of personal Christian experience, revealed by the Witness of the Spirit, furnishing a spiritual fruitage in life and realizing Holiness to the Lord which is perfect love.

More attention should be given to the teachings of our Master with regard to individual salvation as realized in the New Birth by the Holy Spirit, the practice of spiritual ethics as expressed in His teachings and revealed in His character, and the outcome of both in social salvation. The Kingdom of God, a term used most frequently by our Divine Lord, has unfortunately been largely omitted from creeds and confessions. It is the duty of the Church of Christ both to save souls from eternal death and to transform this world of ours into a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness.

We call upon all in official positions in our Church—Bishops, editors, teachers, and Preachers—to observe diligently these standards of doctrine and practice, to the end that the flock of Christ committed to our care shall be vitalized and invigorated through faith.

Adopted, May 21.

REPORT NO. 11. THE IMPORTANCE OF PREACHING

Recognizing, as we do, the value of the educational method in meeting the Church's responsibility to disciple all nations, we would, at the same time, emphasize the importance of preaching. Religious education, and evangelism through religious education, are co-operative agencies with preaching and worship, not substitutes for them. We therefore urge our Pastors, and all those who have to do with our courses of religious education, to magnify preaching and worship. This will involve for the Pastor the fullest preparation of mind and heart for the proper conduct of public worship and for the exposition of the word of God. It will also involve, on the part of the people, a release of the Pastor from those numerous cares and responsibilities which fruitlessly consume his time, and strength, and a recognition of their own duty and privilege in reverent and regular attendance at God's house.

Adopted, May 22.

REPORT NO. 12. DECLARATION ON WAR

We rejoice in the efforts now being made by the United States and other governments to enter into compacts with other nations for the outlawry of war. We are convinced that war has become the supreme enemy of mankind. Its continuance is the suicide of civilization. We would utterly repudiate our professed faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, the Prince of Peace, if we held that war is inevitable. War is not inevitable. Disputes between nations, like disputes between individuals, may be settled by judicial processes. We believe, therefore, that war should be made a public crime under the law of nations.

We recognize the need of an army and navy sufficient to serve as a police power for the protection of life and property on land and sea. But, as a Christian body, we "renounce war as an instrument of national policy," and set ourselves to create the will to peace. The agencies of our Church shall not be used in preparation for war. They shall be used in preparation for peace. We must do our full share to mould the present youth of all races into a peace loving generation. To this end we recommend that the Board of Bishops appoint a Commission on Peace and World Fellowship, consisting of seven Ministers and eight Laymen, and that this commission be empowered to employ an executive secretary and to secure from the General Conference Expense Fund a sufficient sum to finance its operations.

Preparation for war leads to war. We therefore urge the President of the United States to prepare for another Conference of Nations to secure a more drastic reduction of armaments of every kind. We adhere to the principle that diplomacy should be used instead of military intervention in our relations with other nations. The rights of the weakest nation must be held as sacred as those of the strongest.

We call upon our members as citizens to exert themselves to the utmost to secure the participation of their respective governments in a World Court which shall have affirmative jurisdiction over all international disputes, and shall develop and administer international law upon the basic principle that war is a crime. We urge upon our members their duty as citizens to secure the participation of their respective governments in an Effective Association of Nations which shall undertake to remove the causes of war and to lead the world into the ways of peace.

REPORT NO. 13. GENERAL CONFERENCE COMMISSION ON SOCIAL SERVICE ACTIVITIES

The Committee on State of the Church has considered memorials numbered 153, 185, 315, 378, 562, 1136, 1137, together with the Report of the General Conference Commission on Social Service Activities referred to the Committee on State of the Church under memorial numbered 1107.

We recommend that the General Conference Commission on Social Service Activities, appointed by the General Conference of 1924, be continued for another quadrennium in order that it may go forward with its investigation, complete its survey, and report its findings to the General Conference of 1932.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 14. THE SOCIAL CREED OF THE CHURCHES

Your Committee has considered memorials numbered 496, 498, 619, 831, 876, 898, 970, 971 and 1027, and recommends as follows:

First, that that section of ¶ 585 known as the Social Creed of the Churches, to-wit:

The Methodist Episcopal Church stands for equal rights and complete justice for all men in all stations of life; for the protection of the family, by the single standard of purity, uniform divorce laws, proper regulation of marriage, and proper housing; for such regulation of the conditions of toil for women as shall safeguard the physical and moral habits of the community; and for the fullest possible development of every child, especially by the provision of proper education and recreation, and by the abolition of child labor.

It stands for the abatement and prevention of poverty, by the protection of the individual and of society from the social, economic and moral waste of the liquor traffic, by the conservation of health and by the protection of the worker from dangerous machinery, occupational diseases and injuries.

It stands for the right of all men to the opportunity for self-maintenance, safe-guarding this right against encroachments of every kind, and for the protection of workers from the hardships of enforced unemployment. It stands for suitable provision for the workers in old age and for those incapacitated by injury; for the principle of conciliation and arbitration in industrial disputes, and for a release from employment one day in seven.

It stands for the gradual and reasonable reduction of the hours of labor to the lowest practicable point, and for that degree of leisure for all, which is a condition of the highest human life; for a living wage as a minimum in every industry and for the highest wage that each industry can afford, and for the most equitable division of the product of industry that can ultimately be devised.

It stands for the right of employees and employers alike to organize.

It stands for a new emphasis upon the application of Christian principles to the acquisition and use of property.

We recommend that the sections above be printed in the Discipline as a separate paragraph, and that said Social Creed of the Churches be read to our congregations annually on the Sunday preceding Labor Day.

Second: That in addition to statements adopted by former General Conferences we adopt the following statement and order this statement to be printed in the Discipline in place of the remaining portion of ¶ 585 and for ¶ 586:

We believe in making the social and spiritual ideals of Jesus our test for community as well as for individual life; in strengthening and deepening the inner personal relationship of the individual with God, and recognizing his obligation and duty to society. This is crystallized in the two commandments of Jesus: Love thy God and love thy neighbor. Translating this ideal

I. Into education means:

(1) The building of a social order in which every child has the best opportunity for development.

(2) Adequate and equal educational opportunity for all, with the possibility of extended training for those competent.

(3) A thorough and scientific program of religious and secular education designed to Christianize everyday life and conduct.

(4) Conservation of health, including careful instruction in sex hygiene and home building, abundant and wholesome recreation facilities, and education for leisure, including a nation-wide system of adult education.

(5) Insistence on constitutional rights and duties, including freedom of speech, of the press, and of peaceable assemblage.

(6) Constructive education and Christian care of dependents, defectives and delinquents, in order to restore them to normal life whenever possible, with kindly segregation for those who are hopelessly feeble-minded.

(7) A scientifically planned program of international education promoting peace and good-will and exposing the evils of war, intoxicants, illiteracy, and other social sins.

II. Into industry and economic relationships means:

(1) A reciprocity of service—that group interests, whether of labor or capital, must always be integrated with the welfare of society as a whole, and that society in its turn must insure justice to each group.

(2) A frank recognition that all ownership is a social trust involving Christian administration for the good of all.

(3) Abolishing child labor and establishing standards for the employment of minors which will insure maximum physical, intellectual and moral development.

(4) Freedom from employment one day in seven, the eight-hour day as the present maximum for all industrial workers.

(5) Providing safe and sanitary industrial conditions especially protecting women; adequate accident, sickness, and unemployment insurance, together with suitable provision for old age.

(6) An effective national system of public employment bureaus to make possible the proper distribution of labor forces,

(7) That the first charge upon industry should be a minimum comfort wage, and that all labor should give an honest day's work for an honest day's pay.

(8) Economy in the home—such an arrangement of the home budget during the years of productive earning that there may be an increasing reserve for later years.

(9) Adequate provision for impartial investigation and publicity, conciliation and arbitration in industrial disputes.

(10) The right of labor to organize with representatives of their own choosing, and where able, to share in the management.

(11) The supremacy of the service, rather than the profit motive in the acquisition and use of property on the part of both labor and capital, and most equitable division of the product of industry that can be devised.

III. Into agriculture means:

(1) That the tiller of the soil shall be encouraged in his efforts to own the land he farms, and society be protected by efficient production and conservation of fertility.

(2) That the cost of market distribution from farmer to consumer shall be cut to the lowest possible terms, both farmers and consumers sharing in these economies.

(3) That there shall be every encouragement to the organization of farmers for economic ends, particularly for co-operative sales and purchases.

(4) That an efficient system of both vocational and general education of youths and adults living on farms shall be available.

(5) That special efforts shall be made to insure the farmer adequate social institutions, including the church, the school, the library, means of recreation, good local government, and particularly the best possible farm home.

(6) That there shall be a widespread development of organized rural communities, thoroughly democratic, completely co-operative, and possessed with the spirit of the common welfare.

(7) That there shall be the fullest measure of friendly reciprocal co-operation between the rural and city workers.

IV. Into racial relations means:

(1) The practice of the Christian principle of the same protection and rights for all races who share our common life.

(2) The elimination of racial discrimination, and substitution of full brotherly treatment for all races.

(3) The fullest co-operation between the churches of various races, even though of different denominations.

(4) Educational and social equipment for the special needs of immigrants.

V. Into international relations means:

(1) The removal of every unjust barrier of trade, color, creed, and race, and the practice of equal justice for all nations.

(2) The administration of the property and privileges within each country so that they will be of the greatest benefit, not only to that nation, but to all the world.

(3) Discouragement of all propaganda tending to mislead peoples in their international relations or to create prejudice.

(4) The replacement of selfish imperialism by such disinterested treatment of backward nations as to contribute the maximum to the welfare of each nation and of all the world.

(5) The abolition of military armaments by all nations except for an internal police force.

(6) That the Church of Christ as an institution shall be used for the prevention and abolition of war.

(7) A permanent association of the nations for world peace and goodwill, the outlawry of war, and the settling of all differences between nations by conference, arbitration, or by an international court.

We believe it is the duty of every church to investigate local moral and economic conditions as well as to know world needs. We believe that it is only as our churches themselves follow the example and spirit of Jesus in the fullest sense—translating these social ideals into the daily life of the church and the community—that we can ever hope to build the Kingdom of God on earth.

These affirmations we make as Christians and loyal citizens. We present them as an expression of our faith and patriotism. We believe that in applying these principles, we, as a church, can make a great contribution to the realization of Christian ideals throughout the world.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 15. AMENDMENTS IN THE APOSTLES' CREED

The Committee on State of the Church, after considering Memorials 183, 233, 413, and 1082, recommends the following amendments in the Apostles' Creed as now used in our Order of Public Worship, and in the Baptismal Covenant, as follows:

First, in the Order of Public Worship:

In ¶ 72, § 1, page 69, second and third divisions of Item III, Discipline of 1924, make the following changes:

Substitute the word "Spirit" for the word "Ghost," and change the words "the holy catholic Church," so as to make them read, "Christ's Holy Church." Also omit the footnote, "The one universal Church of Christ."

The portions as amended will then read: "Conceived by the Holy Spirit" and "I believe in the Holy Spirit; Christ's holy Church, the communion of saints," etc.

Second, in the Baptismal Covenant:

In ¶ 525, in the seventh and fourteenth lines on page 450, Discipline of 1924, make the following changes:

Substitute the word "Spirit" for the word "Ghost"; and change the words "the holy catholic Church," so as to read, "Christ's holy Church." Also omit the footnote, "The one universal Church of Christ."

The part as amended will then read, "Conceived by the Holy Spirit" and "And dost thou believe in the Holy Spirit; Christ's holy Church, the communion of saints," etc.

REPORT No. 16. SIXTH ECUMENICAL METHODIST CONFERENCE, 1931

Reporting concurrence in Memorial No. 1041:

The Sixth Ecumenical Methodist Conference will meet in the United States in the year 1931. It is desirable that this General Conference make provision for the proper participation of the Methodist Episcopal Church therein. Therefore, this Committee recommends: (1) that the Bishops of our Church be authorized to appoint the Delegates to represent our body, including five Bishops; (2) that the Bishops be authorized to fill all vacancies in the Ecumenical Commission from our Church, and (3) that an amount not exceeding $500 annually be allowed from the General Conference Expense Fund for the expense of the Commission in preparing for said Ecumenical Conference and that the Treasurer of the fund be authorized to pay such sums on presentation of proper vouchers.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 17. REVISION OF THE HYMNAL AND RESPONSIVE READING

Reporting on Memorials numbers 166, 526, 386, 216, 349, 548, 594, 597, 608, 634, 653, 673, 556, 138, 168, 333, 511, 512, 948, 1122, 872.

Your committee recommends that a commission of fifteen be appointed by the Board of Bishops to revise the Hymnal and the Psalter, said commission to consist of five Bishops, five other ministers and five laymen. The General Conference is asked, through its Secretary, respectfully to invite the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to co-operate by the appointment of a similar commission. But should they in their next General Conference deem it inadvisable to co-operate, our commission is authorized to proceed with the work of revision. The commission is requested to consider printing the words between the bars. We understand that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now uses a different Responsive Reading from our own; this commission is, therefore, authorized to proceed at once to the revision of the Responsive Reading. The commission is requested to complete its work by January 1, 1934, if possible.

The expense of said commission is to be provided for by the Book Committee.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 18. REVISION OF THE RITUAL

Your Committee to which have been referred numerous Memorials, numbers 1016, 563, 767, 798, 565, 167, 730, 622, 635, 624, and 655, asking for a revision of the Ritual:

Recommends that a commission of five (5) be constituted, consisting of the Book Editor and four others—Ministers appointed by the Bishops—to revise the Ritual of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and report the results to the General Conference of 1932 for consideration and action, the necessary expense to be provided for by the Book Committee.

Adopted, May 28.

REPORT NO. 19. LABOR CONDITIONS IN THE METHODIST BOOK CONCERN

Your Committee has considered Memorials numbered 375, 404, 497, 651, and 1067, relative to labor conditions in the Methodist Book Concern, and begs leave to report as follows:

The main establishment located at New York was unionized some years ago and only union labor is employed there.

The other main establishments have what is commonly spoken of as "open shop" conditions. In these establishments the principle of collective bargaining is maintained, and the workers are given a voice in all matters affecting their welfare. The employees work forty-four hours per week, and are given time and one-half for over time. Allowances are made for sickness, emergencies and retirement, and group insurance is carried on all employees and paid for by The Methodist Book Concern. Both union and non-union workers are employed, and so far as your Committee, after careful investigation, could discover, it is optional with the employees as to whether or not they become members of a union.

Your Committee is of the opinion that the executives of the Book Concern have power to enter in agreements with organized labor or to refuse to do so, and that the responsibility in these matters rests with them.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 21. THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA

The Quadrennial Report of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has been received by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and read with deep interest.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America was formally organized in Philadelphia in December in 1906, and includes over thirty denominations. The Methodist Episcopal Church was one of the original constituent bodies creating the Federal Council, its action having been taken in May, 1908, in Baltimore. The Council has been a significant factor for stimulation and conservation throughout the period of deepening interest in co-operative movements among the Churches.

Resolved, 1. That the Bishops be authorized to appoint the number of representatives and alternates allowed by the Constitution of the Federal Council, to represent the Methodist Episcopal Church as members of the said Council during the coming quadrennium, and request the attendance of the appointees at the quadrennial meeting to be held in December, 1928.

2. That the Methodist Episcopal Church share in the expenses of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America to the amount of $15,000 annually, for both the general work and the Washington office, the same to be provided for as hitherto in the same manner as for other commissions appointed by the General Conference. If it should be discovered by any Board or Boards of Benevolence that certain types of work may be carried forward to better advantage or more economically by co-operation with the Federal Council of Churches, such Board or Boards may share in the expenses of such a definite program of co-operation from funds within its or their own budget.

Adopted, May 28.

REPORT NO. 22. FOR GREATER EMPHASIS ON PENTECOST

Having before us Memorial number 424, and others, asking for the annual observance of Pentecost in our Churches with suitable ritual provision, and for the appropriate celebration of the Anniversary of Pentecost in 1930, and also having before us the recommendations of the Episcopal Address upon this subject, we recommend the following:

In the early days of Methodism there was little emphasis on the festival of Pentecost, because Pentecost seemed ever with the Church. The presence of the Spirit of God, in amazing intimacy and fullness, sent a stream of cleansing through individuals and societies and nations. The Church had power to convert bad men into good men, weak men into strong men, men uncertain of God into a radiant God-consciousness, men living selfishly into men losing themselves in utter self-giving for their fellows. This power to convert saved nations from moral decay and gave impulse to reform in every realm of human living.

If the Church loses this power to convert it loses its right to be called a Church of the living Christ; at Pentecost the Christian Church was really born. It is our native air. Out of it we gasp for life; in it we are ready for anything in Christ's name.

We believe that Pentecost is not merely an event in time but an ever recurring fact in the present. Our fathers held that the coming of the Holy Spirit into immediate impact with the individual brought the outstanding facts of regeneration and sanctification of heart and life and an empowering for effective witnessing for Jesus Christ. We, their children, share that faith. And further, we realize that our lack of emphasis upon the essential work of the Spirit has often resulted in our people turning to spurious pentecostalism which has ended in disruption and disappointment. Their cravings for a fuller and more victorious life were right. Often we have not given it to them, so they have turned to those outside. They should have been fed within.

Deeply conscious that we crave for ourselves and for our people the renewal that comes with the coming of the Holy Spirit, therefore, be it Resolved, (1) That we call upon our people to observe the annual festival of Pentecost by special services and ritual, and by special preaching in which the person and work of the Spirit are carefully and courageously pressed.

(2) We believe that one result of such a revived emphasis upon Pentecost will be an empowering for a new movement of evangelism and stewardship. To this end we endorse the recommendation of the Episcopal Address, "that the Bishops, together with the departments of Evangelism of the constituted agencies of the Church, be instructed to suggest to an expectant Methodism such a spiritual procedure as will lead up to the celebration of Pentecost in 1930." And we further recommend that the Bishops take such steps as may be necessary to carry out these provisions.

(3) We further recommend that the suggestion of the Episcopal Address, that Pentecost Sunday, May 27, the closing Sunday of this session of General Conference, be fittingly observed. Let it be a day in which we will give ourselves to thinking about and seeking for the unused resources of Pentecost. If a spiritual awakening is to go through our Church so that we can match our message with the needs of this critical hour, that spiritual awakening should begin at this General Conference.

Concurred in by Committee of Conference with Board of Home Missions.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 23. CONCERNING COMMISSION ON LAY VISITATION EVANGELISM

Having before us Memorial No. 689 from the Methodist Men's Committee of 100 of the United States, asking for the appointment of a General Conference Commission on Lay Visitation Evangelism, with "full authority to initiate, organize and conduct campaigns of lay visitation evangelism at least once each year in every Methodist Church in the United States," and asking support from this Commission to the amount of $500,000, to be taken from the budget of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension; and the election of three special Bishops to superintend this movement, we reply that, while extending our approval of the proposition to reach every church in Methodism with the program of visitation evangelism through our regularly constituted agencies, we do not concur in the proposals of the memorial.

This report is concurred in by a Committee of Conference from the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 24. RACE RELATIONSHIPS

The Methodist Episcopal Church reaffirms its historic position on the oneness of our humanity, based upon the practice and the precept of Jesus, of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. It follows that all should have equal opportunity in religion, education, citizenship and industry.

The prejudice of the assumption that some races are born to inherent superiority while others are inherently and fixedly inferior, deprives our common civilization of the characteristic enrichments that God has created each race to contribute.

It is to the credit of our developing Christian conscience that these fundamental principles are increasingly accepted. Yet much remains to be achieved before the standards of Jesus shall prevail in our racial relationships.

We record our deep shame in the continued perpetration in our country of the crime of lynching. Sixteen persons were lynched last year and seventy-nine during the past four years. This barbarism excites anxiety among millions of our most loyal citizens and exposes our government to the criticism of other civilized countries. We commend the more stringent laws recently passed by several State legislatures, and the better efficiency of officers of the law in the prevention of lynchings. By as much as local governments have proved to be insufficiently strong to stop this hideous lawlessness, we promise our support to worthy federal legislation which is designed to extirpate this evil. We set ourselves to develop a Christianized public sentiment which will sustain the enforcement of existing laws against this outrage upon humanity.

While we appreciate the necessity for upholding the intelligent use of the ballot and we sympathize with the desire to elevate the standards of the franchise, we insist that these standards shall apply alike to citizens of every racial extraction.

We heartily commend the constructive efforts of such organizations as the Commission on Race Relations of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the Southern Interracial Commission and similar organizations. The accomplishments of these agencies in a difficult field point the way to much larger achievements in happier race relationships in the near future.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 26. MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE

In consideration of Memorials 314, 449, 771, 853, and 950, your Committee recommends that for ¶¶ 67 and 68 of the Discipline, together with the appended footnote, the following be substituted:

III. Marriage

¶ 67. That Christian standards of marriage may prevail and that divorce be prevented:

We instruct our Board of Education to prepare courses of study setting forth the practical and spiritual values of marriage;

such courses to be designed for use among young people in all our church schools, colleges, and universities;

We urge our young people to seek parental, medical and pastoral advice before entering upon a relationship so vital to the maintenance of the home, the State and the Church;

We urge legislation in all the States requiring that licenses to marry shall be issued only after public notice and the lapse of a reasonable period of time to be fixed by law.

IV. Divorce

¶ 68, § 1. We hold that true marriage is an institution both human and divine. It is the function of the State to determine the grounds upon which a valid divorce may be granted. We recognize as lawful a divorce granted by the State.

§ 2. It is the function of the Church to determine the regulations that shall govern Ministers in the solemnizing of marriage of divorced persons and in the reception of divorced persons into Church membership.

§ 3. No Minister shall solemnize the marriage of a divorced person whose divorced wife or husband is living and married, but this rule shall not apply (1) to the innocent person when it is clearly established in the mind of the Minister that the true cause for divorce is adultery, or its full moral equivalent, nor (2) to divorced persons seeking to be reunited in marriage.

§ 4. A divorced person seeking admission into membership in our Church, who manifests a proper spirit and satisfactorily answers the usual inquiries, may be received.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 28. LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE

WHEREAS, The Lord's Day Alliance of the United States was initiated by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at its session in 1888; and

WHEREAS, Because of its service and efficiency, it has been made the representative of nineteen other denominations and is now the accredited agency of the Evangelical Church in America for the protection and preservation of the Christian Sabbath; and

WHEREAS, The attacks upon this day have never been more persistently vigorous and the need for such an organization has never been so imperative; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we commend the Lord's Day Alliance of the United States, a child of the Church and its official representative in this important work, and rejoice in the large measure of success that has attended its activities in every State of the Union.

Resolved, That we elect the following Permanent Committee on Sabbath observance and nominate them to represent the Methodist Episcopal Church on the Board of Managers of the Lord's Day Alliance of the United States, in which they have rendered so effective service: John H. Willey, Chairman; W. W. T. Duncan, Wallace MacMullen and A. B. Sanford, and Otto F. Bartholow to succeed F. Clare Baldwin, and that we commend this committee to our Pastors and churches and ask their co-operation in the work of the Alliance. We also nominate Bishop Luther B. Wilson and Bishop William F. McDowell as honorary vice-presidents.

We commend the effort of the Lord's Day Alliance to secure the passage of a Sunday observance law for the District of Columbia.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 30. HARMONIZING PARAGRAPHS 69 AND 280
OF THE DISCIPLINE

In reference to Memorial 272, asking that ¶ 69 of the Discipline be revised so as to bring it into harmony with ¶ 280, your Committee reports that, inasmuch as ¶ 280 applies to the trial of a Church Member and ¶ 69 comes under the head of Special Advices, there is no need of harmonizing them, and therefore recommends non-concurrence.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 31. FOR A BOOK OF PUBLIC AND PRIVATE WORSHIP AND RITUAL

In reference to Memorial No. 329, asking for a manual of public and private worship to be bound with the Hymnal, the Committee recommends non-concurrence.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 32. NON-CONCURRENCE IN VARIOUS MEMORIALS

The Committee has given consideration to Memorial No. 502, asking for organization of Confirmation Classes, Memorials Nos. 158 and 1025, asking that funeral services be held in the church rather than in private houses or funeral chapels, Memorial No. 1047, regarding prayer for the country as a regular part of Sunday morning service. The Committee recommends non-concurrence.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 33. NON-CONCURRENCE IN VARIOUS MEMORIALS

The Committee has considered

Memorial 555, asking that steps be taken to have Good Friday made a legal holiday;

Memorial 994, requiring that each local church procure and use on all baptismal certificates a Church Seal;

Memorial 1032, calling for the use of the Christian flag;

Memorial 900, on the responsibilities of Laymen;
and recommends non-concurrence.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 1. GENERAL CONFERENCE EXPENSE FUND

Amend ¶ 384, § 1, by striking out the word "and" in the fourth line, and insert in the fifth line, after the words "General Conference Commission," the words, "and the Committee of Investigation in the case of charges against a Bishop or a Missionary Bishop," which now reads: "At the beginning of each quadrennium the Book Committee shall estimate the amount of money necessary to meet the expense of the next General Conference, and of the Judicial Conferences, General Conference Commission, and such other expenses," so that as amended it shall read:

¶ 384, § 1. REPORT NO. 2. CHICAGO PUBLISHING HOUSE

Amend ¶ 379, Article 1, of the Discipline, by striking out in the sixth line the words "publishing houses" and substituting the words "main establishments." Also amend in line 7, by inserting after the words "Cincinnati, Ohio," the words, "Chicago, Illinois," so that this part of the paragraph as amended shall read: "The Methodist Book Concern comprises the publishing interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church as set forth in the Discipline and in its articles of incorporation under the corporate name The Methodist Book Concern, and consists of the main establishments in New York City, in Cincinnati, Ohio, and in Chicago, Illinois, respectively."

Amend ¶ 394, § 1, by striking out in the fifth line, the words, "Chicago, Illinois," which now reads: "There shall be depositories for the sale and distribution of the books and publications of The Methodist Book Concern at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Boston, Massachusetts; Detroit, Michigan; Chicago, Illinois; Kansas City, Missouri," etc., so that as amended the paragraph shall read:

"There shall be depositories for the sale and distribution of books and other publications of The Methodist Book Concern at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Boston, Massachusetts; Detroit, Michigan; Kansas City, Missouri," etc.

Adopted, May 9.

REPORT NO. 3. SUBSIDY TO PHILIPPINE OBSERVER CONTINUED

That the grant of fifteen hundred dollars per year as subsidy for the publication of a student paper, The Philippine Observer, be continued for another quadrennium.

Adopted, May 8.

REPORT NO. 4. EPWORTH LEAGUE AND SUNDAY SCHOOL

Amend ¶ 396, by striking out the words, "The Epworth Herald" and substituting therefor "an Editor for the Epworth Herald, who shall also edit other Epworth League publications under the provisions as hereinafter defined," striking out the word "also" after the word "and" in the sixth line, changing the words "Sunday School Literature" of the same line to "Church School Publications," the words, "under the provisions as hereinafter defined." So that the paragraph shall read:

¶ 396. The General Conference shall elect quadrennially by ballot an Editor for each of the following periodicals: The Methodist Review, The Christian Advocate, The Southwestern Christian Advocate, Der Christliche Apologete, an Editor for the Epworth Herald, who shall edit other Epworth League publications under the provisions hereinafter defined, and an Editor of Church School publications under the provisions hereinafter defined. Nominations of Editors for the foregoing publications shall be sent to the Secretary's desk in writing.

Adopted, May 10.

REPORT NO. 5. REAL ESTATE

Having examined the Real Estate Section of the Report of the Book Committee, referred by the action of the General Conference to the Committee on Book Concern, and the report on Real Estate, especially prepared for the Book Committee, we find the accounts carefully kept in detail and showing valuation, earnings, expenses, net produce and percentage on value of net produce for each parcel of Real Estate held by The Methodist Book Concern.

The buildings are well covered by insurance and the accounts show a modest amount for improvements and repairs each year. An appreciation reserve of Real Estate has been set up which will adequately take care of any changes which may appear from the quadrennial revaluation required by ¶ 390, § 2 of the Discipline.

By the above documents and a detailed questioning of several members of the Executive Committee, it appears that the Real Estate owned by The Methodist Book Concern is in a satisfactory condition and that the accounts of the same are carefully kept. We note the large increase in Real Estate in the last quadrennium which has been required to provide proper facilities for the present and future growth of the business of the Book Concern, and heartily approve and commend the action of the Book Committee in purchasing the site at Dobbs Ferry, New York, and the improvement thereof, and of the Chicago property.

The accounts in the Hand Book show the audit of Lybrand, Ross Bros. and Montgomery; and we find by verbal report of members of the Book Committee that the titles were very carefully reviewed by counsel before purchases and that these titles are further guaranteed by reputable title companies.

Adopted, May 14.

REPORT No. 6. SPANISH DISCIPLINE

Inasmuch as a Discipline in Spanish was published in 1921, and there are on hand 954 copies of that edition, it is recommended that a Supplement in Spanish, covering the necessary corrections and additions to date, be bound, to meet present needs.

Adopted, May 14.

REPORT No. 7. ADVOCATE BOUNDARIES

(1) ¶ 399, § 1. Methodist Advocate Journal. Change to Western Christian Advocate, Southern Edition.

(2) ¶ 399, § 2. Western Christian Advocate. Harmonize West Ohio and Ohio to Ohio, in view of proposed merger; add Southern Illinois, since that is now a part of the Indianapolis Area.

(3) ¶ 399, § 3. Northwestern Christian Advocate. Omit Michigan and Detroit, since these Conferences maintain the Michigan Christian Advocate and do not contribute to the Northwestern; change Illinois and Central Illinois to Illinois, in view of the merger.

(4) ¶ 399, § 4. Central Christian Advocate. Omit Southern Illinois, since it is transferred to the Western; omit Northwest Nebraska, since it is merged with Nebraska; omit Arkansas, since it is merged with St. Louis; add Wyoming State and New Mexico, since these for years have been in patronizing territory to the Central and are nowhere mentioned in ¶ 399; add Southern, since that is the new Conference composed of the Gulf and two other Conferences of the South.

(5) ¶ 399, § 5. Pacific Christian Advocate. Omit North Montana, since that is now merged with the Montana Conference. Idaho is now called Inter-Mountain, but they are now petitioning that it be re-named Idaho. Watch legislation for proposed merger of Puget Sound and Columbia River Conferences.

(6) ¶ 399, § 7. Methodist Advocate Journal. Change to Western Christian Advocate, Southern Edition; omit Gulf, since that Conference is now merged into Southern, which territory is really a part of the Central.

(7) ¶ 398. It seems that the last word of this paragraph should be "Conferences" in place of "Conference."

Inasmuch as it is impossible to perfect the diction of the amended paragraphs until the final action of the Conference on Boundaries, we agree that the Editor of the Discipline shall perfect the above paragraphs.

Adopted, May 14.

REPORT NO. 8. ELECTION OF EDITORS

Your Committee having carefully considered Memorial No. 430 respecting the Election of Editors of Church papers, unanimously recommends non-concurrence.

REPORT NO. 10. CHRISTIAN NEWSPAPER

WHEREAS, In American life the influence of the daily newspaper, from childhood to age and from the humblest family circle to the most exalted council room, is well nigh universal, and

WHEREAS, Because of that influence the daily newspaper serves not only as a mirror for the world's events, but as an agency for shaping those events for good or ill, and

WHEREAS, Christian people, increasingly, are rightfully indignant when the thought-directing and history-making power of the press is permitted to conduce to evil and to comfort evil-doers; and rightfully gratified when that power is made an agency of righteousness and truth, and

WHEREAS, There is a plan now developing to launch, in the United States, a great Christian daily newspaper, run by Christian journalists and definitely committed to the handling of news with regard for right thinking and righteous relationships, therefore be it

Resolved, That this General Conference express its hearty interest in such a proposal and commend the proposal to the support of the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Adopted, May 24.

REPORT NO. 11. CONTRIBUTING EDITOR

Referring to Memorials Nos. 241, 340, 414, 763, 857, and 1154, we recommend as follows:

Amend ¶ 397 of the Discipline, which now reads as follows: "There shall be elected by the General Conference, on nomination of the Book Committee, a Contributing Editor, who shall be responsible for the uniform matter to be published in all the Official Advocates, The Epworth Herald, The Methodist Review, and Der Christliche Apologete not included," by inserting the words, "after consultation with the Editorial Council," between "Committee" and "a," and omit the last twelve words of the paragraph, so that ¶ 397 will then read:

"There shall be elected by the General Conference, on nomination of the Book Committee, after consultation with the Editorial Council, a Contributing Editor, who shall be responsible for the uniform matter to be published in all the official Advocates."

Amend ¶ 399, § 10, which now reads as follows:

"There shall be published in all the Official Advocates from six to ten pages of uniform matter exclusive of advertising. The Epworth Herald, Methodist Review, and Der Christliche Apologete are not included in this requirement. The present names of all the Advocates shall be continued, with authority in the Book Committee, upon approval of a majority of the editors of the Official Advocates, to change the name so as to secure, as soon as possible, a uniform name for all the editions, with a distinctive sub-title for each of the several editions. The composition of uniform material and the publishing of the several editions of the Advocates shall be determined by the Book Committee and the Publishing Agents," by adding the following new sentence after the word "requirement,"

"The Book Committee shall determine the number of pages of uniform matter to be published in the Southwestern Christian Advocate," so that ¶ 399, § 10 will read as follows:

"There shall be published in all the official Advocates from six to ten pages of uniform matter exclusive of advertising. The Epworth Herald, Methodist Review and Der Christliche Apologete are not included in this requirement. The Book Committee shall determine the number of pages of uniform matter to be published in the Southwestern Christian Advocate. The present names of all the Advocates shall be continued, with authority in the Book Committee upon approval of a majority of the Editors of the Official Advocates, to change the names so as to secure, as soon as possible, a uniform name for all editions with a distinctive sub-title for each of the several editions. The composition of uniform material and the publishing of the several editions of the Advocates shall be determined by the Book Committee and the Publishing Agents."

Adopted, May 24.

REPORT NO. 12. ADVOCATE MERGER

Memorials Nos. 290, 390, 959, 1028, and 1124 concern the general subject of the merging of Advocates. Two of these specifically request the merging of the Central, the Western and the Northwestern Advocates. Two request the continuance of the Christliche Apologete as a separate paper. One requests the merging of all existing Advocates into one Advocate with Area Supplements. We recommend as follows:

We commend the policy of the Publishing Agents, approved by the Book Committee as announced in their report to the General Conference, that "economies be encouraged by the merging of Advocates wherever the best interests of the constituency should be thus efficiently served."

Adopted, May 28.

MINORITY REPORT

HORACE LINCOLN JACOBS,	G. W. LEWIS,

REPORT NO. 13. MEMORIAL FROM UNITED TYPOTHETAE OF AMERICA AND THE FRANKLIN TYPOTHETAE OF CINCINNATI

With reference to the memorial of the United Typothetae of America and the Franklin Typothetae of Cincinnati, Ohio, protesting against the practice of the Book Concern engaging in certain branches of commercial printing, and requesting General Conference to require the elimination of said practice, this Committee has carefully considered the matter from all angles. (Hearings have been granted to officials from the Franklin Typothetae of Cincinnati, Ohio, and their attorney; also to representatives of the printing industry in Kansas City.)

The committee finds that it has always been the practice of the Book Concern to engage in commercial printing; that it has never engaged in any price-cutting in seeking outside work, but on the other hand has always made a substantial profit on such work; that this commercial printing is needed to fill in slack periods of other work, thereby giving steady employment to its workers; and, above all, this commercial printing has contributed to the produce of the Book Concern which is used for the support therefore of the retired Ministers, their widows and orphans, be it

Resolved, That this Committee finds no cause for complaint against the Book Concern for engaging in the practice of commercial printing, and that it votes non-concurrence, on the request embodied in the memorial.

Adopted, May 29.

¶ 247-A. A Missionary Bishop, suspended in accordance with the provisions of ¶ 247, shall have no claim upon the Episcopal Fund for salary, house rent or any other expenses from the date of such suspension; but in case he is thereafter found by the General Conference not guilty of the charge or charges for which he was suspended, his claim upon the Episcopal Fund for the suspended period shall be paid to him.

2. That the Book Committee be authorized to make such appropriations as they deem wise for the development of the National Methodist Press.

Amend ¶ 382, § 2, in the fourth, tenth and eleventh lines by striking out the words "three-fourths" and substituting therefor the words "two-thirds," so that the section as amended shall read:

"The Methodist Book Concern shall not buy, sell, nor exchange any real estate except by order of the General Conference, or between the sessions of the General Conference, except by a two-thirds vote of all the members of the Book Committee; nor shall the Book Committee authorize any new buildings or make any improvements, alterations, or repairs to existing buildings, to cost in excess of $50,000, except by order of the General Conference or between the sessions of the General Conference, except by a two-thirds vote of all the members of the Book Committee. AND LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

In response to Memorial No. 639, asking that there be established a salesroom at Nashville, Tennessee, and Memorial No. 550, as amended, asking that there be established a salesroom at Los Angeles, California, your committee, after careful consideration of these memorials, recommends, in view of the fact that the matter of establishing salesrooms is within the province of the Book Committee without the necessity of action by the General Conference, that these requests be referred to the Book Committee for its consideration, in accordance with the disciplinary provisions.

Adopted, May 29.

VIII. FOREIGN MISSIONSREPORT NO. 1. MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Change ¶ 414, Article III, § 2, which reads: "The Board of Managers shall consist of thirty-two Traveling Ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, etc.," by omitting the words "without vote" after the first word "Board" in line 7 of said section and all that portion of § 2 which appears in italics in the Discipline of 1924, commencing: "The said Board of Managers shall be elected to serve until the Board of Foreign Missions shall have accomplished the amendment of its charter as herein directed, etc.," so that the Section shall read:

Amend ¶ 429 of the Discipline by striking out §§ 1 and 2, leaving unchanged the wording of present §§ 3 and 4 and changing their numbers to 5 and 6, inserting new §§ 1, 2, 3, 4. Strike out ¶ 430 and substitute for it a new § 7 of ¶ 429, as follows:

¶ 429, § 1. For the development and maintenance of Christian work among women in foreign lands, there shall be an organization known as the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

§ 2. It shall be governed by its constitution, which may be altered or amended by the General Conference as the necessities of the work may require.

§ 3. In respect to fields of labor, policies, and standards and qualifications of missionary candidates, the Society shall work in harmony with the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Its appropriations shall be reported to the Board of Foreign Missions at its annual meeting. § 4. The acceptance, assignment, remuneration and recall of missionaries of the Society shall be determined by the General Executive Committee of the Society.

§ 7. The funds of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society shall be provided by annual, life, honorary, memorial and extension memberships; by constituting life managers and life patrons; by gifts, annuities, bequests and devises; by collections from audiences convened in the interests of the Society, and by such other methods as the constitution of the Society shall provide, none of which shall interfere with the contributions of the Church, Sunday Schools and Epworth Leagues to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The amounts so collected shall be reported to the Annual Conference through the Preachers in Charge in order that they may be entered among the benevolence collections and published in the Annual and General Minutes.

So that the entire Chapter IV, as amended, shall read as follows:

¶ 429, § 1. For the development and maintenance of Christian work among women in foreign lands, there shall be an organization known as the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

§ 2. It shall be governed and regulated by its constitution, which may be altered or amended by the General Conference as the necessities of the work may require.

§ 3. In respect to fields of labor, policies, standards and qualifications of missionary candidates, the Society shall work in harmony with the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Its appropriations shall be reported to the Board of Foreign Missions at its annual meeting. The Society shall have a standing committee which shall meet with a similar committee from the Board of Foreign Missions for consultation on all matters of mutual interest.

§ 4. The acceptance, assignment, remuneration and recall of missionaries of the Society shall be determined by the General Executive Committee of the Society.

§ 5. All missionaries sent out by this Society shall labor under the direction of the particular Conferences or Missions of the Church in which they may be employed. § 6. All the work of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in foreign lands shall be under the direction of the Conferences or Missions and their committees in exactly the same manner as the work of the Missionaries of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The Superintendent or District Superintendent shall have the same relation to the work and the person in charge of it as he would have were it a work in the Pastoral Charge of any member of the Conference or Mission.

§ 7. The funds of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society shall be provided by annual, life, honorary, memorial and extension memberships, by constituting life managers and life patrons; by gifts, annuities, bequests and devises; by collections from audiences convened in the interests of the Society, and by such other methods as the Constitution of the Society shall provide. None of these shall interfere with the contributions of the Church, Sunday Schools and Epworth Leagues to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church. REPORT NO. 4. QUADRENNIAL REPORT OF WOMAN'S FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY

We have examined the quadrennial report of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church as published in the Hand Book of the General Conference, and join most heartily with the Society in thanksgiving to God for the great success with which he has crowned their efforts. We respectfully commend careful reading of this report by all the members of the General Conference.

Adopted, May 10.

REPORT NO. 5. TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ON THE FOREIGN FIELD

Your Committee recommends for consideration by the General Conference the following:

First, the General Conference recognizes with gratitude the desire of the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in foreign lands for a larger measure of self guidance, self support, and self control. It deems that this desire should be granted wherever organization has become effective and a substantial basis has been secured for a community of strength and for development.

Second, the General Conference accepts as a general principle that the local responsibility for property and program is not only desired but essential and it is its true policy to make that responsibility effective whenever and wherever practical. It deems this in harmony with the spirit of Methodism from the beginning. In its genius the Methodist Episcopal Church is not national, but is adapted to a world-wide ministry. Its organization is distinctively connectional.

Third, it is quite clear that the General Conference, meeting only every four years, cannot study the situation, investigate the facts and attend to the various details necessarily related to the transfer of any Board property in foreign fields.

Therefore, Be It Resolved, That the General Conference advises that the Board of Foreign Missions and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society transfer their properties to local property-holding bodies in countries where the Board and Society have property, at such time as the Board and Society determine, that such transfer will facilitate the development of the work of the Church in the country concerned, and when there shall have been created within that country a body or bodies which can duly and legally hold such properties and conserve and use them for the purposes for which they were given to the Church through the Board or the Society.

Adopted, May 14.

REPORT NO. 6. STATEMENT OF THE AIMS OF FOREIGN MISSIONS ENDEAVOR

We approve the following statement of the aim of Foreign Missions: "The supreme and controlling aim of Foreign Missions is to make the Lord Jesus Christ known to all men as their Divine Saviour, to persuade them to become His disciples, and to gather these disciples into Christian churches which shall be, under God, self-propagating, self-supporting and self-governing; to co-operate as long as necessary with these churches in the evangelizing of their respective countries, and to bring to bear on all human life the spirit and principles of Christ."

Adopted, May 14.

REPORT NO. 7. LAYMEN IN THE FIELD FINANCE COMMITTEES

Amends ¶ 418, Article VII, Field Finance Committees, by omitting "and the presiding" and the last letter "s" of the word Bishops in line 7, and by inserting after the word "elect" in the second line from bottom of page 301, "part of whom may be laymen" so that the paragraph as amended shall read:

¶ 418, Article VII, Field Finance Committees. § 1. In a mission field of the Board of Foreign Missions in which there may be an Annual Conference, Mission Conference, or an organized Mission, there shall be a Committee on Finance, consisting of the following members ex-officio: the resident Bishop, the Mission Treasurer and the Mission Superintendents. The Committee shall also include such other persons as the Annual or Mission Conference or Mission may elect, part of whom may be Laymen, subject to the approval of the Board of Foreign Missions. The Committee shall elect its own Chairman. This Committee shall be responsible to the Board of Foreign Missions for the administration of the funds provided by the Board.

Adopted, May 14.

REPORT NO. 8. SUPPORT OF THE CHINESE CHURCH
BY THE MOTHER CHURCH

For many long months China has held the interest of the world. People of the Occident have looked towards the struggles of that distracted country with profound interest but with a consciousness of inadequate understanding.

The world has known that China was in the throes of educational, industrial, political, social and religious unrest if not revolution; and there has been a deep sympathy with the uprising of the spirit of independence in that great country. Of special interest to the Churches of America has been the question of the future of Christian work. They have read of the sufferings and danger of the missionaries in China, have learned of the measures taken by the United States Government to remove Americans, including missionaries, from the scenes of cruelty and banditry. They have read that missionaries were no longer welcome in China and they have seen missionaries, in large numbers, returning to this country.

Many have wondered whether the time has not come when our missionaries should be withdrawn from China, leaving the work entirely in the hands of the Christians of that country.

It is refreshing, in view of these conditions, to receive from the Eastern Asia Central Conferences the following appeal:

"1. We record our earnest conviction and our request that the older sections of our world Church continue, and, if possible, materially increase their assistance to their younger China Church which, while vigorous and vital, is in that early stage when it needs the uninterrupted and hearty help of older brothers and sisters. We believe that present difficulties due to political revolution and that present opportunities growing out of vast social changes and out of decades of Christian evangelism in China call for sustained co-operation from the General Conference at this time, even more than in other periods.

"2. Self-supporting churches should maintain their self-support, and all others should increase each year ten per cent of their present amount for self-support; however, this does not apply to churches under unusual circumstances.

"3. If Eastern Asia is to be won for Christ, it is all-important to emphasize evangelism. We therefore urge that the funds for this type of work be increased."

We assure our members in Eastern Asia of our deep sympathy in the present emergency, and note, with special approval their spirit of optimism, their vision of the opportunities growing out of the vast social changes, their self-sacrifice as shown in the purpose to increase self-support and their realization that the supreme need is evangelism.

We pledge to these our brothers and sisters in China the earnest and enthusiastic efforts of the home Church to help them in their endeavors to realize their high ideals.

We rejoice in the evidence from various sources that the Church in China desires to become autonomous and welcomes every movement to bring about that result. In the meantime, we are eager to help with workers, as well as with funds, to the limit of our ability.

Adopted, May 18.

REPORT NO. 10. MILITARY PROTECTION OF MISSIONARIES

Inasmuch as Christian missions involve the largest possible identification of the missionary with the people of the country of his adoption; and

Inasmuch as missionaries have generally relied upon the good will of the people among whom they live and the protection of the Government of the locality for the protection of their lives and property; and

Inasmuch as missionaries, both as individuals and in groups, have asked that steps be taken to make plain that they do not depend upon or desire the protection of foreign military forces in the country of their residence; and

Inasmuch as the use or the threat of armed forces of the country from which they come for the protection of the missionary and missionary property not only creates widespread misunderstanding as to the underlying motive of missionary work, but also gravely hinders the acceptance of the Christian message;

Therefore, Be It Resolved, That the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church places on record its conviction:

1. That the protection of missionaries should only be by such methods as will promote good will, in personal and official relations, and urge upon the Board of Foreign Missions and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society to continue their policy, that they should make no claim on our government for the armed defense of their missionaries and their property, and

2. Further instructs the Board of Foreign Missions to petition the President of the United States, and the Department of State, to take any steps that may be necessary, to provide that hereafter when conditions arise leading the Department of State to consider it unwise or unsafe for American citizens to remain in a certain territory, those who temporarily desire to renounce the protection of the United States, while remaining in that territory, may do so without forfeiting their citizenship, and without involving the State Department or the United States Government in case such citizens receive personal injury, and

3. The General Conference desires to record its conviction that the foreign missionary enterprise is a spiritual and moral and not a political enterprise, and its work should be carried on within two great rights alone, the right of religious freedom for all men, and the maintenance by each nation of law and order for all within its bounds.

4. But we who dwell in safety and comfort must decline even to seem to thrust our missionaries into a heroic offer that we do not ourselves make with them.

Nor would we even seem to question the courage or the loyalty of those missionaries in any fields who may choose to claim their own country's protection in a crisis.

Those who make the sacrifice must be perfectly free to make the choice, and this request to our Government is never to be interpreted as pressure upon any missionary to relinquish his claim to protection.

Adopted, May 28.

REPORT NO. 15. PENSIONS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONARIES

A paragraph from the report of the secretaries of the Board of Foreign Missions reads as follows:

"The question of pensions for missionaries of the Board of Foreign Missions has been given consideration during the quadrennium. Pending the disposal of the proposed Pension Plan, which is now being discussed and acted upon by the Annual Conferences and which, presumably, will come before this General Conference, we have desired to avoid complications by bringing the mission field into intimate consideration of this plan, until the General Conference has acted upon it.

If the plan is adopted, we request the privilege of considering it in its application to the missionaries of this Board."

The Committee voted concurrence as recorded above.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 16. CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES' REPORT IN HANDBOOK

We have examined the quadrennial report of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church as printed in the Handbook of the General Conference.

We wish to record our judgment of it as a notable contribution in the field of Christian ecclesiastical knowledge and understanding. It contains information indispensable to any student of Methodist policy and purpose. Nor is its contribution less notable in the field of missionary methods and technic. We are confident that the work of the Commission of Ten, authorized by the Board at its Annual Meeting in 1925, and the visitation to the various missionary fields by Secretary Diffendorfer in 1927, and of Secretary Edwards to Europe and North Africa, have contributed values in understanding and appreciation that would not have been possible without this intimate study and first-hand information.

We recognize with gratitude that the plan for a monthly preferential payment of $50,000 toward the liquidation of the debt of the Board as of October 31, 1924, of $3,101,330 has reduced that debt to $1,251,355, as of May 31, 1928. We trust this certain method of meeting the debt may continue until the desired freedom from all indebtedness may be reached.

We commend the Board for the clarity of the charts they have submitted, showing clearly all the figures that are needed for an intelligent grasp of the statistical situation of our Missionary work.

Important to the report are the assurances given in unmistakable terms in connection with the action of the All-China Conference in Shanghai in January, 1928, that where the new spirit of Nationalism is most clearly awake, the sense of need for Missionary help and co-operation is most keenly felt.

The report is thrilling, not as a story of notable achievements, though these are not lacking, but as a narrative of the new understanding and fresh appraisal with which our Church is addressing itself to its world task.

We record our deliberate judgment that the Church at home would be served and the Church abroad would be helped if this report could be put in the hands of every Pastor and every District Superintendent in Methodism.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 17. SELF-SUPPORT ON FIELDS OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

WHEREAS, The Methodist Episcopal Church unites with all other Christian communions in the hope of a coming day when "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of God as the waters cover the sea"; and

WHEREAS, such a glorious consummation can be realized only when individual Christians and organized churches everywhere are sharing in the great task of carrying the message of salvation to the unevangelized peoples of the world through personal witness and through the stewardship of wealth.

Resolved, That the General Conference express its profound gratification for the fact that in spite of relative poverty and political and economic difficulties, the Methodist Episcopal Churches outside the boundaries of the United States of America, according to the latest available report, have attained to a standard of giving and of self-support worthy of our highest commendation.

The following table reveals the facts so far as the five main divisions of our foreign work are concerned:

Field	Disbursements	Raised	Per
	1926	Locally, 1926	Cent
Eastern Asia.....	$944,518	$338,149	35%
Southeastern Asia.....	138,950	120,455	87%
Southern Asia.....	754,680	260,823	35%
Africa.....	200,612	50,232	25%
Latin America.....	426,896	182,782	43%
Europe and North Africa.	339,579	1,336,486	393%

These results have not been secured without sacrifice which should stir the hearts of our people in this land of unequalled riches.

Practically all our preachers, on many of our fields, are giving a tithe of their little support to the work; some are giving double tithes, while others have given up half of their salaries rather than have the work of their people unshepherded.

One preacher recently came to his District Superintendent and said, "From next month I will go on full self-support and will ask no more salary from the Board."

Time does not permit the mention of many fields in which notable advances are being made, but we rejoice to learn that at the last meeting of the Board of Foreign Missions a communication was received from the Central Germany Conference expressing its gratitude for assistance in the past and declaring its purpose in the future to accept the responsibility for the financial support of the work within its bounds, thus becoming the first Annual Conference outside of the United States to attain full self-support.

The Switzerland Conference expects to be fully self-supporting in three more years and to be the first country to reach this goal. Notable advances in Sweden, Norway and other Conferences in Northern and Central Europe lead to the expectation that they also will attain to complete self-support in from five to ten years.

There are other fields which raise locally amounts far in excess of the annual appropriations received from the Board, notably:

Korea raised $112,671; received $90,000.

Eastern South America raised $121,758; received $56,240.

Malaya raised $63,838; received $32,250.

Philippine Islands raised $46,409; received $38,178.

There are others which now raise approximately as much as, or more than, the amounts received for the work, apart from missionary support, as e. g.:

Bombay raised $25,641; received $12,730.

Rhodesia raised $16,567; received $10,950.

Foochow raised $20,400; received $25,500.

Rejoicing in these and many other evidences of progress toward self-support, we suggest that the Conferences in the fields outside the United States of America think in terms not only of larger support for their own local congregations but also of an enlarging program of missionary evangelism in the unreached communities surrounding them, realizing that along with the growing idea of self-control there must also be the growing idea of responsibility. The ambition of these churches should be to grow into strength that they can release funds now received to be used in new fields and thus emerge from "the group of receiving churches into the group of giving churches."

At the same time we must remember that the young Church in many of these fields is surrounded by vast numbers of non-Christian people and will not be able for many years to face the full task of evangelizing them without the aid of the Mother Church.

The modern missionary movement is without parallel in history. The younger churches are growing into the consciousness of their ability and responsibility to carry forward the work of Christ in their respective countries. Exceedingly important influences of missions escape enumeration and classification.

Nevertheless, the young churches are as yet only points of light in an immensity of darkness. What has been accomplished is so small a part of the vast task yet to be done, that the older churches should use every endeavor to carry forward the great enterprise. Released at one point by the development of the newer churches, their task is ever to move into the unoccupied regions beyond.

It Is Further Resolved, That we commend the Board of Foreign Missions for having undertaken a study of the whole problem of self-support in the several fields of our own church as well as the methods and progress of self-support in the mission fields of other churches. We recommend that as rapidly as possible the data so obtained be placed at the disposal of our Annual and Central Conferences for their information and guidance in formulating a program of self-support suitable for the several fields.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 18. INCOME

The Committee on Foreign Missions welcomes the recommendation of the Episcopal Address that the separate Benevolent Boards be made more responsible for educating our people with reference to their particular work.

The Committee feels that the financial ability and the Missionary devotion of our people are such as to render unnecessary the deficit of 36% in Foreign Missionary income reported by the Bishops for the last quadrennium. Such unwarranted decline in Missionary contributions may be prevented during the ensuing quadrennium by adequate education and cultivation.

It is therefore recommended that a thoroughgoing program of education be projected at once. We are convinced that the vital units in such programs are the Annual Conference Districts and the local Churches, and that chief responsibility rests upon Bishops, district superintendents, and pastors.

Therefore, we recommend annual programs of Missionary education and promotion in every district and in every local church.

We would emphasize the importance of universal development of the monthly remittance plan. In addition to this, we are convinced that a special campaign of inspiration and deepened sense of responsibility should characterize the program of every district near the middle of the Conference year, to bring up back payments and stimulate interest for the remainder of the year.

We believe that District Superintendents may greatly help the benevolent causes by associating programs of instruction and inspiration with the Quarterly Conference occasions. These occasions may be made to attract wider than strictly local official attendance.

Wherever requested, by District Superintendents or Pastors, we recommend that the Board of Foreign Missions furnish speakers to the utmost of their ability to comply with such requests.

In local churches we recommend strong programs of Missionary education and promotion, with the use of sermons and addresses, pageants, life-plays, exhibits, charts, graphs, pictures, etc.

Mission study classes should be conducted in Church Schools, Epworth Leagues and other appropriate departments of church work.

In behalf of more effective representation of our benevolent causes in the annual every-member canvass, we suggest preparatory meeting of the canvassing teams for instruction and inspiration.

We also request the Board of Foreign Missions to extend its program of assigning definite foreign missionary projects to individual churches.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT No. 20. SERVICE ON MISSION FIELDS

WHEREAS, The Methodist Episcopal Church is now a world Church, operating under the direction of her Foreign Missionary Societies in many foreign lands, notably Mexico, Central and South America, Porto Rico, India, China, Japan, Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, and Africa, in many of which the majority of the population are Negroes, and people of mixed blood; and,

REPORT NO. 8. THE WESLEY FOUNDATION JOINT COMMITTEE

Your Committee having considered Memorial No. 975, presented by James C. Baker and thirteen others, relative to Wesley Foundation Work, recommends the adoption of the following resolution involving a change in the Discipline, as hereinafter more specifically set forth:

WHEREAS, The progress of the Wesley Foundation Movement and the growing importance of its program indicate the desirability of strengthening the general supervision of this work, we respectfully request the General Conference to enlarge the present disciplinary Joint Committee by providing that each of the co-operating boards shall name five members instead of three, and further that the supervising committee shall be officially known as the Wesley Foundation Joint Committee.

To this end we recommend that ¶ 446, § 3, in the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension Chapter of the Discipline be amended as follows:

In line 6 change the word "three" to read "five."

In line 10 after the word "funds," strike out the word "or" and insert the word "and."

In the following unnumbered paragraph of said § 3, after the words "Board of Home Missions and Church Extension shall be" omit the words "members ex officio of said Joint Committee" and add the words "Additional ex officio members of said Joint Committee which shall be officially known as The Wesley Foundation Joint Committee."

So that the said ¶ 446, § 3, as amended shall read: "The Board of Home Missions and Church Extension shall co-operate with the Board of Education in providing for the religious training of Methodist students at tax-supported, independent and other educational institutions not under the control of the Methodist Episcopal Church, by naming five of its members to serve with a like committee of the Board of Education to have general supervision over all such work and to make grants of money from available funds and to assist in campaigns for raising funds for the support of such work.

"The Corresponding Secretaries respectively of the Board of Education and the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension shall be additional ex officio members of said Joint Committee, which shall be officially known as The Wesley Foundation Joint Committee."

We recommend further that ¶ 455, § 10, in the Board of Education Chapter of the Discipline be amended as follows:

So that the said ¶ 455, § 10, shall read as follows:

"The Board of Education shall co-operate with the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension in the care and religious training of Methodist students at tax-supported, independent and other educational institutions not under the patronage of the Methodist Episcopal Church, by naming five of its members to serve with a like Committee of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension to have general supervision over all such work. The Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Education and the Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension shall be additional ex officio members of this Joint Committee, which shall be officially known as The Wesley Foundation Joint Committee."

REPORT NO. 9. GOODWILL INDUSTRIES

Strike out ¶ 439, § 7, of the Discipline and substitute the following:

¶ 439, § 7. The Department of City Work shall maintain a Bureau of Goodwill Industries, which shall consist of the Superintendent of the Department of City Work and 16 other persons.

The object of the Bureau shall be to provide for the religious, educational, social and industrial welfare of the unfortunate.

The Bureau may make such changes in the rules and regulations for the conduct of the Bureau and the Auxiliary Goodwill Industries as shall first be approved by the Department of City Work. The Bureau shall review all askings for Goodwill Industries and administer all appropriations. The Bureau shall support and indorse only those local Industries which are organized and conducted according to its established rules and regulations, and these local Industries shall be administered, as far as practicable, in co-operation with local City Societies.

The Bureau shall provide for Institutes of Goodwill Industries, composed of the members of the Bureau and two delegates from each duly organized Auxiliary or co-operating Goodwill Industries. These Institutes shall, if practicable, meet once a year in regional or union meetings in the interest of training, promotion, co-ordination, and co-operation, provided no expense shall be incurred by the Bureau in connection therewith which cannot be paid out of the income received by the Bureau from local Goodwill Industries.

A Council of Goodwill Industries of the World may be held quadrennially to consist of such representatives and with such power as the Bureau of Goodwill Industries of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension and the Bureau of Goodwill Industries of the Board of Foreign Missions shall determine.

Adopted, May 28.

REPORT NO. 10. WORK AMONG JEWISH PEOPLE

On examination of the report of the Woman's Home Missionary Society referred by the General Conference to this Committee, your Committee wishes to bring to your attention for adoption the following resolution, relating to work among Jewish people:

In the face of a new situation in the world of Jewry the official delegates of Societies in Protestant Christianity met at Budapest in Hungary, and Warsaw in Poland, in April, 1927, where the general subject of discussion was "The Christian Message to the Jews."

The Woman's Home Missionary Society was honored in being represented by Miss Anna Heistad, Superintendent of Elizabeth E. Marcy Center, the most successful Jewish work in the United States.

After listening to Miss Heistad's report of this Conference, the Board of Managers of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, in convention at Baltimore, October, 1927, authorized the Committee for the Central Bureau of City Missions to prepare these resolutions to be presented to the General Conference to be convened in Kansas City in May, 1928.

As a result of these conferences in Budapest and Warsaw, many facts stand out:

(1) There is being broken down the old wall of hatred between Jew and Christian, due partly to the passing away of the Ghettoes of Europe to which the Jews were formerly restricted. This means that the Jews are mixing on equal terms with the Christians.

(2) Millions of Jewish people are forsaking their own religion and are untouched by any Christian agency. This drift from the Synagogue is a drift toward atheism, agnosticism and materialism rather than toward Christianity.

(3) Jews who have become Christians testify that they find in Jesus Christ a personal experience of God which they did not find in Judaism.

(4) That the most evident stumbling block to Jews in their acceptance of the Way is the lack of Christlike living on the part of those who profess to follow the teachings of Jesus.

(5) The note was sounded again and again in these Conferences that this is a time of unprecedented opportunity and that all Protestantism should awake to the present need and make definite plans to meet it.

According to the latest authentic reports there are 162 cities in the United States with a Jewish population of over 1,000. New York leads with the greatest Jewry in the world. Chicago has 350,000 Jews. Marcy Center in the Ghetto of Chicago is the only Methodist Mission devoted entirely to Jewish evangelism in the United States. In the above mentioned cities there are 1,711 Methodist churches and many Methodist missions among other nationalities, but little, if any, distinctly Jewish work.

We recall the words of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, "The ignorance of the Jew of Christ condemns not the Jew but the Christian." We can remove the burden of this condemnation by taking advantage of these opportunities of the present Jewish situation.

The Church is asked to face and help master the old hate and prejudice between Jew and Gentile. The links between Jew and Gentile are so real and so beautiful, the points of contact are so spiritually deep, the affinities are so pure, and the debts are so mutual, that this ancient enmity is a source of continual wonderment to the inquiring mind.

We, therefore, highly resolve that the Methodist Episcopal Church give to the nation of which Jesus the Christ was a member as much prayerful and thoughtful consideration as it gives to the problems of other nationalities, and we recommend that the General Superintendents give to this subject special study during the next quadrennium.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 11. DEPARTMENT OF FRONTIER WORK

Having had under consideration Memorial No. 758 from the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension, signed by William H. G. Gould, your Committee recommends to amend the Discipline by striking out the whole of ¶ 445 and such part of ¶ 437, § 1, as refers to the Department of Frontier Work, and by adding a new section to ¶ 437 which shall be known as § 4, the said section to read as follows:

¶ 437, § 4. The Board shall make proper provisions for a representative who shall reside within the territory formerly covered by the Department of Frontier, and who shall supervise the work of the Board under the direction of the Executive Secretary, and with whom the Department Superintendents shall co-operate in said territory.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 12. DUTIES OF EXECUTIVE SECRETARIES OF CITY SOCIETIES

After consideration of Memorial No. 1108, from John H. Stooddy:

1. To define the duties of Executive Secretaries of City Missionary and Church Extension Societies.

2. That such definition invest Executive Secretaries, where such are appointed by the Bishops, with the duties and authority usually exercised by District Superintendents in the matter of the organization and development of new churches, the employment of and supervision of workers supported by the funds appropriated by the Board of Home Missions and by the City Missionary Societies.

3. That it also define the relations of the City Missionary Societies to the Board of Home Missions and to local Missionary work.

Your Committee recommends non-concurrence.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 13. THE RURAL CHURCH

Your Committee having considered Memorials Nos. 523, 746, 954, 1078, and 1092, subject Rural Church, presents for your adoption the following resolution:

WHEREAS, The Rural Church and the rural home have been Methodism's greatest sources of leadership, both in the ministry and in the laity, but due to methods of farming, better means of communication, the consolidation of schools, the rural church is facing a crisis. We believe one great challenge confronting us is to strengthen the rural and village churches. Therefore we recommend:

1. That our church publications and educational institutions give special consideration to the social, educational, economic and religious needs of the rural people.

2. That careful consideration be given to the larger parish plan with the hope of securing a more adequately trained leadership.

3. That the Church co-operate in a larger way with the Federal, State and County Agricultural Extension Agencies in helping country communities to attain higher standards of life.

4. That attention be called to the statement on agriculture in the Social Creed of the Church, the declaration concerning the findings of the Comity Council held in Cleveland, Ohio, and the provision made for the appointment of Pastors to community and federated churches under denominational control.

5. That in making the quadrennial survey to determine a new division of home mission funds, the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension, the District Superintendents, and all other persons involved, be requested to make more adequate provision for the rural and village churches.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 14. FOREIGN LANGUAGE WORK IN THE UNITED STATES

Your Committee on Home Missions, concerning Memorial No. 761, from the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, memorializes General Conference to take action upon the following matters relating to the foreign-language work of the Methodist Episcopal Church:

That ¶ 449 be amended by inserting as § 2, the following:

"The Bishop in charge of a mission may appoint a Superintendent of the mission, or as many superintendents as, in the judgment of the Bishop, may appear necessary or wise, and for whom support has been provided. The Bishop shall determine the groups or charges over which the respective superintendent or superintendents shall have supervision."

That another section to said ¶ 449 shall be inserted:

"In case of a mission using more than one foreign language, and extending over a wide geographical territory, the Bishop may assemble in annual sessions the members of the mission on a racial or geographical basis. The mission may delegate to such sub-groups the work of examining and recommending candidates for Admission on Trial to an Annual Conference under such limitations as the Discipline provides."

That the present § 2 shall be numbered "4."

"That the Committee of Six on Foreign Language Literature be continued, with a change in name and a clearer definition of functions."

It is further recommended that ¶ 91 of the Discipline (Miscellaneous) be changed so that the term "Advocate" used in that paragraph be interpreted to include regularly paid subscriptions to the authorized foreign-language publications, such as La Voce, Sandebudet, Evangelisk Tidende, etc. This may be done by adding in parentheses, or in a foot-note, the words "including authorized foreign language publications."

That the number of Ministers on the Bureau be increased from 3 to 5.

It is respectfully recommended that the following additional provisions shall be inserted in the Discipline: "That the statistical reports from the charges in the Bilingual Mission be printed in the official journal of the mission, which should be published annually."

Insert in Conference Adjustments and amend by adding to ¶ 571, § 11 as follows:

"Where Foreign-Language work spreads over the territory for more than one Annual Conference such work may be organically connected with one of these Conferences and may at the discretion of the presiding Bishop be constituted as a District or Mission of such Annual Conference."

We further recommend that there shall be added to § 11, ¶ 571, of the Discipline, the following:

"and that all foreign language work, with the exception of organized Annual Conferences, be set apart in a separate area."

We recommend to the Board of Bishops that the Bilingual Mission, as heretofore, be related to one of the regular Areas of the Church, with the proviso that the number of regular Annual Conferences allocated to that Area be reduced sufficiently so as not to constitute an overload for the Bishop of that Area.

We further recommend that the following portion of the Discipline of 1924, ¶ 571, as it shall then be amended, shall be inserted in the Discipline for 1928, to-wit: beginning with the words "We recommend that" in the twelfth line from the bottom, page 584, omitting the portions contained in other parts of the Discipline:

1. We recommend that, for the purposes of united administration and the appointment of Ministers and Missionaries, a Mission be organized to be known as the Bilingual Mission, to comprise all foreign language work being carried on in connection with English-speaking Conferences in the United States, including also those Churches whose chief activities are among foreign language groups. It is further provided, that, in the merging of a foreign-language Conference, Mission Conference, or Mission, such Churches or Mission Centers not yet ready to merge on account of language conditions shall be placed in the Bilingual Mission. Whenever five or more such Churches or Mission Centers desire it, a group may be formed and such leadership assigned as may be deemed wise by the Bishop in charge of the Bilingual Mission and the Bishops of the Conferences involved.

In order to maintain mutual sympathy and interest between the English speaking and foreign language work, we recommend that the Quarterly Conferences in this Bilingual Mission be held by the District Superintendent of the white English speaking Conferences in whose geographical territory the various Churches and Mission Centers are located; and that Ministers of the Bilingual Mission be members of the English speaking Annual Conferences in which their various Charges are located, and that they assemble for such meetings, either as a whole, or in such national groups, as may be deemed wise by the Bishop in whose Area the Mission is placed, for the purpose of fellowship, the discussion of common tasks and such other activities as may be assigned them by the Bishop.

The Local Approach. To insure a nation-wide sense of responsibility on the part of Methodist Episcopal leadership everywhere, we recommend that it be the duty of the District Superintendent and Pastor to place before the Quarterly Conference of each English-speaking Church in America the fact of its relationship and responsibility to any foreign-language peoples resident in the parish.

We further recommend that a Foreign Language Committee be created in each Quarterly Conference to give attention to the needs of any group or groups of foreign language people found in the community not already included in our foreign-language Conferences, Mission Conferences, or Missions; such Committee to communicate with the District Superintendent and the Bishop or Superintendent of the Bilingual Mission for developing a program to meet the needs of the situation. In view of the varying conditions in different communities, one of three methods of approach is suggested:

First: Where the numbers are not sufficiently large to constitute a grave problem of assimilation, it is recommended that evening classes be organized for the instruction of foreign born, living in the community, in the principles of Christianity and good citizenship; also that the Superintendent and other leaders of the Sunday School organize classes in the Sunday School for the instruction of adult immigrants and children of foreign parentage, and that provision be made for the reception of these people into the regularly organized activities and membership of the local Church.

Second: Where the numbers and conditions are such as to warrant a more intensive program and where a neighboring Church is conveniently located, it is recommended that a foreign-language department be organized in such local Church under the direction of the Foreign-Language Committee of the Quarterly Conference.

Third: Where racial or polyglot colonies are of such size, or where there is no neighboring Church to foster a departmental program, it is recommended that the District Superintendent report such need to the Bishop or Superintendent of the Bilingual Mission and give co-operation in the development of the field through an organized language Church or Mission Center.

The Bureau of Foreign Language Work. Your Commission is convinced that it is of the utmost importance that our foreign-language work be united and correlated, and believes that if the Bishops having supervision of our foreign-language work can be brought together, with representatives of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension for conference and study of the needs and formulation of policies, much more effective work can be done among these foreign language groups.

We therefore recommend that the Bureau of Foreign Language Work of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension be constituted as follows: the Bishops having jurisdiction over foreign-language Conferences, Mission Conferences, or Missions, five Ministers and five Laymen selected by the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension, and the Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension; also that the Superintendents of Departments of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension be made advisory members of the Bureau.

The Bureau thus constituted shall have the following powers and duties:

First: To formulate general policies and principles for work among foreign-language peoples.

Second: To recruit and make provision for the necessary training of leaders to be employed in work among foreign-language peoples.

Third: To review the askings from the field, and recommend appropriations for foreign-language work.

Fourth: To conserve and place upon a missionary basis foreign-language churches and Mission Centers which should continue in their specialized task.

Fifth: To co-operate with other organizations and agencies which are working among foreign-language peoples.

Area Adjustments. Our foreign language work is now distributed over eleven Areas, in many cases only one Conference or Mission to the Area, and believing that the unifying of the work, the carrying out of an aggressive program, and the conservation of the largest results would be facilitated if Conferences were grouped in fewer Areas, we therefore recommend that our foreign language Conferences, Mission Conferences and Missions be grouped in not more than five Episcopal Areas, and that all foreign-language work, with the exception of organized Annual Conferences, be set apart in a separate Area, and placed under the supervision of a Bishop.

We recommend to the Board of Bishops that the Bilingual Mission as heretofore be related to one of the regular areas of the Church with the proviso that the number of regular Annual Conferences allocated to that Area be reduced sufficiently so as not to constitute an overload for the Bishop of that Area.

Administration of Home Missions and Church Extension Funds. We recommend that all Home Missions and Church Extension funds appropriated for use in the promotion of foreign language work in the United States be administered through the regularly constituted channels of the Church.

REPORT NO. 16. RELATION OF RETIRED MINISTERS OF DIFFERENT RACE WITHIN QUARTERLY CONFERENCE
AMONG FOREIGN-SPEAKING PEOPLE

In response to requests, regarding the status of Retired Ministers among foreign-speaking people, your Committee recommends the following action:

That in ¶ 188, § 3, to the sentence reading "Every retired Minister who is not employed as the Pastor of a Charge shall have a seat in the Quarterly Conference, and all the privileges of membership in the Church where he resides," there shall be added "except as set forth in § 4," and that there shall be added § 4 as follows: "In the case of a Quarterly Conference in a Mission among foreign-speaking people, Retired Ministers of different race shall have a vote in the Official Board, or within the Quarterly Conference, only when they shall have been duly elected to the same," so that the amended paragraph shall read as follows:

¶ 188, § 3. Every Retired Minister, who is not employed as Pastor of a Charge shall have a seat in the Quarterly Conference, and all the privileges of membership in the Church where he resides, except as set forth in § 4. He shall report to the Fourth Quarterly Conference and to the Pastor all marriages solemnized and all baptisms administered. If he resides without the bounds of the Conference of which he is a member, he shall forward annually to his Conference a certificate of his Christian and ministerial conduct, together with an account of the number and circumstances of his family, signed by the District Superintendent of the District or the Pastor of the Charge within whose bounds he resides, without which certificate the Conference shall not be required to allow his claim, and may, after due notice and due form and record of trial, locate him without his consent.

§ 4. In case of a Quarterly Conference in a Mission among foreign-speaking people, Retired Ministers of different race shall have a vote in the Official Board, or within the Quarterly Conference, only when they shall have been duly elected to the same.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT No. 17. CHANGE IN NAME OF ANNUAL MEETING

In response to Memorials, your Committee on Home Missions recommends that in the fourth sentence in ¶ 449 of the Discipline, which reads, "This Annual Meeting shall possess the functions and powers of a District Conference, etc.," the word "Session" shall be substituted for the word "Meeting," so that the amended paragraph shall read as follows:

¶ 449, § 1. "A Mission shall meet annually, at the time and place appointed by the Bishop in charge, who shall preside, if present. In the absence of the Bishop, the Superintendent of the Mission shall preside. The presiding officer shall bring forward the regular business of the meeting, and arrange the work. This Annual Session shall possess the functions and powers of a District Conference, although the authority to license Local Preachers, and to renew the licenses of Local Preachers, and Exhorters, shall remain with the Quarterly Conference.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT No. 18. EVANGELISM

We record our appreciation and approval of the work done during this quadrennium by the Department of Evangelism of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension. In sending out District Evangelists; in providing Pastors for foreign-speaking peoples, Negroes, and Indians; in carrying the gospel of Christ to congested centers and sparsely settled rural sections it has rendered a service of far-reaching importance. We urge upon the Church to continue to follow its leadership, and to assist in carrying out its constructive program.

Evangelism must be kept alive, if our Church is to live. We forfeit our mission when we fail to preach a redemptive gospel through Jesus Christ, our Lord. The evangelistic flame must burn in the hearts of our Bishops, our Pastors, and our Laymen, if sinners are made to feel the awful consequences of sin here and hereafter. Only Spirit-filled men can be expected to lead in a spiritual awakening commensurate with the needs of the world to-day. The sin of our great and rapidly growing cities, the urgent call of the mission fields and the depleted and discouraged rural churches, call for a genuine and world-wide revival. What the great spiritual awakening, led by Mr. Wesley, did for England in the eighteenth century, a world-wide revival, led by a united Methodism, can do for the world in this twentieth century. Such a revival is imperative and past due.

In revival work the Church will succeed best by employing every available method of evangelism. We believe in educational evangelism, and call upon all who are dealing with the youth of the Church to teach our young people not only about God, but also how to know and experience Him in their lives.

Visitation evangelism Jesus practiced and approved when He sent forth the seventy by twos, to go from house to house with His appealing and redemptive message. This method is adapted to present-day conditions. Too many have neglected mass evangelism because it is difficult in these modern times. It mobilizes the Church upon her primary task, and produces a solvent atmosphere in which God's Holy Spirit can do His work for those within and for those without the Church. We see no reason why the pre-Easter season should not be devoted to this type of evangelism. Wise and definite use of all church festivals and the suggestive use of Decision Day in our Church Schools should bring the youth to Christ and to membership in His Church. Decision Day affords us our best opportunity to gather into the Church those whom educational evangelism has brought to readiness for this important decision.

In the Episcopal Address the attention of the Church was called to the fact that the nineteen hundredth anniversary of Pentecost comes at the very center of the next quadrennium. In view of this fact our Bishops have called upon Methodism to prepare for proper observance of this historic occasion and to share in its unused resources. We approve of this call because the vital experience that came to the disciples on that notable day is for the Church of to-day. The promise was to "as many as the Lord our God shall call." It is our conviction that we can do nothing greater for our beloved Church, and that our Church can do nothing greater for the Kingdom of God throughout the world, than for this General Conference to decide and declare that during the next quadrennium major emphasis shall be placed upon evangelism. To this end, therefore, we call upon all our District Superintendents, all our Pastors, all our college presidents, professors and teachers, all our editors, all our Church officials, and all our Church members to accept the ringing call of the Bishops and unitedly experience and wholeheartedly express the pentecostal power in evangelistic endeavor throughout the new quadrennium and so long as we are intrusted with the Gospel of Christ. This is our immediate challenge. It is our major task. This is our impelling duty.

Adopted, May 29.

X. EDUCATION

REPORT NO. 2. TRAINING OF NON-SEMINARY PASTORS

"Since one of the gravest problems of our itineracy is that of an adequate supply of properly trained men for our ministry and since this shortage of well-trained men has resulted in the admission to our Conference of a large number with no professional training, therefore, we memorialize the General Conference to provide for the establishment of one or more high-grade schools, especially adapted to the literary, religious and professional training of part of our ministry and other Christian workers who, for various reasons, find it impossible to take the usual courses in college and theological seminary; that the General Conference appoint a commission with power for that purpose, with a view, either to the creation of new institutions, or the conversion of one or more of our smaller colleges or secondary schools into such a training school."

The Committee recommends non-concurrence.

Adopted, May 12.

REPORT NO. 3. TEACHERS OF RELIGION IN CHURCH SCHOOLS

"A Quarterly Conference may commission and publicly set apart to be teachers of religion in the Church schools persons who, by Christian experience, natural ability and training, are properly qualified to be teachers of religion in the local Church Schools. Appropriate forms for public recognition and commission shall be provided by the Board of Education."

The Committee recommends concurrence.

"There shall be a Permanent Commission on Courses of Study to be appointed as follows: three Ministers, to be appointed by the Board of Bishops, three members from the faculties of the educational institutions of the Church, nominated by the Board of Education, and appointed by the Board of Bishops, and the Book Editor, ex officio."

"To amend ¶ 210, § 2, by adding, after line 20, the following words: 'All books to be included in the courses of study shall be approved by at least two-thirds of the members of the Board of Bishops present and voting,' so that the entire section shall read as follows:

"The Commission shall prescribe the Courses of Study upon which those applying for License to Preach, for Orders as Local Preachers, and for Reception on Trial, respectively, shall be examined; also a Course of Study for Local Preachers extending through four years; and a Conference Course of Study extending through four years to be pursued by those who have been received on Trial in the Annual Conference; it being understood that only such books shall be prescribed as are in full and hearty accord with those doctrines and that outline of faith established in the constitution of the Church; and that the Discipline, with some special emphasis upon the Articles of Religion, and the standard sermons of John Wesley, recognized as standards in American Methodism, shall be included in the Conference Course. It shall bring its recommendations as to the constitution of these courses and the texts to be used to the Board of Bishops for final approval. All books to be included in the Courses of Study shall be approved by at least two-thirds of the members of the Board of Bishops present and voting. It shall at the same time communicate them to any member of the Church who may make such request. It may provide means for carrying on the work of the Conference Courses of Study by correspondence, and may also provide a Post-Graduate Course of Study for use in the Annual Conferences."

The Committee recommends non-concurrence.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 7. ENDOWMENT OF COLLEGES to study, during the next quadrennium, by the best approved methods, all the educational institutions under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The findings of the Commissions are:

First: To furnish the bases to determine the nature and quality of the service rendered the cause of Christian Education by our Educational Institutions, to appraise their work and suggest improvements in it, to co-operate in formulating a constructive, statesmanlike policy for them, to inform the Church so that it may be inspired to increased confidence and more generous support.

1. That these memorials be referred to the Committee on Curriculum and to the editor of Church School publications for their consideration and action.

2. While recognizing the necessity for expressing the fact and mind of Christ in a changing world, we urge that this interpretation of the mind of Christ and the application of his teachings to life to-day be made with reverent regard for, and loyalty to, the historic standards of Methodism.

3. That the editorial policy in interpreting the Bible according to the very best knowledge we have, and the consistent application of the teachings of Jesus to all human relationships, be approved.

¶ 453, § 1. The Board shall organize such Departments and appoint such Committees as may be necessary for the proper discharge of its business. It may from time to time adopt by-laws for the regulation of the affairs of the Board and of its several Departments and Committees, not inconsistent with the Act of Incorporation or with General Conference legislation. (cf. ¶ 457.)

§ 2. The Board may appoint an Executive Committee from among its members of such number as it may determine and may commit to said Executive Committee such business and confer on it such powers as are not inconsistent with the Act of Incorporation or with General Conference legislation. Minutes of all proceedings of the Executive Committee shall be kept, and shall be submitted to the Board for approval. (cf. ¶ 454-2.)

§ 3. The Board shall appoint a Finance Committee consisting of five members of the Board, with whom may be associated two additional persons not members of the Board. The Treasurer shall be an additional ex officio member of the Finance Committee. To this committee shall be entrusted the care and management of the funds of the Board and their proper investment under such regulations as the Board may adopt. It shall fix the official bond of the Treasurer and of other officers entrusted with the handling of funds and shall consider and approve the administrative budgets of the Board and its several Departments and Committees, within the appropriations fixed from time to time by the Board. Minutes of all proceedings of the Finance Committee shall be kept and shall be submitted to the Board for approval. (cf. ¶ 454-3.)

§ 4. The Board shall appoint a Curriculum Committee of such number and in such manner as it may determine, always including the Book Editor, the Editor of Church School publications, and the Editor of the Epworth Herald. It shall be the duty of the Curriculum Committee to determine standard curricula for all Church Schools, including vacation and week-day Schools, the Epworth League, and other agencies within the local church, and to recommend to the Board books and other literature which may be found desirable for use in religious education and in the training of leaders and teachers. (New.)

¶ 454, § 1. The Board of Education shall receive such funds as are contributed for educational purposes through the general benevolences of the Church and shall appropriate the same for the maintenance of the work committed to it, under such rules as the Board may adopt, provided they are in accord with General Conference legislation. (cf. ¶ 455-6.)

§ 2. The Board shall have power to administer any and all funds, gifts or bequests which have been or which may be committed to it for educational purposes, and shall be authorized to solicit and create any special funds deemed wise in the carrying out of the objects and purposes of the Board, and to administer the same under such rules and regulations as it may adopt, provided the purposes for which funds are committed to the Board shall be sacredly maintained. (cf. ¶ 455-9.)

§ 3. The Board may solicit, create, and administer a fund which shall aid in providing retiring allowances or pensions for the Presidents, professors, and other members of the faculties of the educational institutions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and may adopt rules and regulations for the administration of such fund. (cf. ¶ 455-8.)

§ 4. In making appropriations toward the support of educational institutions, the Board of Education shall give due consideration to the actual current needs of such institutions as shown in carefully prepared reports presented by them on budget forms provided by the Board. Institutions with limited endowment, but rich in their contribution to the religious leadership of the Church, are especially commended to the favorable consideration of the Board. Appropriations to institutions from funds at the disposition of the Board shall not debar them from soliciting additional support from their patronizing territory. (cf. ¶ 455-6.)

§ 5. No institution hereafter established or acquired shall be aided by the Board, unless the Board shall have been consulted and shall have approved the establishment or acquisition of such institution, and the University Senate shall have approved its proposed classification before the project was undertaken. (cf. ¶ 455-5.)

§ 6. The Board of Education shall maintain and administer institutions for Christian education among the Negroes of the Southern States, and elsewhere, as the Board may determine. Such institutions shall be located and developed with due regard to a system which will provide for the educational needs of the people with the greatest efficiency and economy. To this end, the Board shall have authority to adopt plans by which schools sponsored by it may co-operate with or may unite with schools of other denominations or under independent control, provided the interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church are adequately protected. Special effort shall be made to secure permanent endowment for schools, under the direction of the Board and whenever the Board is assured that their support will be adequate and that their property will be conserved and perpetuated, the schools may be transferred to local boards of trustees. (cf. ¶¶ 463 and 467.)

§ 7. As a means of educating the Church on the needs of the Negro schools, the Sunday nearest the birthday of Abraham Lincoln shall be observed as Lincoln Sunday, at which time the interests of Negro education shall be presented. The Board shall receive all moneys derived from the observance of this day and use the same for the advancement of Negro education. (New.)

The Student Loan Fund

¶ 455, § 1. The Board shall administer a Student Loan Fund for the purpose of assisting meritorious young persons, members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to secure a more advanced education. Such assistance shall be given only in the form of loans, but by a two-thirds vote of the members present and voting, the Board shall have power to cancel such loans in whole or in part for reasons which may seem to it sufficient. Funds for this purpose shall be derived from:

- (a) The income from the invested fund known as the Sunday School Children's Fund of 1866. (See § 2.)
- (b) The Children's Day Fund. (See § 3.)
- (c) Moneys repaid by borrowers from this Fund.
- (d) Interest received from student loans.
- (e) Gifts for the purposes of the Fund. (cf. ¶ 455-4.)

§ 2. The Board shall receive and separately invest the moneys contributed, prior to the first day of January, 1885, for "The Sunday School Children's Fund of 1866." The income thereof, aside from such funds as may be appropriated for the necessary expenses of its administration, shall be devoted to the purpose of assisting meritorious Sunday School scholars, members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in obtaining more advanced education, preference being given to the aid of young persons preparing for the ministry or for the Home or Foreign Missionary work of the Methodist Episcopal Church. (cf. ¶ 455-1.)

§ 3. The Board shall receive the moneys derived from the collections taken annually in all the churches on Children's Day, the second Sunday in June, or such other day as may be more convenient. The money received from this collection shall constitute "The Children's Day Fund." After proper provision has been made by the Board for the promotion and administration of this fund it shall be appropriated year by year for loans to needy students who are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. (cf. ¶ 455-2.)

§ 4. Each Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church shall be entitled to share equitably in the income of the Sunday School Children's Fund of 1866 and in the distribution of moneys annually received from the Children's Day collections; provided, the annual collections for the said purpose are taken in the Sunday Schools within its bounds and are forwarded to the Board of Education. (cf. ¶ 455-3.)

Educational Institutions

¶ 456, § 1. The educational institutions in the United States under the patronage of the Methodist Episcopal Church are classified as follows:

1. Universities.
2. Schools of Theology.
3. Other Professional Schools.
4. Colleges of Liberal Arts.
5. Junior Colleges.
6. Secondary Schools.
7. Training Schools for Religious Workers.
8. Primary Schools and Religious Day-Schools.
9. Wesley Foundations and other Auxiliaries.

It shall be the duty of the President or other administrative officer of each educational institution to furnish to the Board and to the University Senate such statistics and other information as may be necessary to a proper classification of that institution. "No candidate shall be admitted to an Annual Conference on trial until he shall have completed a course of study equivalent to the University Senate requirements for admission to college, except under special conditions, and then only after at least three years' successful Ministerial service under a 'District Superintendent,' and only by two-thirds vote of the Annual Conference."

The paragraph as amended will read as follows:

"No candidate shall be admitted to an Annual Conference on trial until he shall have completed a course of study equivalent to the University Senate requirements for admission to college."

To amend ¶ 617, § 5, which reads as follows:

"No candidate shall be permitted to remain longer than four consecutive years on trial nor longer than eight consecutive years in the Course of Study, after being admitted on trial, unless extension of time shall be recommended by a two-thirds vote of the Board of Examiners and authorized by a two-thirds vote of the Annual Conference." Failure to complete the first two years of the Course of Study within four years shall automatically discontinue the candidate on trial, and failure to complete the entire four years of the Course of Study within eight years shall automatically locate a member of the Conference, unless extension of time shall be granted as indicated above. In no case shall a person be permitted to remain longer than ten years in the Course of Study."

“§ 2. Any Conference also, at its discretion, may accept similar certificates from the institutions above described, indicating like proficiency in any particular study, secured by the use of a different book or by lectures fully equivalent to the corresponding book in our Course of Study.

“§ 3. Similar certificates in studies not biblical or theological may be accepted from other than Methodist Colleges, if of equal grade with those approved by our University Senate, and in American History from academies or seminaries, either approved by our University Senate, or of equal grade with those thus approved.

“§ 4. Graduates of college, who are also graduates of one of our regular theological seminaries, shall be exempted from examination on the Conference Course of Study except on the Discipline.

“§ 5. A certificate testifying that the candidate has completed satisfactorily at least two years of college work in any college of equal grade with those approved by our University Senate may be accepted in place of an examination in ‘the English language.’

“§ 6. All certificates shall state the time when studies were pursued.

“§ 7. A certificate for the purpose of recording the annual markings in the required studies for the entire course shall be issued to persons licensed to preach, or received on trial.”

Amend by substituting for the entire paragraph the following:

Graduates of college who are also graduates of one of our theological schools approved by the University Senate shall be exempt from examination in the Conference Course of Study, except on the Discipline. Graduates from other than Methodist Episcopal schools may be exempt from examination in the Conference Course of Study, except on the Discipline and Christian Doctrine.

“§ 2. Credits from other Methodist Episcopal theological schools, not of graduate rank, may be accepted on the basis of studies pursued in the same text or of equivalent courses in the same subjects.

“§ 3. Credits from other than Methodist Episcopal colleges may be accepted in studies not biblical or theological, if the schools are of equal grade with those approved by our University Senate, and in the case of American history from regularly approved high schools or academies.

“§ 4. Credits from other than Methodist Episcopal schools of theology may be accepted in all subjects except the Discipline and Christian Doctrine, but this shall apply only to graduate schools of theology of recognized standing.

“§ 5. A certificate testifying that the candidate has completed satisfactorily at least two years of college work in any college approved by our University Senate or any other college of equal grade may be accepted in place of an examination, in the text book on English prescribed in the course.

“§ 6. Credits shall be accepted only on the basis of certificates issued by the schools in question, stating the time when the courses were taken and the standing attained, the latter to be not less than seventy (70) on the scale of 100.”

III. To amend ¶ 619 as follows:

The Commission on Conference Courses of Study, or any Conference or group of Conferences may establish a Summer School of Ministerial Training for the further training of under-graduates, and attendance of under-graduates at such schools wherever established is required. Likewise the Annual Conference may require under-graduates to carry on the work of the Course of Study by correspondence, as facilities for the same may be provided by the Commission."

§ 7. Amend the section which reads as follows:

"Local preachers who are supplies and who are giving their full time to Pastoral Work under the District Superintendents shall be required to take the Local Preachers' Course of Study year by year, under the Annual Conference Board of Examiners, this rule to apply to all men under forty years of age and likewise to all local preachers who shall be newly employed beginning with the fall of 1920."

Add the words, "Any supply Pastor who shall refuse to observe the requirements of this section shall not be employed by the District Superintendent."

IV. To amend ¶ 622, the prefix to the "Local Preachers' Course" by adding the following words: "Local Preachers who are serving as supply Pastors" may take the regular Conference Course if they so elect instead of this Course."

REPORT No. 30. SECRETARIAL TRAINING FOR BOARD SECRETARIES

Your Committee recommends that the following memorial be referred to the Board of Education for favorable consideration.

WHEREAS, More and more are our Ministers being called away from their pulpits and ministerial service, to take financial and executive secretaryships with the many institutions of our Annual Conferences, and of our General Boards.

WHEREAS, Large amounts of money are expected and required from our Church membership toward the education, in our Methodist Colleges and Theological Seminaries, of the young men taking Classical and Theological education, specifically for the purpose of the Christian ministry as a life profession.

WHEREAS, It is inexpedient and economically unwise and unsound to remove a large number of our professionally trained men from their definitely ministerial service, to business positions for which they have not been trained.

THEREFORE, Be It Resolved, That the Board of Education be requested to consider this problem, having in view the feasibility of promoting the business and secretarial training of young men in our colleges, specifically for life service along the above mentioned lines, for which our Church has not, heretofore, made definite provision.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT No. 31. WESLEY FOUNDATION

A. The quadrennial report of the Board of Education, printed in the Handbook and referred to this Committee recites the history of the Wesley Foundation movement on behalf of Methodist students at other than Methodist institutions and calls attention to the growth of the movement from 1918, when there were twenty operative points, to 1927, when the number had reached sixty. In 1918 the appropriations from the co-operative boards for Wesley Foundation work were $8,000. In 1927 the total appropriations were about $100,000.

The report states the governing principles of the Wesley Foundation movement in these words:

"What the Church desires in the way of moral and religious atmosphere, ideals, influences, and activities for students in our own institutions she desires for those in non-Methodist institutions. Nothing less than these ideals can be seriously considered in determining a desirable program and the support which is its due."

B. Referring to Memorials Nos. 66, 793 and 939, asking for the strengthening of the Wesley Foundation movement by establishing schools for religious training at tax supported institutions, by giving this work a definite place in Area programs, and by better organization and financial report, this committee reports:

1. We deeply appreciate the hearty endorsement of Wesley Foundation work in the Episcopal Address and in the Bishops' reports from the various Areas, and we respectfully suggest that this work be given a definite place in the program of all Areas in the United States where opportunity offers.

2. We recommend that the Wesley Foundation Committee, in co-operation with the Survey Commission of the Board of Education, shall make such studies and surveys during the ensuing quadrennium as may be necessary for the preparation and presentation of a comprehensive report to the General Conference of 1932, and that it shall at that time make recommendations for the future program, permanent organization, and support of this work.

3. We recommend that the editors of our Church publications aid in arousing our people to the importance of conserving to the Church the potential leadership in our Methodist youth at tax supported educational institutions through the work of the Wesley Foundation.

Adopted, May 23.

REPORT NO. 32. EPWORTH LEAGUE

In reply to Memorials proposing closer correlation between the Epworth League and the Church School, and to a Memorial suggesting the union of the Epworth League with the Society of Christian Endeavor, we make the following statement and recommendations:

First. The spirit back of both of these proposals should be heartily commended. The underlying problem involved is that of developing a program, in our own church, and in relationship to other churches, which will help the young people in intelligent and vital Christian living. We affirm that the development of such a program is central to our whole task and should have right of way.

Second. That the Church School and the Epworth League, next to the home, should become increasingly the channels through which the religious nurture and training of youth should be accomplished, and means should be found for this effective co-ordination. We commend the progress made during the past quadrennium in this direction, as shown in the work of the Committee on Curriculum of the Board of Education.

But efforts at correlation should not obscure the most important task of creative pioneering in program building. Whatever steps may be taken in correlation must not be permitted to stifle initiative or to prevent the liberty of young people themselves in self direction. The uniqueness and value of the Epworth League as a young people's society should be conserved, thus providing an effective channel for such initiative and self-expression through its local chapters and its institutes. We call attention to the new ¶ 459 in the proposed legislation offered by the Committee on Education as covering the case.

Third. We affirm the close kinship that exists between the Epworth League and the International Society of Christian Endeavor, the Baptist Young People's Union, and other young people's societies, and we recommend the fullest possible co-operation with these bodies in the interest of the youth of the world.

We cordially commend the progress made recently in co-operation between the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and heartily endorse great co-operative youth enterprises, such as the Crusade with Christ.

Meanwhile, we favor the fullest co-operative effort rather than organic union with any of these organizations for four reasons:

1. Because this policy leaves to each organization the fullest freedom and initiative to move forward as rapidly as its constituency cares to move, in experimentation and creative program building.

2. Because the progress thus made by any group can be shared with all through such agencies as the Interdenominational Young People's Commission, and the Young People's Work Section of the International Council of Religious Education.

3. Because experimental steps in co-operation may prove the most direct path to further unity.

4. Because meanwhile there is greater opportunity to articulate the program of the Epworth League with the whole program of Methodism, and to fit Methodist youth for effective participation in their own church, than would be possible were its programs prepared by outside agencies.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 33. RELATION OF WALDEN COLLEGE TO THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Your Committee, to which was referred the memorial concerning Walden College and its relation to the Board of Education, particularly in view of the proposal to close Walden, would report that:

1. The property of Walden was transferred to the Board of Education for Negroes in 1921.

2. In our limited time it has been impossible to make the thorough investigation necessary.

3. From our limited investigation it appears that there may be some rights and privileges of the Walden Trustees which might be endangered or put in jeopardy, if the school were closed.

4. Because there are legal aspects to the case which require a fuller investigation we move its reference to the Board of Education with our recommendation that at an early date the legal aspects of the case be thoroughly investigated and all the rights of Walden be protected.

Adopted, May 29.

No Annual Conference shall have more than one representative on the Board.

"§ 2. The Bishop and the Corresponding Secretary shall be

Substitute for the above the following:

"¶ 484, § 1. There shall be a Board of Pensions and Relief, nominated by the Bishops and elected by the General Conference, consisting of one effective Bishop, who shall be President of the Board, nine Ministers and nine Laymen; also the Corresponding Secretary, who shall be a member of the Board, ex officio. "§ 2. The Bishop and the Corresponding Secretary shall be elected quadrennially by the General Conference. The other members of the Board shall be divided into three classes:

"Class I shall consist of three Laymen and three Ministers, who shall be elected by the General Conference of 1928 to serve for four years.

The Bishops are hereby requested to nominate six of the seven present members of the Board of Pensions and Relief who were elected by the General Conference of 1924 as members of the class of 1932, as members of the new class of 1932, and the remaining member as a member of the new class of 1936.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 2. CONNECTIONAL RELIEF

Amend ¶ 488, § 1, which reads:

“¶ 488, § 1. Moneys for Connectional Relief shall be distributed by the Board of Pensions and Relief at its Annual Meeting, to the Annual Conferences severally, and not to the individual claimants.”

By striking out the words “and not” in the fourth line and substituting therefor the words “or at its discretion to individual Ministers or Claimants.”

The section as amended will then read:

“¶ 488, § 1. Moneys for Connectional Relief shall be distributed by the Board of Pensions and Relief at its Annual Meeting, to the Annual Conferences severally, or at any time at its discretion to individual Ministers or Claimants, whose claims are presented with the endorsement of the Secretary or Treasurer of the Board of Stewards of the Annual Conference to which such Minister or Claimant belongs.”

Adopted, May 26.

REPORT NO. 3. REFERRING THE MINISTERS' RESERVE PENSION FUND PLAN TO A COMMISSION FOR PERFECTION AND ADOPTION

Be It Resolved, that we recommend to the General Conference that it authorize, empower and direct the Board of Bishops to appoint at this General Conference, a Commission on Reserve Pension Fund Plan, to consist of three Bishops, five ministers and five Laymen, said Commission to meet in the fall of 1928 at a time and place to be designated by the Board of Bishops. The said Commission shall work in conjunction with the Board of Pensions and Relief and have power to edit, revise, perfect and adopt a Ministers' Reserve Pension Plan; provided, however, that the basis of the work of said Commission shall be the accompanying draft as revised and hereinafter stated; and furthermore provided, that the work of said Commission shall be conducted as nearly as possible in harmony with the following stipulations and instructions:

1. The Commission shall report the final text of the Ministers' Reserve Pension Fund Plan to the General Conference of 1932 for incorporation in the Discipline, and shall cause it to be printed in the official papers of the Church at least one year prior to the date of commencing operation of the fund.

2. The Commission shall not cause the plan to be set in operation by the Board of Pensions and Relief until a Guaranty Reserve Fund shall have been provided for the liabilities assumed. There shall be a Laymen's Committee on Pension Finance, consisting of not less than twenty-five members, to be appointed by the Board of Bishops, the said Committee on Pension Finance shall work in connection with the Annual Conferences to assist them to provide for the liabilities to be assumed by the Board of Pensions and Relief.

The necessary expenses of the Commission shall be paid by the Board of Pensions and Relief.

The amount raised is for the purpose of fully protecting the rights of the Conference Claimants under the original pension system of 1908, in order that the revenue from the pastoral charges for Conference Claimants shall not be diminished on account of payments for new entrant members of the Ministers' Reserve Pension Fund.

3. The Annual Conference shall be recognized as the unit of collection of contributions, and as the adjudicating agent in all matters thereto pertaining, and the Board of Pensions and Relief shall be recognized as the agency by which the Ministers' Reserve Pension Fund shall be held in trust and its benefits administered, and the board shall be empowered to act for the Annual Conferences which so desire. Any Annual Conference may enter the Reserve Pension Fund provided the reserves are set up by the said Conference.

4. The principle of equalization of benefits shall be applied within Annual Conference units.

5. All obligations assumed by the Ministers' Reserve Pension Fund shall be fully covered by actuarially determined reserves.

6. Provision shall be made for annual reservation of an amount not to exceed one quarter of one per cent of the support of the members of the Ministers' Reserve Pension Fund, for the purpose of giving pension aid to members of the fund belonging to the weaker Annual Conferences. The word "support" shall be interpreted according to the definition thereof in the text of the plan.

7. For the purpose of providing a part of the retirement annuity, the members of the fund shall be asked to make a contribution not to exceed the equivalent of two and one-half per cent of the members' "support" as defined in the text of the plan.

The Pastoral Charges served by members of the fund, shall be asked to contribute annually an amount which shall not exceed the equivalent of eight per cent of the member's "support," as defined in the text of the plan.

8. The age of retirement of members of the fund shall conform to the age of retirement provided in the Discipline for Conference Claimants.

9. The pension benefits shall be based on such amount of annuity as the accumulated annual pension credits will provide at the age of retirement.

10. A scheme of pensions and relief for Supply Pastors shall be provided as a supplementary feature of the plan.

11. During the ensuing quadrennium, and until the General Conference shall order otherwise, the operation of the plan shall be confined to Annual Conferences within the United States of America.

12. The Board of Pensions and Relief shall be authorized to study the problems involved in the pension situation, as it concerns home and foreign missionaries, with instructions to report to the next General Conference.

Adopted, May 28, as a substitute for the majority report, and after a minority report had been defeated.

REPORT NO. 4. QUADRENNIAL REPORT, BOARD OF PENSIONS AND RELIEF

Your Committee, to which was referred by the General Conference, the report of the Board of Pensions and Relief as published in the Handbook of the General Conference, has made a careful examination of the same, and we express our high appreciation of the work of the Board and of its Secretary and his associates during the past quadrennium, and especially call attention to the remarkable work of investigation and research in bringing to this General Conference these studies for the Church. It is almost impossible in a superficial and brief report to acknowledge in words the accomplishment of the officers and employees in laying the foundation of a Reserve Pension System for the Church.

We note with great satisfaction the progress made by the Board during the past four years in the splendid report of its finances as follows:

The total money distributed has steadily increased, as is shown by the following payment by quadrenniums:

First Quadrennium	1900-1903.....	$ 1,183,000
Second Quadrennium	1904-1907.....	1,473,000
Third Quadrennium	1908-1911.....	3,171,000
Fourth Quadrennium	1912-1915.....	4,431,000
Fifth Quadrennium	1916-1919.....	5,497,000
Sixth Quadrennium	1920-1923.....	9,849,000
Seventh Quadrennium	1924-1927.....	12,647,000

A review of business operations of the Board, for the fiscal year ending December 31, 1927, reveals the fact that the financial affairs of the corporation are in excellent condition. The total investments now approach nearly $2,000,000. In this are included $1,654,999.16 in the Permanent Fund, $60,000 held in trust for various Annual Conferences, and the balance in other trust funds held under contract. The investments are diversified as follows:

Real Estate Mortgages.....	$ 322,000
Public Utility Bonds.....	421,000
Railroad Corporation Bonds.....	542,000
Industrial Corporation Bonds.....	177,000
Municipal and Foreign Government Bonds.....	306,000
	$1,768,000

We desire to express high appreciation of the statesman-like service of Dr. Joseph B. Hingeley, who for the past twenty years has rendered unusual service to the Church in the interest of the retired ministers, and who has the vision of the future minister in mind, as well as the memory of the fathers. We hope and pray that his life may be spared for many more years of efficient service.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 7. SUPPLY PASTORS' RELIEF

We recommend that the General Conference approve favorable consideration of the appropriation of $25,000 annually from the receipts of the World Service Commission, for the relief of retired Supply Preachers, according to the present conditions as established by the Board of Pensions and Relief.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 4. PENSIONS FOR DEACONESSSES

WHEREAS, For different reasons, we are not able at this time to propose a satisfactory permanent plan for the pensioning of Deaconesses, we wish therefore to recommend the following as a tentative plan for the present quadrennium.

1. We suggest that the Commission on Deaconess Work make a further study of this problem and bring in recommendations for a permanent plan four years hence.

2. That for the ensuing quadrennium, in addition to the $24,000 accruing as income from the Deaconess Endowment

Pension Fund and an adequate allowance from the Board of Hospitals, Homes and Deaconess Work, a contributory plan for additional income be adopted and the money raised jointly through the Deaconesses and the institutions and churches served by Deaconesses, as follows:

One percent from each deaconess on the basis of a minimum allowance of $35 per month, and

One percent on the same basis, to be paid by the institution or church served by the Deaconess.

It is estimated that such combined funds will be adequate to meet the needs for the ensuing quadrennium until a more permanent plan can be recommended and adopted after study by the Commission on Deaconess Work.

Prohibition is the fixed policy of the United States of America. The Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution incorporates in the basic law of a great nation the underlying moral convictions of its people.

Liquor Traffic an Outlaw

The American nation is no longer in partnership with the liquor traffic. It has deprived that traffic of the sanction of law and the protection of government. That traffic is an outlaw, which no longer has standing as a lawful institution in the statutes and the courts of the nation. This alone constitutes one of the greatest victories for civic righteousness recorded in modern times.

This achievement represents the ripened conviction and the deliberate judgment of the American people, after more than a hundred and fifty years of regulation, license, repression, taxation, government sale and attempted control, and every other method devised for the purpose of dealing with this nefarious habit and traffic.

The Results of Prohibition

The social, economic and moral benefits of this law have been amply demonstrated in increased industrial efficiency, a larger degree of safety on the highways and in the factories, unmatched productivity, unparalleled savings, unequaled public health records, a remarkable decrease in the national death rate and unprecedented evidences of social and moral well being.

The conservation of the higher values of manhood, reduced sorrows of womanhood and mitigated wrongs of childhood, eloquently proclaim the success of prohibition as a sound policy of government, which has made it "easier for men to do right and more difficult for men to do wrong."

Judged by all the evidence in the case, prohibition with enforcement at its worst is shown to be better than the legally sanctioned beverage alcohol traffic, with regulation at its best.

Orderly Government Challenged

The forces of greed, avarice and appetite have challenged the authority of law, defied government, held up to contempt the fundamental principles of righteousness, and have flouted the expressed and properly recorded will of the American people.

In the face of such defiance we insist upon a more aggressive, unyielding and definite campaign of agitation, organization and education in the interest of our common objective. Total abstinence must be stressed; the vital importance of law observance, as basic to adequate law enforcement, must be emphasized; there must be a revival of scientific temperance instruction in the public schools; the pupit, the Church school, the young people's societies and all other agencies of the Church must take an aggressive and constructive course of action. We must speedily get to the people the whole truth about the nature and effects of beverage alcohol; the truth about the real character and activities of the local, national and international liquor traffic; the truth about all methods tried or schemes proposed for the solution of the problem.

Issue Definite and Clear

We are not deceived by cunningly devised plans of the enemies of sobriety and prohibition to discount the work already accomplished. We demand clear and definite declarations on the part of candidates and parties appealing to our constituency for their suffrage.

We serve notice on all concerned that our attitude on this vital question is resolute and irreversible, that we will not be lulled into inactivity by evasive promises, or indecisive declarations, that we will not support uncertain candidates for State and National legislative and administrative offices, and that we will not willingly tolerate in positions of responsibility those who do not sustain the law and the principle of righteousness which the law represents.

A World Wide Problem

The beverage alcohol evil presents a world problem, which demands international co-operation. Permanency of prohibition in America requires international action, while the success of a world movement for sobriety depends upon the success of prohibition here. Prohibition is not safe anywhere until it has become the settled policy of government everywhere. We, therefore, pledge to our brothers in other countries our fullest possible co-operation in the struggle against the international traffic, which now seeks not only to stem the tide of temperance advance in other lands, but to undermine and nullify prohibition in America.

Organized Activities

We commend and endorse the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in its national and international leadership among women; the Anti-Saloon League of America, our approved agency for co-operation with members of other churches and with temperance organizations in America for united effort against the common foe; and the World League Against Alcoholism, in which are federated the principal anti-liquor organizations in the several countries for international interdenominational effort for temperance and reform.

Especially do we urge upon our people everywhere increasingly to support and to co-operate with Methodism's own agency in the field of moral reform. The Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, with a record in the past of which we are justly proud, is planning even a greater program for the future, to which our Methodists should rally with increased enthusiasm and confidence throughout the whole Church.

To all temperance and prohibition agencies and movements which are effectively and aggressively pressing for temperance and moral reform in America and abroad, we appeal for renewed activity and co-operative effort to the end that the moral forces of the nations shall speedily find the way to a world redeemed from the curse of beverage alcohol.

No Turning Back

This moral conflict must be prosecuted to final victory. We stop at no half-way station. We summon the enlightened public opinion and quickened public conscience of the nation and the world.

We will not countenance anarchy under a banner of personal liberty and social license; and we support the right of a free people to govern themselves. In this strategic hour in the progress of this great reform there must be no minor note, no discordant sound, no equivocal stand.

We face the issues before us with confidence and determination. We believe in the common sense of the American people. We believe in the triumph of right. We believe in the hand of God in our national affairs.

We will not be stampeded; we will not retract; we will not cease to speak by tongue and pen and vote; we will not turn back; we have enlisted for the duration of the conflict, which will end only in the complete extermination of the beverage alcohol habit and traffic.

Adopted, May 21.

REPORT NO. 2. STATEMENT ON PUBLIC MORALS

The Christian Church must ever be the protector of humanity against these customs and practices which tempt, debase and destroy. We should never be indifferent to those evils which disgrace and molest mankind. It is the mission of Christ's Church to help destroy these and to give to our nation and to the world the divine chance of becoming what Christian civilization ought to be.

We are profoundly concerned about the moral life of our nation. The subtle forces of materialism and irreligion have been increasingly active since the World War. The insidious propaganda against our ideals is dominated by a philosophy of atheism and paganism.

We are convinced that upon Christian citizens devolves the sacred privilege of counteracting that pagan conception of life which puts a low estimate upon personality, fosters the vulgar and the obscene, develops the irreverent and the frivolous, encourages sensuality and vice, and forever tempts mankind to live on the plane of the animal.

In view of the demoralization that war produces—the breaking of family ties, the loosening of moral restrictions, and the augmentation of all evil habits—it is not strange that there are innumerable signs of degeneracy. The terrible thing about war is not only the death of patriots upon the battle field, but the moral death of some who, far away from restraining influences, yield to sin. Human life appears cheap and murder becomes frequent.

Following this lowering of ideals, the theatre introduced nudity, profanity and blasphemy on its stage which, though not as prevalent to-day as it was a few years ago, is all too common. The provision by which the New York authorities have power to close the theatre which offends public decency should be adopted and used vigorously and frequently throughout the nation. On this issue there is common thought among Catholics and Protestants. Every right thinking American should co-operate with every other such American in defense of the American home. We wonder how much longer the American people and the American Department of State will permit the movie magnates to misrepresent American civilization in the eyes of the nations by uncensored films that are shipped abroad, giving foreign minds a false impression of the civilization of this Christian Republic.

There is a terrible decadence in popular literature. We protest against the salacious magazines sold promiscuously on our streets. Our own Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals led a movement for the suppression of such literature and has been supported by the newspapers of more than two hundred American cities, with the result that a distinct gain has been made since the last General Conference. We warn our young people against these writers who substitute billingsgate and abuse of American institutions, traditions, and customs for literary form, facts, and reasonable discussion.

Two notable evils that were suppressed have come up again since the war, gambling and commercialized prize-fighting. Gambling undermines business integrity by teaching the young to seek something for nothing. Prize-fighting, reintroduced among States that had long outlawed it, is utterly brutalizing. It does not make heroes, but creates selfish and dishonest groups that appeal to the baser passions and secure enormous gains.

The amusement question is ever with us. There are healthful and vitalizing recreations, but there are those which are utterly worldly and appeal to the animal nature. We must so present the principles of the Gospel of Christ that our young people will discriminate between the harmful and the innocent and will turn away from those amusements which have proved themselves damaging to Christian life, and seek their recreation in those which are not offensive to our Lord and Master.

The Christian Sabbath was one of the first institutions planted on American soil. It grew with the States and became part of the common law. It is recognized in the second article of our Constitution. Laws that protect it from secularity and commercialism have been pronounced constitutional by the Supreme Court. It brings blessed rest for the toiler, reasserts family ties and sentiments which are under strain during six days in the week. It furnishes opportunity for the voice of the Church to be heard among the people, and for the still small voice to be heard by busy men and women. The Church will not stand by and see the walls of the Sabbath broken down before their eyes. We will rally our forces for its support that they may protect the moral ideals of the Church and the religious life of the nations.

We plead earnestly with Methodists everywhere so to live in conformity with the spirit of Christ that by their lives, even in the midst of wicked environment, they may emphasize decency, sobriety, and self-control.

REPORT NO. 3. AUDIT OF ACCOUNTS OF THE BOARD OF TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION AND PUBLIC MORALS

We have examined the Auditor's report of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals covering the period from December 31, 1923, to October 31, 1927.

The report shows total contributions to the general fund of $426,074.36, and of $67,306.56 to the building fund, or a total of contributions during the three years and ten months, covered by reports, of $493,380.92. This does not include other items of income, such as rents from the building.

It also shows an indebtedness of $190,670 on October 31, 1924, and of $142,628.73 on October 31, 1927, a reduction of $48,041.27 during the quadrennium. The report is six months old, and Dr. Wilson informs us there has been considerable paid on the indebtedness since that date.

The auditors report that they have examined the cash receipts with bank deposits and found them correct.

Adopted, May 14.

REPORT NO. 4. ADMINISTRATION OF THE BOARD OF TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION AND PUBLIC MORALS

The work of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, for the quadrennium now closing, is hereby highly commended.

The administration of this Board under the direction of its General Secretary, has been of a high order and thoroughly consistent with the broad character of activities as expressed in its corporate title. The "Voice" and "The Clipsheet" have been regularly sent to a wide and important constituency.

The completion and equipment of the beautiful building, strategically and commandingly situated in Washington, D. C., is an accomplishment of great significance to the Board, and is a credit to the Methodist Episcopal Church. The remaining indebtedness on this building should speedily be removed, thereby making this valuable property an endowment for the Board.

The work in Italy, France, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, Czecho-Slovakia, South America, India, and Japan has been maintained and should be continued.

Adopted, May 21.

REPORT NO. 5. TEMPERANCE EDUCATION

In consideration of Memorial No. 313, presented by Baltimore Conference, your Committee reports as follows:

In order that the members and adherents of the Methodist Episcopal Church may be constrained to assume their full measure of responsibility for the intensive education of our youth relative to the underlying principles of the Eighteenth Amendment and its supporting legislation, be it therefore

Resolved by this General Conference:

1. That we urge upon all our Pastors and Sunday School workers the imperative need of frequent inspirational talks, sermons, study classes, and group conferences, wherein the many phases of this subject shall be earnestly considered;

2. That we urge upon Pastors, Sunday School workers and

Epworth League officials the largest use of the valuable literature now made available by our own Board of Temperance, by the educational bureaus of the Anti-Saloon League, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, The Methodist Book Concern, and other organizations;

3. That we request the editors of our Advocates and Sunday School publications to procure and publish brief articles, news items and stories of such volume and such frequency as shall provide an effective antidote to the falsehoods of that part of the daily press which lends comfort to the enemies of prohibition.

4. Noting the unrestraint in our times we summon with a fresh urgency, the parents and Pastors, and especially the leaders of our youth, to renew the exposure of the grievous evils from intoxicants and to impress upon the boys and girls the blessings of voluntary total abstinence. We charge the friends of the Home and the Church with the high task of reasserting total abstinence as a noble ideal and reviving it in the habits of life.

5. That we call upon Methodist parents and church officials to insist that the provisions of the laws of the several States for public school instruction in the effects of alcohol on the human mind and body, shall be faithfully carried out.

6. That we advise our members in subscribing for newspapers and in placing advertising to give preference to those papers which deal fairly, both in their news and editorial columns, with the prohibition movement.

Adopted, May 18.

REPORT NO. 6. "DEFENSE OF DRY WORKERS"

WHEREAS, The enemies of the Eighteenth Amendment, in certain well known wet newspapers, and certain officials in a few States are using methods of intimidation in efforts to abridge the constitutional rights of free speech and free press, threatening trustees and superintendents of Anti-Saloon Leagues and other temperance organizations, endeavoring in various ways to frighten, discourage and discredit the League officials and other temperance leaders in certain States of our nation.

Be It Resolved, That we urge all Methodists everywhere in the United States to stand by their chosen leaders in this day of crisis, to withhold criticism unless clear and proved facts justify criticism, helping in every way to hold up their hands and encourage them in this great reform; and,

Be It Further Resolved, That we believe it to be, not only the constitutional privilege, but the Christian patriotic duty of every temperance leader, state and national, to point out without fear or favor, the attitude and record of all candidates for office, to the end that our members and all dry voters, regardless of Church affiliation, may vote intelligently and courageously for men possessed of the character, ability and inclination to bring about a better enforcement of prohibition.

Adopted, May 17.

REPORT NO. 8. COMMENDATION OF DR. J. M. DORAN

In consideration of Memorial No. 1058, presented by the members of the Puget Sound Conference delegation, your Committee reports as follows:

WHEREAS, The Federal Prohibition Commissioner of our Government is now the Hon. J. M. Doran, a life-long believer in the law he is called upon to enforce, who is giving a successful leadership to the enforcement plans of the United States Government, Resolved, That we commend the Government in his selection and congratulate him upon his success, especially in his latest move for the discouragement of liquor violators, whereby tax penalties established under the old revenue laws are being asserted against them after they have been convicted of violations of State prohibition laws and have satisfied the sentences given them by the local courts. This strategic move for law enforcement is an evidence of what an alert leadership may do to meet a difficult situation.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 10. PROTECTING OUR IDEALS

With regard to Memorial 1164, entitled, "Protection of Our Ideals," signed by William H. Anderson, of New York, and presented by D. L. Musselman, of the Illinois Conference, your Committee recommends non-concurrence on the ground that we regard this as a civic rather than a moral question.

Adopted, May 25.

REPORT NO. 11. STUDY OF ALCOHOL CONSUMPTION
BY LEAGUE OF NATIONS

In compliance with the spirit of Memorial 520, introduced by members of Bengal Conference, your Committee recommends that the following request be sent to the League of Nations:

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, composed of 864 Delegates representing the said Church in thirty-seven different countries and nations, now in session in Kansas City, Missouri, United States of America, most respectfully requests the League of Nations to study the individual and social effects of the consumption of alcohol in various countries of the world, to the end that all nations may be supplied with correct and authoritative information as to the effort to eradicate one of the worst and oldest evils afflicting mankind—and the results thereof.

Further, while the said General Conference acknowledges and commends the attempt of the League of Nations to cope with some great international moral problems, it would at the same time respectfully request that the League of Nations discourage by all means at its command the distilling, manufacturing and use of alcohol as a beverage in all mandated territories and colonies.

Adopted, May 29.

REPORT NO. 13. DEPARTMENT FOR CONSIDERING PROHIBITION IN EUROPE

With reference to Memorial No. 1174 submitted by Dr. F. H. Otto Melle, requesting a Prohibition Department in the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals for special consideration of prohibition in Europe:

We report that a conference was held between our sub-committee and a sub-committee of the Committee on Foreign Missions and a joint recommendation was issued recommending that this request be referred to the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals.

Adopted, May 29.

Adopted, May 7.

REPORT No. 2. RESOLUTION OF GENERAL POLICY

"Whenever a resolution of general policy signed by one hundred members of the General Conference shall be presented it shall be printed in The Daily Christian Advocate and shall be considered by all committees affected by it. But after five days it shall be before the Conference, with a person designated by the signers of the resolution having the rights of a chairman of a general committee. Provided, however, that no member of this body shall sign more than one resolution of general policy."

The Committee recommends non-concurrence.

Adopted, May 8.

V. Calendar.

Following every completed Call of the Conferences, the reports of the several Standing and Special Committees and Commissions shall be called in the order in which they are filed with the Secretary of the General Conference, except as otherwise determined by the General Conference.

Adopted, May 8.

II. AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY

REPORT No. 1. MINUTE ON DR. WILLIAM INGRAHAM HAVEN, GENERAL SECRETARY OF THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY

Your Committee on the American Bible Society recommends the adoption by the General Conference of the following minute:

At the meeting of the Board of Managers of the American Bible Society on April the 5th, 1928, the Rev. William Ingraham Haven, D.D., at his own request withdrew from the varied responsibilities of a General Secretary, and was elected General Secretary in Charge of Versions. It is understood that Dr. Haven will continue the supervision also of a part of the foreign work of the Society.

For eighty-eight years, beginning with Dr. (later Bishop) Edmund S. Janes in 1840, one of the Corresponding or General Secretaries of the American Bible Society has been a Minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church. For nearly thirty years of this period Dr. Haven has served the Society in this capacity. He has carried the broad and intricate duties of this office with notable skill and great distinction, with unfailing patience and good-will, and with a deep and constant concern for the needy people of the world to whom the Bible is to come as a light out of great darkness. He is a wise counselor and true friend in many other phases of the Church's activity, notably in the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America and other international and interdenominational movements. Dr. Haven, who is a member of the New England Conference, has added new distinction to the honored name he bears, and through his able administration of the work of the American Bible Society has accomplished missionary tasks of first importance to the establishment and growth of the Church.

The General Conference congratulates the Methodist Episcopal Church and the American Bible Society on the many years of Dr. Haven's devotedly loyal service as General Secretary and upon the new emphasis which Dr. Haven's new position makes possible, on the Society's important work in translating and publishing the Scriptures in the languages of the nations.

The General Conference instructs the Secretary of the Conference to send to Dr. Haven a message conveying the hearty greetings and warm affection of the Church.

Adopted, May 21.

REPORT NO. 2. GENERAL REPORT OF AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY

Your Committee on the American Bible Society has had before it the report of this Society as published in the Handbook and supplementary information furnished to the Committee by the officers of the Society.

The record of the quadrennium calls for the heartiest praise and commendation of the achievements realized and the difficulties surmounted. The great services of the Society in the translation, publication and distribution of the life-giving Book of Books in thirty countries through its twenty-two agencies, and through correspondents in as many countries more, deserve the gratitude and support of the Church. The issues of Scriptures for the quadrennium have amounted to more than 32,800,000 copies, an increase of 15,800,000 over the issues of the last quadrennium. That so large a number of Bibles, Testaments, Gospels and other books of the Bible have been circulated in scores of languages and by thousands of colporteurs, correspondents, and volunteer workers in so many countries is a splendid accomplishment. Yet when we recollect that there are countries and continents included in this distribution which number their population by hundreds of millions, a great challenge yet remains to the Society and the Church!

A severe blow to the Society was the destruction of more than $150,000 worth of plates in several languages in the Japanese earthquake. By the loyalty of friends of the Society in all the churches, the emergency has been met without reducing the current budget, in itself an evidence of the high regard in which the organization is held. Baffled again and again, but never giving up in its efforts to secure entrance for the Scriptures into Soviet Russia, the Society finally overcame the import prohibitions by providing funds by which plates for a whole Bible and a pocket New Testament in the new orthography were made in the Government printing houses in Moscow and are made available to every group of Russian Christians that desires to arrange with the press for an edition. More than 25,000 have been issued and a new issue of 50,000 is being prepared for by two of these groups.

The destruction of Philippine plates in the earthquake referred to led to revision of the translations in several of these languages. The Society has expressed its appreciation of Methodist co-operation in this work in Ilocano, Pangasinan, and Pampangan tongues, as of similar services in other parts of the world. The Society's report records additional languages conquered for the first time for the Word, and progress in still others.

The service of the Society through the years is brought to mind by the celebration of semi-centennials of four of the foreign agencies; the Japan Agency, established in 1876, has seen its first decade from a third of a million in the first decade to nearly three millions in the fifth; the China Agency, opened in 1876, reports fifty years later a circulation in a single year of over 3,820,000, the largest in its history; the Brazil Agency, begun in 1876, celebrated its fiftieth year with many marks of public good-will and of increasing value of its influence; the Mexico Agency is now laying its plans for its semi-centennial in this year.

Other notes of interest and importance are the Society's emergency distribution of tens of thousands of Gospels in the refugee camps of the Mississippi Valley Flood, and the present effort to reach the restored homes with new copies of the Book; the extensive demand, reaching several hundred thousand, for the one-cent Gospels for concerted reading in the January and February pre-Lenten period; the growing use of the Book of Proverbs in reaching high school students; the wide-spread observance of Universal Bible Sunday, and the recent attractive changes in the one-cent Gospels and other portions that will make these even more popular for unlimited missionary use.

Among changes in the Society's personnel to be noted is the passing in June, 1927, of General Secretary Arthur C. Ryan, who succeeded Mr. Frank H. Mann, resigned, in October, 1924. Dr. Ryan is missed by friends in many churches. The change of duties of Dr. William I. Haven to General Secretary in Charge of Versions is appreciatively noted in Report No. 1 of this Committee. On behalf of the Church, a cordial welcome is extended to the new General Secretaries who took office on May 1; Eric M. North, Ph.D., a member of New York East Conference, who has been Associate Secretary for a year, and the Rev. George William Brown, recently Pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Ben Avon, Pittsburgh, Pa. We bid these new officers God-speed in their responsible and important labors. The report of the Society to the General Conference as well as a look into its history shows how closely in personnel, as in common tasks, the Society and the Church have co-operated.

The Committee notes with regret that, with the other missionary offerings, the contributions of the Methodist Episcopal Church for the quadrennium have fallen from $150,000 annually to about $70,000 in the Society's fiscal year 1927. Each year the Society has tried to anticipate this reduction, but without full success. Some heavy burdens have had to be shouldered, but more serious has been the limitation upon the Society's capacity to meet the urgent needs of the world for the essential Book. Only by the aid of individual gifts, the holding steady of other co-operating denominations, and the constriction of issues and work has the Society been able to avoid actual retrenchments.

The Society naturally looks to the Methodist Episcopal Church, as one of its oldest friends and a leader among them, not to fail to stand by it fully.

In view of the essential importance of the work of the American Bible Society to all our missionary and churchly endeavor:

1. We recommend that this cause be presented to all our Churches annually as has been the custom since 1836, as one of the official benevolences.

2. We recommend that the amount to be asked for or assigned to the American Bible Society be referred to such body as the General Conference may establish or continue in supervision of the askings of the benevolent boards, such body to give full consideration to the needs for the indispensable Scriptures.

3. We recommend that the Board of Bishops be authorized to appoint a representative of the Methodist Episcopal Church upon the Advisory Council of the American Bible Society, with whom the Board of Managers may advise during the quadrennium concerning the budgets and work of the Society, with the understanding that the expenses of this representation shall be met by the American Bible Society.

4. We recommend to all our churches the observance of Universal Bible Sunday, in order that the place of the Bible in the life of the Christian nation and of the world may be more deeply impressed on all our people.

5. We recommend that our Pastors and people earnestly consider the responsibility of each local church for placing the Bible in the homes of the community and for making the printed Gospel the message that abides when the voice ceases.

Adopted, May 21.

III. COMMISSION ON CENTRAL CONFERENCES

REPORT NO. 1. CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS EMPOWERING CENTRAL CONFERENCE TO ELECT BISHOPS

Pursuant to the instructions of the General Conference, your Commission of Twenty-five on Central Conferences makes the following recommendations:

shall be amended by adding to said § 3 the following words:

And may empower Central Conferences to elect Bishops or General Superintendents whose Episcopal supervision shall be within the territory included in the Central Conference by which elected, subject to such other conditions as the General Conference shall prescribe, provided, however, that a General Superintendent or Bishop elected by one Central Conference may exercise Episcopal supervision in another Central Conference when so requested by such other Central Conference,

So that the Section, as amended, will read:

"The General Conference shall not change nor alter any part or rule of our government so as to do away Episcopacy, nor destroy the plan of our itinerant General Superintendency; but may elect a Missionary Bishop or Superintendent for any of our foreign Missions limiting his Episcopal jurisdiction to the same respectively; and may empower Central Conferences to elect Bishops or General Superintendents whose Episcopal supervision shall be within the territory included in the Central Conference by which elected, subject to such other conditions as the General Conference shall prescribe, provided, however, that a General Superintendent or Bishop elected by one Central Conference may exercise Episcopal supervision in another Central Conference when so requested by such other Central Conference."

Adopted, May 16.

REPORT NO. 2. PROPOSED STATUTORY LEGISLATION

In accordance with the instructions of the General Conference your Commission of Twenty-five on Central Conferences recommends the following legislation to be printed in the Appendix of the Discipline of 1928, and to become effective if and when the proposed Constitutional Amendments on this subject recommended by the General Conference May 16, 1928, shall have been adopted.

PROPOSED LEGISLATION

ized by the General Conference, or that may develop from authorized Central Mission Conferences as set forth in § 2 (17), with the privileges and powers as hereinafter set forth, provided that a Central Conference shall have at least a total of 20 Ministerial and 20 Lay Delegates on the basis of representation as set forth in Item (2) hereof.

FRATERNITY

THE METHODIST CHURCH OF JAPAN

SEE JOURNAL, PAGES 233, 234 AND 287

Merle N. Smith, Chairman of the Committee on the Reception of Fraternal Delegates:

MR. CHAIRMAN AND BROTHERS, it is certainly an enrichment of the General Conference to stop and to consider our fraternal relationships in the Kingdom of God and the Church of God, and I am speaking for the entire General Conference when I say that we are delighted, we are most happy, to receive and to welcome these fraternal messengers as they come to us from time to time.

Any man who helps us to see in imagination the distant places of the world, who lifts up into our horizon other lands and the faces of other peoples and who brings to us something of an interpretation of the genius of their national life, puts us in his debt.

We are especially happy to receive tonight messengers and messages from the land of the rising sun, from representatives of a people whom we so greatly admire; the courteous, courageous, patient, hard-working, forward-looking people of Japan. Their wonderful progress in the last seventy-five years, as you know, constitutes one of the marvels of the modern world. It is certainly a true thing to say of these our brethren who come to us from Japan that the heart of the American people is in accord with the heart of the Japanese people in the desire for mutual fair play and justice and for the maintenance of peace, everlasting peace, between these two great nations as they face the Pacific.

The progress of the Japan Methodist Church is a source of gratification and joy to our hearts; and to have even a glimpse of it, of the range of its activities and the breadth of its spirit and to feel the warmth of its spirit and the upward reach of its aspiration, is to kindle one's enthusiasm.

It is the privilege of your Committee tonight to present two distinguished fraternal messengers from the Japan Methodist Church.

Bishop Locke: Ladies and gentlemen, it is a distinguished honor conferred upon the presiding officer tonight to have the privilege of presenting to you Dr. T. Ukai, who is now pastor of the Harris Memorial Church of Kamakura, Japan. For twenty-eight years he was pastor of the Ginza Church in the City of Tokyo.

I tarried for the Sunday School Convention in Tokyo on my way to the Philippine Islands in the fall of 1920; and at that time I had an invitation from Dr. Ukai to occupy his pulpit. I am just reciprocating, or I hope I may be able to do so, the very cordial welcome which he extended to me as the pastor of the Ginza Church. I told him a few moments ago that I remembered with what facility he interpreted my feeble remarks to his congregation on that happy morning, and he said, "No, not interpreted, but interrupted."

I am almost sorry that he speaks the English language because I would like very much to interpret the Japanese language to you, and have him address you in his native tongue.

Dr. Ukai is a charming Christian gentleman, and it is my very great pleasure to present him to you as a friend of eight years standing.

FRATERNAL ADDRESS OF DR. TAKESHO UKAI, DELEGATE OF THE METHODIST CHURCH OF JAPAN

Dear Fathers and Brethren:

The land of the Rising Sun in the Far East, even Japan, salutes the land of the Stars and Stripes in the Far West, even United States of America. The youngest member of the world-wide Methodist family, even the Japan Methodist Church, takes a great delight in commissioning the fraternal messengers to convey her sincere greetings to and express heartfelt love for the Mother Church in America, even the Methodist Episcopal Church.

We rejoice with you over every success which has crowned your worthy and diversified activities in the world parish, and praise God for it.

We thank you most heartily for your fraternal delegate to the General Conference of the Japan Methodist Church, held last October, in Kamakura Methodist Church, of which I am pastor. The presence of Bishop Charles Bayard Mitchell with us was a benediction. His admirable fraternal message was full of cheer, encouragement and inspiration. He made us all feel more than ever the heart-throbs of the Mother Church.

We also thank you very sincerely for resident Bishop Herbert Welch, loved and respected of Christians and non-Christians alike. His long and uninterrupted service in religious work and other ways has been most eminent, and he well deserved the recent special recognition at the hand of His Majesty, the Emperor of Japan, who was pleased to confer upon him a decoration of the merit of the third order, and grant him a gracious personal audience at the Imperial Palace in Tokyo. We all would feel very happy indeed, should he be sent back to his old post for another term, as we greatly need a recognized leader, administrator, and statesman-like Christian, such as he is, not only in religious work, but also in delicate and complicated international relations arising from time to time.

Our deepest appreciations and hearty thanks are due you for your motherly sympathies and generous financial aid toward our young church, which has been struggling and pressing on toward the marks of high calling in winning Japan for Christ. When in 1907, two commissioners were sent out to Japan by the Methodist Episcopal Church in concurrence with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Canadian Methodist Church, for the purpose of effectively uniting their respective mission work in the field and newly organizing the Japan Methodist Church, many seriously questioned its wisdom and greatly doubted its fruitful outcome. Twenty years have rolled on since then and the young church has just become of age, so to speak, and her growth has been normal, being full of faith, courage, fervent evangelistic spirit, and progressive ideas. While she cannot claim her development to have been great or rapid, yet her membership and Sunday School enrollments have been nearly quadrupled. In giving, too, she has made an encouraging advancement, and self-supporting churches have been rapidly increasing in recent years. So in 1925 she was able, gladly and confidently, to tell the Mother Church in America that she could now look after her own interests and needed no more subsidy. Thus in 1926 she became an independent church in reality. When Mr. Lamont of Morgan & Company, New York, was in Japan last year, he was kind enough to make a call upon a group of the National Sunday School workers in Tokyo, and put to them a sharp question, saying: "Is Christianity doing any real good in Japan? I think I have a right to definitely ascertain the exact facts about it, because I have already made a considerable investment in missionary work." The answer was, of course, affirmative and unanimous. You too have a right to ascertain the real facts about the exact status of the work in Japan, in which you have made such a large and continuous investment. If you ask me whether Methodism in Japan is doing any real good, or whether the Japan Methodist Church is doing any effective work for Christ and His Kingdom, my answer would be definite and affirmative, as I have already stated above. Besides, she has been and is constantly producing Christ-like men and women, such as the late Senator Ebara, statesman and educator; the late Taro Ando, indefatigable temperance reformer and mighty lay evangelist; Dr. Shosuko Sato, foremost Christian educator, and the like, not to mention the late Bishop Honda and others. It was only three months ago that East and West Japan Conferences simultaneously met in the city of Kobe for the first time in twenty years and held joint or separate sessions, as occasion allowed or required. It was rather a novel and daring undertaking. The results have, however, amply justified laborious efforts and large expenditures. At a great union Conference prayer meeting one morning, the Holy Spirit mightily fell upon nearly five hundred preachers and laymen, when they, in response to an invitation given by the leader, rushed forward in tears and sobs, and knelt around the great altar in repentance and new consecration. It was a new Pentecost in Japan Methodism and a wonderful beginning of an organized and protracted evangelistic campaign just launched in commemoration of the union of the three Methodist Missions and organization of the Japan Methodist Church. Another incident of rare value and momentous interest took place on the following day. It was the spontaneous and enthusiastic giving by a large number of preachers and laymen, who pushed their way toward the platform, with cash or pledge cards in their hands, and laid them upon the table for the proposed evangelistic campaign and liquidation of an old debt. It was also an inspiring sight, not soon to be forgotten, when twenty-eight bright and promising young preachers were ordained deacons or elders by Bishop Uzaki on Conference Sunday in the presence of a large audience. Surely the Japan Methodist Church is alive and active, purposing to do her full share for Christ and His Kingdom in Japan. Venerable Bishop Cranston is the only survivor of six commissioners sent out to Japan in 1907, and is able to hear and know, at first hand, these joyous and most encouraging facts concerning the Japan Methodist Church, with whose organization he had so much to do. Therefore, I count it my peculiar honor and privilege to thus speak in his presence. He has rendered Japan Methodism and the Kingdom an imperishable service, and we shall never cease to revere and honor him to the end of our days. May God ever bless him, and his great and glorious Church!

Your missionaries in connection with the Japan Methodist Church are showing magnanimous and admirable spirit, whenever and wherever they come in close contact with us, the Japanese workers. They are only seeking to render the best service, wherever they are needed. They are our true yoke-fellows and co-workers. We still need them in evangelistic and educational, social welfare work and the like.

In conclusion, let me say again that though young and weak, the Japan Methodist Church is fully determined to stand firmly and surely for all that Christianity and Methodism mean, and to press forward from one victory to another in winning Japan and even regions beyond for Christ. For this reason, the young church in Japan earnestly desires to keep herself in close touch with the Mother Church in America, and sincerely solicits her ever increasingly prayerful interest in and fraternal relations with the young church. Lastly but not the least, we wish to reassure you that we shall never cease to be thankful to the Mother Church in America, and always try to follow her with keenest interest and most sincere prayers.

Merle N. Smith: Dr. Ukai is one of the veteran ministers of the Japan Methodist Church. He was for more than twenty-five years pastor of the same Church in Tokyo, which is almost the record for Methodist preachers. We thank you, Dr. Ukai, for your presence and address.

Your Committee has the pleasure now of presenting the credentials of the second fraternal delegate from the Japan Methodist Church who represents the younger group of that church.

FRATERNAL ADDRESS OF REVEREND YOSHIMUNE ABE, DELEGATE OF THE METHODIST CHURCH OF JAPAN

Dear Fathers and Brethren:

It is my privilege today to bring you affectionate greetings from your daughter far across the sea. I feel like using the term filial rather than fraternal; for we think of you still as our Mother Church. And we are just about to become of age, for twenty years ago next month Bishop Cranston and Dr. Leonard came with the representatives of the other great Methodisms of this continent and helped us to become one united and autonomous Methodism of Japan. Even after the children have reached the age of discretion, and have gone out from under the parental roof, the Mother is happy to receive assurances of undiminished affection, and those assurances I bring back to the old Home Church today.

Four years ago our representative, Brother Kameji Ishizaka, was before you to tell of the terrible earthquake which had just devastated so great a part of our territory. Your generous response to our cry for help has largely made possible a work of reconstruction which I am glad to be able to report as well on toward completion. Our great Tokyo School, the Aoyama Gakuin, from which we have just graduated more than 550 young men and women, and which has above 3,000 on its rolls, is housed in three fine buildings, though it still struggles under some debt, and still awaits the erection of a Theological Building. And I may state that the new buildings that we have erected can accommodate only a fraction of the young people who desire to enter our institution. The week before I sailed from Japan we had our entrance examinations for our High School Department, and though we advertised for 200 new students, 914 made application for admission. Of the twelve churches destroyed, most have been rebuilt, the great Ginza Church of Tokyo having been dedicated only last month. Our people, crushed as many of them seemed to have been, have risen courageously and given generously toward this reconstruction project. I am grieved to report to you that Brother Ishi-zaka, whom you welcomed so cordially at your previous session, and who was in charge of this reconstruction project, after many months of illness passed away some months ago. Our Church has also suffered the loss of another of its leaders in the death, in a railway accident, of Rev. D. Hatano, Secretary of our Board of Missions and Evangelism.

In spite of our great earthquake losses we have been making long strides toward self-support in our evangelistic work. We shall never cease to be grateful to you, in that, while granting us autonomy in the beginning, you did not cease to help us in our financial struggles. We have been striving toward complete financial autonomy, and our present plan is that within two years we shall have made all our organized churches self-supporting. This, however, will not mean the withdrawal of Mission aid from Japan, for we still have the great educational interests, the missionaries, both in evangelistic and educational work, pioneer evangelism, which is peculiarly the work of the foreign missionary, work of social service, and other forms of Christian activity, which we are not yet strong enough to undertake by ourselves. But as to churches, parsonages, pastors' salaries and church expenses, we are to carry these from our own budget, raised among ourselves. And in the past quadrennium we have made much progress in this line. Our self-supporting churches have increased in number from 33 to 83, a net gain of 50. We have built 35 churches and 31 parsonages.

And may I go on with a few figures, which may seem very dry, but which tell many stories of sacrifice and labors abundant. We have a membership of 30,088. We have 42,311 children in our Sunday Schools, 5,998 young people in our Epworth Leagues, 4,997 members of our Women's Societies. Last year we raised more than $278,000 for our General Expenses. We have 127 members of our two Annual Conferences. From our three Mother Churches we have 121 missionaries, 67 men and 54 women, working side by side with us. We are always asking for more of them. Our relations with one another could not be happier. There is an interdependence among us, and there is no place anywhere in our Church organization or our Church activities where any lines of nationality are drawn. Our Church has made no sweeping advances, but has made healthy progress in every branch of its life, and is moving onward steadily as one of the great regenerating forces of our Empire.

At our General Conference in Kamakura last October we were greatly honored and favored by the presence of Bishop Charles Bayard Mitchell, who brought us your greetings and gave us a strong Christian message. Throughout the entire Conference there was a rich devotional atmosphere. It was almost like a camp meeting in its spiritual emotions and its dedication to the leading of our Master. The members themselves pledged large sums towards the wiping out of our evangelistic fund deficit, and launched our Church out upon a campaign of evangelism. We are planning to hold retreats for the deepening of our spiritual life. Our watchword during the previous quadrennium was along the line of Self-Support. Our new ideal for this present quadrennium is Dedication for Evangelism.

If I should tell you of the discipline and policy of our Japan Methodist Church, how we have an episcopal term of only four years, though we have just elected Bishop Uzaki for a third term, and we have District Superintendents appointed from a panel elected by the entire Conference, and we have laymen in our Annual Conference, and we have laymen equal in number to the ministers in the Bishop's cabinet, and other slight deviations from the traditional organization of your body, you might accuse me of trying to influence legislation. For I believe that all of these are live topics among you. But suffice it to say, that with no fear of adjusting our organization to changing conditions, we still hold to all the great principles which are summed up in the word Methodism, and are happy to be a loyal member of the great family of people called Methodists.

"Herbert Welch" is a name spoken among us always with gratitude, with sincere respect, and with deep affection. He has been a great gift to us from our Mother Church. For more than twelve years, indeed, he has been advising us so wisely, understanding us so sympathetically, and inspiring us so richly. Our Imperial Majesty, the Emperor, has recently conferred upon Bishop Welch an unusual high decoration in recognition of his services to the Empire and we all have shared in that honor. Brothers and Sisters, it is our sincerest and most earnest desire to have our Bishop Welch returned to his old Area, that we may continue to have him among us, our ideal Christian statesman and friend.

May I trespass upon the bounds of modesty in a final word of my own. I might tell you that I am one of the many products of the work of Methodism in Hirosaki, a small city in a far corner of Japan. But your missionaries went there half a century ago, and in a wonderful way the young people of that town responded to the call, not only to the Christian life, but to definite Christian service. I am the eighty-seventh of the 132 young men and women who have gone out of that town to enter some form of active Christian ministry. That is just one bit of the romance of Missions. Speaking now not as a fraternal delegate, but as a simple Japanese boy from far North Japan, converted in a Methodist Episcopal Church, baptized at her altar, educated in her Mission School, trained for the ministry in her School of Theology, welcomed over here in my student days, and given training in Drew Theological Seminary, and now for years past happy in preaching and teaching as a Methodist minister, may I bring my tribute of personal gratitude to the feet of my dear Mother Church, and assure her that all she has done for me makes more clear in my heart the call to give Him more completely the love and the service of my life.

A host of Methodists in the Land of the Rising Sun join me today in a prayer for God's richest blessing upon this Conference, and upon your great Church, that it may increasingly be an instrument in his hands for bringing in His Kingdom.

FAREWELL MESSAGES OF REV. TAKESHO UKAI AND REV. YOSHIMUNE ABE, DELEGATES FROM THE METHODIST CHURCH OF JAPAN

Merle N. Smith: The fraternal messengers from Japan to this General Conference are about to take their leave. I speak for the entire General Conference when I say that the presence of these brethren and their addresses have been a delight and inspiration. Certainly no one would suppose that it was their purpose in their addresses to influence legislation in this General Conference, but when these brethren pictured to us illuminatingly as they did the program and prosperity of the Japan Methodist Church, and then in the next breath told us that their Church elects the Bishop for only four years and that the District Superintendents are elected by the Annual Conference and that laymen sit in the cabinet of the Bishop, it was certainly bound to appeal to the radical proclivities of this General Conference. We have not been asked to nominate Bishops for the Japan Methodist Church, but regarding the matter with practiced eye we think we see Bishop material in these fraternal delegates. We thank them for their presence. Some of us wish we were going back with them to the land of the cherry blossoms, to the exquisite courtesies and beautiful hospitality of the people of Japan. We ask these brothers to bear to their brothers and ours of the Methodist Church of Japan the assurances of our affection and of our esteem. Dr. T. Ukai and Rev. N. Y. Abe. We bid them Godspeed.

FAREWELL WORDS OF REV. T. UKAI

Mr. President, ever since I made my appearance in this Conference you have been very kind to me. In the few days I have been with you I have received great education, training, inspiration and fine impressions upon my mind and heart. I haven't words to express what I feel in my heart sufficiently. Simply I want to thank you most happily. Before I go away from this Conference I must leave this, my testimony, with you. It is this, what I have been in the past and am at present as a minister-preacher, I owe largely to the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Simpson College yonder in Iowa. Forty-three years ago I came to this country as a poor young student eager to get a higher education, but without the money in my pocket, without a friend on this continent, without sufficient English on my tongue, and without faith in God. But merciful God placed me under a good Christian in the Japanese Gospel Society, then poorly housed in the basement of the Chinese Mission at San Francisco. There I was converted and taken into the Church communion. Later, friends, I fully surrendered to God's call for the ministry. Then Dr. Bovard and Dr. Harris helped me and I was sent to open a Japanese Mission in Japan.

When I came to this country in 1889 God showed me an open way to Simpson College for my education. On I started. On the way to Indianola, Iowa, one Sunday evening God spoke to me distinctly. He told me to be strong and of good courage. I went to the college at Indianola and remained there five years. There I was trained and educated, and then I joined Des Moines Conference and was sent back to Japan thirty-three years ago. In these thirty-three years God has been wonderful to me in various ways. Now, this time I come back as a fraternal delegate from my own Church. Today I go in the name of Japan Methodist Church, but in my heart I think I am a Methodist Episcopalian. I love your Church. I can't help that, because I was born in it, and reared in it. I thank you for what your Church has done for me, and your college. I am glad I have stayed with you these days. I pray God may yet give you victories in the years to come. Thank you.

FAREWELL WORDS OF REV. Y. ABE

I have the feeling just the same kind as Dr. Usaki has expressed on this occasion. I am very much thankful for the courtesy you have expressed to us and I am leaving this country with the new inspiration for the future work of the Japan Methodist Church. I thank you very much.

Bishop Leete. Inasmuch as these brothers have so long a journey to make home again, I think you would wish me to assure them, in the name of the Conference, that we pray for them a safe and comfortable return to their homes and God's greatest blessings on all their future work.

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA

Merle N. Smith, Chairman of the Committee on the Reception of the Fraternal Delegates:

We honor ourselves as a General Conference in honoring as we do today the distinguished representative from the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. The Great Man one time said, "I am a voice." The Federal Council of Churches is the voice, upon occasion, for at least twenty million communicant members of the twenty-eight groups that constitute the Federal Council. For one reason among others, we stand for the Federal Council of Churches as a General Conference because of certain people who stand against us. Every militarist in our land, every nullifier or would-be nullifier of the eighteenth amendment is unfavorable in his attitude toward the Federal Council of Churches. If at any time we can find out what these particular people are against, we are for it, and anything we know they are for we are against. It is an honor that your Committee has in presenting to this General Conference Dr. John Milton Moore, formerly the pastor of a great Baptist Church in Brooklyn for a period of ten years, and now General Secretary of the Federal Council. I present him to you.

FRATERNAL ADDRESS OF REV. JOHN MILTON MOORE

Members of this General Conference, this is one of the high and rewarding experiences of my life. I count it a very great privilege and honor to be here. I sat in this Conference on the day of the presentation of the Bishops' Address, a noble utterance that will hearten and challenge Churches of the world regardless of faith and order, and I count it a very great privilege and honor to be invited to speak to you this morning in behalf of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

The cordiality and warmth of Dr. Smith's introduction have left nothing to be desired, and I feel myself at once at home among you, and I hope you are thinking of me, not as an outsider, but as one representing a very significant part of your own life and work, for the Methodist Episcopal Church was most useful and influential in the creation of the Federal Council of Churches nearly twenty years ago. Throughout this period of its life your great Communion has been one of the most generous supporters of the Federal Council, not only in the contribution of money, but in the contribution of life and prayer and interest in this great instrument of the greater part of Protestantism in the United States.

You have contributed to this Council some of the most able men on our secretarial staff who are serving all of the Churches effectively and usefully, in a sense, in your name.

The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, as you must know, is not a free-lance organization. It was created by the official representatives of twenty-eight of the Protestant Communions of the United States, and it is controlled and directed by them. These twenty-eight Protestant bodies include in their communion membership, as Dr. Smith has told you, some twenty millions of members. They are represented on the Federal Council which meets quadrennially, as does your body, by officially appointed delegates, one for each fifty thousand communicants. That would mean that this General Conference is represented on that body by upwards of one hundred members of your own appointment, and other Protestant bodies in proportion to their communion membership.

The next quadrennial meeting will be held in Rochester, December 5 to 12 of this year. Between the sessions of the quadrennial meetings there is a committee of some hundred and fifty people meeting annually with an administrative committee with one representative from each of the Communions, together with representatives of affiliated bodies that meet monthly in the city of New York. All of the actions of this body are taken with a view to complete unanimity and by the fact that you are represented on that administrative committee you may be pretty sure that the actions of that committee are very carefully considered. And the other denominations are likewise represented by men of ability.

The objects of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America were stated many years ago. They are, very briefly, as follows:

The first object is to express the fellowship and catholic unity of the Christian Church. The second is to bring the Christian bodies of America into united service for Christ. The third is to encourage devotional fellowship and mutual council, concerning the life and religious activities of the Churches. The fourth is to secure a larger combined influence for the Churches of Christ in all matters affecting the moral and social conditions of the people so as to promote the application of the law of Christ in every relation of human life. And the fifth and final object is to assist in the organization of local branches of the Federal Council to promote its aims in their communities. There is this limitation to be noted on this fifth statement. As a matter of fact the Federal Council has not created local branches. It has, however, through the years of its existence been interested in assisting the Churches to create local councils or federations of churches, so that today all of the great cities, practically, in America, and some of those that are not so large, and six of the states of our Union have a Council of Churches controlled by employed secretaries and a larger number still of your city and state organizations are in existence under voluntary leadership; the idea being that an overhead Federal Council of Churches may be effective, but that it is not going to do the thing for which the Federal Council was itself organized unless it shall promote the spirit of fellowship and of cooperation in every community of the land, large and small, and help to create the kind of an instrument in that community through which the spirit of fellowship may function. The Federal Council is endeavoring to observe these limitations with very great carefulness. They are written into the constitution as well. This Federal Council shall have no authority over the constituent bodies adhering to it, but its province shall be limited to the expression of its council and the recommending of a course of action in matters of common interest to the Churches, local councils and individual Christians. It has no authority to draw up a common creed or form a government or worship, or in any way to limit the full autonomy of the Christian bodies adhering to it. The agency of the Federal Council is authorized, not in the direction of a unit of the Churches, but it is sympathetic with and interested in every movement and in every utterance that is looking toward a larger expression of the united life and a common concern for the kingdom.

But the necessity for the Federal Council lies in another direction, in the field of experience and life and work. It is the co-operative instrument of these twenty-eight communions, through which they seek to do those things that can be done better in unity than in separation. The Federal Council in this respect is in harmony with the essential genius of our American life. I have been interested in noting how our fathers dealt with the political problem in the early history of the American continent, in some such way as that in which we are trying to deal with this problem of a divided Church. There were thirteen colonies stretched along the Atlantic seaboard, as separate and independent of each other as any thirteen European states. After one hundred years or more of that independence the situation became intolerable. They had to effect some kind of unity. They could not defend themselves against a common foe. They could not go out in any adequate way to the conquest of the continent. One trembles to think what the story of American history would have recorded had thirteen independent colonies gone out to make war on each other for possession of this great domain. They were kept apart by colonial jealousies and by the fear of a superstate. Any one of those colonies, for instance, Massachusetts, might have said, "We have set up a standard to which all good men may repair. Make Massachusetts the center of a great new American State." Virginia would probably have said the equivalent of "Not on your life"; and Georgia and the rest of them would have said the same. They did not put them all into a single melting pot and out of that constitute a new and great nation. They drew up a Constitution of the United States which begins, "We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union do ordain and establish this Constitution of the United States of America." Finding it quite impossible to create a great American State, they created a federal union of sovereign States so that Webster could say "Liberty and union, one and inseparable, now and forever."

It is the genius of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America that it shall undertake to secure such essential unity as does not encroach on essential liberty. The Protestant Churches are kept apart by denominational jealousies and the fear of a super-Church. The Federal Council hopes that it may be pointing the way toward a solution of our problem. The old Mediaeval Church got unity at the cost of liberty; and the reformers got liberty for us at the cost of unity. What we need and are trying to accomplish is to secure the largest measure of unity in our common life and experience and work, and preserve those essential liberties and loyalties and backgrounds and traditions which have been of real spiritual value to us through the years, and which we believe may continue to be of spiritual value to us and to others.

Two great reasons there are why something has to be done. I am sure I am speaking to a sympathetic congregation of Christian men and women, for I am only pleading the cause your bishops have already pleaded from this platform. Something has to be done, and needs to be done very speedily—if we are to hold the young life of our Churches to the great common cause that we are representing here today. A new demand for a larger unity of Protestant Christendom has been making itself vocal, particularly in these recent years, and we must act. The second reason that I would cite here, first of all, is that of a divided Protestantism—I mean a Protestantism that has several strategies instead of any sort of common strategy. I thank God we have gotten past the day of quarreling with each other, and of intolerance. Our denominations have good will to each other; but we need more than that. We need a common strategy concerning great common tasks and problems, if we are to meet them effectively. There comes in the history of the world now and then a change of the moral and social climate. Such a one came in the sixteenth century. The place of the Church had to be adjusted to that which came as a rediscovery, or a change of emphasis upon justification by faith, which recognized the individual and gave him a new place in state and church, and resulted in nationalism on the one hand and denominationalism on the other. It had to be, and on the whole was beneficent and effective.

But now has come a change of climate in our time through the discovery of another somewhat obscured doctrine of the Christian faith, the gospel of the Kingdom, the great hope of Jesus that the Kingdom of God could be established upon this planet; and that calls for a united approach to the great problems of the Kingdom of God, which is absolutely essential if we are going to succeed. Four years before the outbreak of the great war, Dr. Walter Rauschenbusch, whom I have thought of as one of the great prophets of the modern time, wrote a book called "Christianity and the Social Crisis." You may remember one sentence—I never memorized it but I never can forget it—that closes one of the great chapters of that book. As I quote it, remember that it was four years before the outbreak of the World War, and that almost everything that has happened since 1910 has gone to intensify the crisis of which Dr. Rauschenbusch spoke. He said that it rests with us to say whether we are to enter upon a new era in the transformation of the world, or whether our civilization is destined to go down to the graveyard of dead civilizations and God will have to try once more. If that is our problem it is too big for us unless we can mass our resources and call on the resources of the living God himself. A change of moral and spiritual and social climate is coming in our day, and it calls for a more expressive and more visible unity of the Churches of God.

A second reason is that a divided, sectarian, competing Christianity is an essential denial of the very genius of the Gospel of Jesus. If I had time I could show by many citations that the major concern of our Lord Jesus Christ was the creation of fellowship. When he defines the supremely good man he says, "Blessed are the peacemakers"—the furtherers of fellowship, the people who will have nothing to do with intolerance and suspicion. "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God," for they are doing the divinest thing in the world. May I cite another illustration? It is familiar, from the Sermon on the Mount: "If you are bringing your gift to the altar," said Jesus—and I think we need to pause and exercise some spiritual imagination. That altar was central in their religion; it was the holiest thing they knew. It had come down through the long generations, ministered to by a priesthood that they believed appointed by God in perpetuity, in accord with a ritual every item of which they thought God had appointed. There was a victim on that altar. Blood was flowing there. Here are the words of Jesus: If you are bringing your gift to the altar and you remember that your brother has something against you, just leave your gift there before the altar. It will not do any harm to postpone that for a while, but this cannot be postponed. Leave your gift before the altar and go your way. First be reconciled to your brother; then come and offer the gift.—That seems to be Jesus' very striking way of telling us that fellowship comes first among the interests of God, and that it should be the first among the interests of the Churches of God. And this Federal Council, my brothers and sisters, is a more or less feeble effort of earnest men and women to find the way into a unity that will express us adequately and will show the world that we are not divided, and will at the same time preserve for us traditions too precious for us easily to barter them away.

Our quadrennial meeting in Rochester in December, the 20th anniversary of the organization of the Federal Council, will be a very notable meeting. We are not going to spend five minutes of those six days in blowing horns over the achievements of the past. We are going to spend every morning session in a candid inquiry in which we are asking people all over the country to participate, in advance, under the leadership of a committee of one hundred—we are going to undertake, in advance of that meeting, a thing that may discover whether there may not be a new word to be uttered that will challenge the imagination and conscience of the Christian people of America, even beyond the challenge given in the organization of the Federal Council twenty years ago. And because we want to move wisely, and want any expression of judgment given there to be thoroughly representative of our constituents, we are calling thoughtful men and women all over the country to join in preparing our minds and hearts to understand a little better than we can now, the heart of the people, and the meaning of that prayer of our Lord that we quote, which he uttered when he was just ready to give his hands to be crucified and prayed: "O my Father, that they all may be one, that the world may believe."

Mr. Chairman, I have great honor in presenting to you in behalf of the Federal Council, its report to the constituent bodies. I understand that it has already been distributed to the delegates. I respectfully ask that it be given reference to the proper committee.

Merle N. Smith, Chairman of the Committee on the Reception of Fraternal Delegates:

Bishop and members of the General Conference: It is a high privilege we have in receiving and welcoming at this time the fraternal messenger from the United Church of Canada. We have rather special admiration for our friends and neighbors, the people of Canada. It has been suggested that the reason we especially admire the Canadians is because we think they are so much like ourselves. I want, Mr. President, the privilege, on behalf of your Committee, of presenting this morning in an informal fashion the fraternal messenger from the United Church of Canada. He will speak tonight at the great meeting for the reception of fraternal messengers with Dr. Hulme of England. I have great pleasure in presenting to you Dr. G. A. McIntosh, former president of the Methodist Conference in Canada, pastor of the Douglass Memorial Church in Montreal, and one of the outstanding leaders of the United Church in Canada.

Bishop Leete: Dr. McIntosh of the United Church of Canada.

Dr. G. A. McIntosh: Mr. Chairman, fathers and brethren, I wish to acknowledge gratefully your kindness in mentioning the name of the United Church of Canada and extending to me as its representative this courtesy just now. I know that the name the United Church of Canada is somewhat new, but after all it is a good name, for one thing because it begins with the same word, and has the same number of syllables almost in it as the name United States of America; therefore I think the name ought to have a good ring to it.

I am to have a chance to speak to the Conference again. I would say that we must be something alike, because your Conference has much the same spirit and manner and appearance as have the General Conferences I have known, only you do things in a much better way.

I thank you for this courtesy this morning.

FORMAL FRATERNAL MESSAGE OF THE REV. G. A. MCINTOSH

Mr. Chairman and Christian Friends: It is my pleasant duty and my distinguished privilege to bear greetings from the United Church of Canada to this General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States of America. I may just say in the beginning that the United Church of Canada is numerically the largest of the Protestant denominations in our Dominion. That United Church came into being in the month of June, 1925. It is just getting under way, just finding its bearings, just trying to consolidate its new plans, for it is not yet three years, you see, since the consummation of that union.

From the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States we in Canada have learned much and have received great inspiration. We have been inspired as from a distance we have seen your great achievements. We have witnessed what you have done on occasions, in some of your great campaigns, evangelistic campaigns for moral reforms, financial campaigns. We have watched with admiration the way that you do things, and it has been to us a great example. It has given to us a vision of better methods of accomplishments in the Christian Church just to see and to witness this Methodist Episcopal Church at work. And then we have received great inspiration also, in Canada, from many visits from leaders of your Church at times when we were trying to launch some endeavor. When we had some forward movement afoot, and we appealed to some of your men to come over, how generous they have been. What inspiration their visits have brought to us. I remember just in recent years within my own memory visits by Bishops McDowell, McConnell, Hughes, Leonard, and many others I could name who have come to us and in our city, in Toronto, or in Montreal, in our General Conferences at different times, have graced our occasions and have brought us inspiration and have put heart into our work, and have enabled us to do greater things because of the helpfulness of their visits and the addresses they have given. Above all, we have received inspiration from this great Methodist Episcopal Church, from your loyalty to Jesus Christ. We have seen days when it has not been just easy to be true and steady and steadfast in that locality. We have seen how he has continued to be the soul of your work, how he has continued to be the source of your spiritual passion in this Church of yours, and we have seen how you have been loyal to Christ in the midst of the great national problems that you have before you. When it comes to the very difficult things to do you have seemed to stand steadfast in your loyalty to him, as though you would say to the world that there is no civilization can endure, there is no social structure that can be permanent, unless Jesus Christ is its inspiration, and unless He is its foundation, and your loyalty to our common Lord and Master has been an inspiration to us just over the line, as we have been, of course in smaller ways, trying to pursue our work and also to draw to Him.

I would like to acknowledge tonight in the presence of this General Conference the helpfulness that we have received. I would like to say that a Canadian feels at home, and should feel at home in these United States of America. For one thing, there are so many of my fellow citizens in every state of this great Union; indeed, one of the things that keeps our Canadian statesmen lying awake at night is trying to think up ways of keeping our young men on our own side of the line, and from being attracted across to this prosperous country, and to the higher wages that you pay in this land, to the multitude of opportunities that are on every hand here, and we have difficulty in keeping our young men at home, and we are very glad also that we receive from you that overflow into our western country, and so we mingle with you, and the Canadian feels very much at home here with you, and the Canadian feels at home here because of the similarity of our national ideals.

Dr. Smith spoke of the two democratic countries, and I like to think of their democratic ideals. You are a peace-loving nation as we are. You like to develop opportunities for every class of people throughout your land, and that is also the aim of our people. In many ways there is a similarity in our national spirit, in our national ideals, and the Canadian should feel at home in this country. Altogether it is a matter of greatest satisfaction to us to live beside such a strong and chivalrous generous neighbor as the United States of America. Our country is receiving the greatest benefit, the greatest help in many ways from your country.

I think it was mentioned on this platform during your Conference that there have gone out from United States investors into other lands perhaps the sum of over fourteen billions of dollars, and we in Canada have had the privilege of being loaned to us from your people the sum of four billions out of that fourteen billions, and it is developing our resources, it is helping industrialize our country and in many ways is a great inspiration to our land, and we in many ways would like to acknowledge how good a thing it is for us just to live beside so helpful a neighbor.

I would like to acknowledge here the very great kindness and the very gracious hospitality that has been extended to me as a fraternal delegate from my Church in your midst. Nothing that your officials could do for my comfort or pleasure has been omitted, and I am sure I appreciate the courtesy towards our United Church.

Now I just want to state a few words in answer to the questions that have been asked me about the United Church of Canada, and I want to put them in questions in order to say what I want to say briefly. Somebody has asked me how long did it take to bring about the union between the Congregational, the Presbyterian and the Methodist denominations in Canada. Well, the discussion began about twenty years ago, and in about the space of twelve years our theologians and leaders had worked out the doctrine or basis of union, and the general outline of the plan of coming together, and then after they had worked out the plan they began to put it into operation jointly. They said, we will co-operate in our mission work to a certain extent, and they divided our great Home Mission fields, and the Methodist Church would work in one part of the country, and the Presbyterian Church would work in another part, and so, not over-lapping, they found that in those Home Mission fields, as they put their plans into practice, that in that part of the Province where the Methodist Church was working the Presbyterians would go in with us, and in the part of another Province where the Presbyterians were working the Methodists would go in with them, and they worked in their different Provinces, and thus sowed the idea of union to the people, and at last they launched the plan after about twenty years of talking and working and getting together. It took a long time. I say that because it was not done in a hurry. It was not just a new idea that happened to catch on and was carried through with a hop, a step and a jump. It was something that was well considered and thought of, and conviction was behind it, and they felt that it was the right thing to do, that it was something that would further the Kingdom of Christ in our country, and taking it and looking at it from every angle at last the Union was happily moulded. Somebody has asked the question, Is it a complete union?

Is it a complete union? You know sometimes when unions are attempted there is a minority that stays outside. And there might be a minority of Congregationalists remaining and retaining the Congregational Church, and there might be a minority of Methodists that would not concur and there would still be a Methodist Church; but I am very glad to say that all the Congregational Churches went into the Union and all the Methodist Churches went into the Union, and that all the Presbyterian Churches—no, no, eighty-three per cent of the Presbyterian congregations went into the Union and seventy per cent of the membership of the Presbyterian Church went into the Union. There is still a non-concurring or intransigent element that remains outside in the Presbyterian Church and did not come into the Union. So that it is a fairly complete Union. We are glad it has succeeded to the extent that it has.

Another question that has been asked in regard to the United Church of Canada is this: Is it a real Union? That is, I take the question to mean this, as men have come into this Union have they really gone in together, so that they can blend together, or do they still keep their alignment, and in a church court do the Presbyterians vote together and the Methodists line up together and still vote together? I am happy to say in answer to that question there has been no church court, there has been no church board that I know of where there has been any such division as that. They seem to have gone into it with their hearts and questions are considered on their merits, and it is a real Union of these three bodies. I think it is a good evidence that it is a real Union from this point of view, that Presbyterian ministers have been invited to Methodist churches and Methodist ministers to what were Presbyterian churches, and the pastorates are happy pastorates. These ministers are working happily in the congregations where they are. I received last Sunday into membership with the church I serve thirty-two new members. It was a Methodist church before, but of those thirty-two new members twenty-two were formerly Presbyterians or Congregationalists, or their families were, and they came in from that sort of tradition. So, from that point of view it is a real Union and means that hearts are in it as well as their votes. I think it is a good omen that the great American Church in Montreal, looking around for a minister and wanting to find the best possible man for that important pulpit with its one hundred years of Presbyterianism behind it, chose one of your Methodist ministers, Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, of Detroit. We are all exceedingly happy in Montreal in the thought that he is coming to us—and there are one or two other important United Churches in Montreal that are looking around for a good minister.

Somebody has asked me what is the underlying motive that swept the denominations forward into this Union. I think I could say two things in reply. In the first place, there was a spiritual motive in the hearts of the leaders of this Union, and it was this that they wanted, to join in a common work. It was comparatively easy to take the first step toward that Union, to take that step because they felt it a Christian duty to try to do something to manifest better unity of the Church of Christ. Sometimes it has been a painful thing to think that, great as our denominations were, and greatly as they were beloved by us (I was a Methodist and I love the Methodist Church still, and always will as long as I live), no one can help feeling that denominationalism sometimes tends to breed exclusiveness. You know the story of the two neighbors walking down the street to church together, talking happily together until they came to a church, and one said, "This is my church; I go in here; will you come in with me?" "Oh no, that is your church; but I go on to the true church down the street." He felt that there was a difference and he could not help showing it to his neighbor.

And there is another thing, on the mission field where the missionaries go out it seems sometimes as though it is difficult there to bear one's witness to the unity of the Church of Christ because there are different branches of the Church working under different forms, and they are separate. Successful attempts have been made to overcome that, and yet in our Home Mission fields, sometimes in a little village, it has been difficult to bear witness, as we would bear it, to the unity of the Church of Christ. There may be, on opposite sides of the street, two churches in a little community, and either one of those buildings, so far as the building is concerned, is large enough for the religious service of the entire community. And while there is not enmity or a bad spirit, somehow it tends to build up a difference and perhaps a spirit of exclusiveness in that community. I think that first of all there was the spiritual motive behind that union, that they wanted to try to bear witness to the unity of the Church of Christ.

But another answer is, as to the motive behind the union, they wanted to do the work of Christ better, and I think that already the United Church of Canada in a country like ours is so largely rural—forty-eight per cent of our people belong to the Home Mission area. We have perhaps in all four thousand worshiping units or congregations in connection with our Home Mission work, and we feel we can do our work much better in Canada by being together. And as we extend out to our new provinces of the west we can cope with the difficulties of a new country and keep up with the new settlements better if we do not have to plant a Presbyterian Church, a Methodist Church, and a Congregational Church in every community, but can establish one United Church in that community.

We can do the work for Christ better in our country, we think. Already the United Church has its ambition in our country that wherever new settlements go there shall be no Protestant settler who shall be beyond the services of the Church. That has been a motive helping this movement forward and makes us feel we ought to promote it, because we feel we can do the work of Christ better in our land. It is not simply that we want to spend less money; but we want to spend the Lord's money better, and we feel that in this way we can do it better than in a divided community of different denominations.

Somebody has asked, "Is the spirit of the United Church of Canada as keen and spiritually earnest as before in the different denominations?" Perhaps I could answer in this way, that last year the giving of the United Church of Canada was twenty-five per cent higher than the giving of the three denominations in their best year before they went into the union. Perhaps I could put it this way: that year 278 of our Home Missions, the missions, congregations or pastoral charges that were assisted from our Home Mission funds, became self-sustaining. That was for this reason, here were these two little churches, one on each side of the street. For the ten years before union one of these churches got from its denominational board an assistance of perhaps four hundred dollars a year, and the other church on the other side of the street got six hundred dollars a year from its Home Mission Board. Those two churches went together and now they pay their minister and the running expenses, and last year they gave one thousand dollars to the mission boards. If the United Church increases its giving by ten per cent it would be giving all our boards are asking them to give. So I say that the spirit of the United Church of Canada is earnest and keen and full of passion for the work of the Kingdom of Christ in our country.

Now let me say, in closing, that the Methodists that went into that United Church of Canada have not ceased to love the Methodist Church. I ask you not to feel that we no longer feel that we are to be counted among the Methodists of the world. We still love Methodism and are trying to carry into that United Church of Canada the passion of Methodism, its love for social service and for the evangelism of our country. We want to do that, only we feel we can do it better in our land in the union than as separate denominations. I would like to say that our officials have asked me to say that they value very highly the fraternal relation that the Methodist Church always had with the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States. They value that fraternal relationship very highly and they would be delighted if it might be continued in the future between the United Church of Canada and your great Church in the United States.

FAREWELL WORDS OF REVEREND G. A. MCINTOSH

Merle N. Smith: Dr. G. A. McIntosh, our honored guest from the United Church of Canada, who addressed us on Wednesday night, delighting us and inspiring us, is about to take his leave. I speak for you as for myself when I say to Dr. McIntosh that his presence and his message have greatly enriched this General Conference. We bid him God-speed.

Bishop Nicholson: It is my great privilege to present Dr. McIntosh to you again.

Rev. G. A. McIntosh: Mr. Chairman and members of the General Conference: As I appear just for a moment before you to say good-bye before going home, I would just like to say what a joy it will be to report to the officers of our church in Canada the very great cordiality with which you have received the announcement of the name of the United Church of Canada, and I would just like to say to you that in the prayers of the United Church of Canada you will be remembered, that grace and mercy and peace may be multiplied unto your leaders as you represent the people of your great Methodist Episcopal Church.

Bishop Nicholson: When it is known that in one Conference in a certain area, we have more than fifty ministers that come from Dr. McIntosh's country, he will understand how thoroughly we welcome him and rejoice in his work.

Merle N. Smith, Chairman of the Committee on Reception of Fraternal Delegates:

Bishop and brethren of the Conference, you will be glad to know that the fraternal delegate from the British Conference is here. You will wish to greet him at once, and your committee desires the privilege of presenting him informally to the General Conference at this time, it being understood that he is to speak, to give his formal address at a later time.

There is an old couplet that runs like this:

"Where better can a father be Than in the heart of his familie?"

There isn't any possible suggestion of the patriarch about our distinguished guest, but we want him to know now that he is in the heart of the great Methodist family.

I have great pleasure in presenting to you the Rev. Thomas Ferrier Hulme, Ex-President of the British Wesleyan Conference, and fraternal delegate to this Conference.

Rev. Thomas Ferrier Hulme: Bishop, Fathers and Brethren, I esteem it a great privilege to be thus presented to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. I heartily thank you for the cordiality of your reception and I just as heartily reciprocate all the kindly feelings that you have expressed.

I understand that I am to have the privilege later on of speaking to you, so I will not now impose upon your good feelings. Philosophy tells me that the essence of thinking is that right ideas occur at the right time. I understand, therefore, that at this time there should be imposed upon me, with a view to later opportunities, silence, and I wish to show you that I have so much respect for you and regard your business of such great importance that I merely greet you in this way and thank you heartily for your reception, and hope to meet you again a little later on.

FORMAL FRATERNAL MESSAGE OF THE REVEREND THOMAS FERRIER HULME

Bishop and members of the General Conference: This is to me a very proud moment. The British Conference, whose representative I now am, has from time to time honored me beyond my merits and greatly beyond my expectations. Next to placing me in the chair of John Wesley in my own city, I prize this as one of the greatest privileges of my ministry. And the warmth of your welcome, for which I sincerely thank you, greatly enhances its value.

This General Conference will be to me forever memorable. There are many differences between your Conference and ours. The first that struck me was this: On this platform sit your Bishops. On our platform sit the ex-Presidents. In other words, you look on the powers that be; we look up to the powers that used to be, that is to say, we reverence the past, you criticize the present. At least, I am told that is your intention when you get the chance.

There is, however, this point of resemblance; up here, silent wisdom; down there, competition for points of order. But I noticed both in your Conference and in ours that the floor is always extremely good-natured as long as it is getting its own way.

It is one of the cherished traditions of your great Conference to give the most courteous and warm-hearted recognition to every authorized representative of the Mother-Church of world-wide Methodism, and on my return I shall report that the General Conference of 1928 has lavished on me, in private as well as in public, every token of affection that a big child can show to a proud parent. Blessed be the dear united love that will not let us part. I am sure that our own Conference would wish me to endorse those words written by John Wesley only one month before he died, to Ezekiel Cooper, a letter in which he said: "Lose no opportunity of declaring to all men that Methodists are one people in all the world, and that it is their determination so to continue though mountains rise and oceans roll to sever us in vain." But the outside world will never believe that we mean what we say until the Wesleyan Methodist and the Primitive Methodist and the United Methodist in England, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, North and South, in America, finally determine they have talked union long enough and that the time has actually arrived to really practice it. And when next the Ecumenical Conference meets, as I suppose it will on this side of the Atlantic in 1931, surely by that meeting we will be able to make some great announcement that will result in jubilation and doxology.

Our own controversies in regard to Methodist union have already been going on for fifteen years. It shows that our people are really much better than they sometimes seem to be. If only we compare the language and the manner and the incidents of those discussions of recent years with those of the controversies of seventy and eighty years ago when much of the mischief was done which we are now striving to put right, the whole thing is on a higher level altogether. The restraint on both sides is much greater, and I for one cannot but believe that God is bestowing grace on the children, that their forefathers did not possess in any large numbers, and which certainly they did not evince. The old times were not better times; they were worse. There was far less charity. It is not of course for me to say what will happen at our Conference in Liverpool next July, but we quite hope at that Conference by a requisite majority we shall obtain consent to bring our enabling bill before Parliament and get it through as early as possible, and then settle down to work out the details of circuit areas and district areas and departmental details, and so be ready five years hence in 1933 for the United Conference of one Methodist Church, and then—and there I suppose I must be very careful what I say and how I say, but I will put it like this—how long will it be before that term "The General Conference" has a much wider and more intensive connotation than it has today? Some of us old men are dreaming—and the prophet Joel said we would—that some day hands across the seas will clasp in both a League of Nations and a League of Churches. We cannot yet see how that will be done, but God moves in a mysterious way, and when God does move may World-Wide Methodism move along with Him, and if the League of Liquor is nervous already about you, what will it be then? We are given to understand that when nerves get about enough the next stage is collapse.

"Ye fearful saints, fresh courage take."

I have been in this Conference eight days. You, too, have been sitting for nine. You have not yet hatched much. You have just been very good naturedly clucking, until the period of incubation ends, which is supposed to be, I understand, about the fifteenth day.

Much has impressed me, very much. The Bishops in their noble address, the Bishops in the chair and their ease and insight in ruling, the fellowship in prayer and service in your opening hour of devotion, I have been greatly impressed with the rank and file of your delegates, with their keen attention and their manifest reserve of power, your laymen with their great ability and equally great loyalty; and certainly with the fine army of lady attendants who have come to see that you act as you should. I think we can match all this in our country. But there is one unique feature that enraptures me and distinguishes you from us and from any other ecclesiastical assembly that I know. In answer to the question, "Are there few that be saved?" our Lord replied, "They shall come from the East and the West and the North and the South and shall sit down together in the Kingdom of God." And I declare that in your presence my old Methodist heart has discovered, has rediscovered its Hallelujah. As I have said, "Here are the first fruits; our God is marching on." And when the South gets in properly there will be no holding me in, but I shall want to come back again and shout with you in a nobler, sweeter song.

As I have seen Japan, and Korea, and China and Africa and other races from the Islands of the Sea and the Continent of Europe and your own vast Continent, thus met with one accord in one place, all sharing equal rights and privileges and ignoring entirely racial distinction, I have found myself re-editing Rudyard Kipling's words,

"East is east and west is west
And never the twain shall meet," and I am going back to England to say that here in Christ Jesus East is West and West is East, and never the twain shall part.

Now it seems to be quite appropriate that the British Conference has sent to you one who, for five and twenty years, has resided in Bristol. That is the city of the Wesleys. Charles Wesley lived there for twenty years. His house still stands there. He wrote many of his famous hymns there. Five of his children died there. Bristol is the city of John Wesley's first open air sermon. He built his first room, which he called "The Old Room" in Bristol, and then a new room which still stands and which is the oldest Methodist chapel in the world, in which Wesley held eighteen of his annual conferences, as many as he held in London and more than in City Road Chapel, for that came on later. Wesley founded his famous Kingswood School at Bristol, that has sent hundreds of preachers into the ministry and given us more than twenty presidents of Conferences, and many remarkable business and professional men of national and even international fame. That school gave you Joseph Pilmoor who with Boardman was Wesley's first missionary to America. No city in the world has such direct associations with the beginnings of Methodism in America as Bristol. Captain Webb, the soldier evangelist, first met John Wesley in Bristol, was converted in Bristol in 1765, came over to America full of fire and life, as Wesley said, and by his soul-converting preaching was instrumental in building the old John Street Chapel in New York. You did not have much money then, so this soldier gave you the largest single donation for that chapel, and then lent you three hundred pounds. Then he helped in laying one of the foundations over here—I am not going to be drawn into the Maryland and Strawbridge controversy—when he had succeeded in laying one of the foundations over here, he returned to Bristol and built our historic chapel and died there in 1796. If you enter that chapel today the first window on the left shows the Captain in his scarlet regimentals and with the shade over his eye. His bones rest beneath the pulpit, and still over the socket of his eye in that tomb rests the green shade.

It was in the year that John Street Chapel was built that a letter was read urging Wesley to send preachers, and the year following came Pilmoor and Boardman. In 1770 and 1771 John Wesley sent a youth twenty-five years of age, then in the fifth year of his traveling, to a place in the Bristol and Bath district. As that youth tramped on foot the rough roads of that country, very lovely by nature but unlovely in its spiritual destitution and paganism, and went over ground that I have known so long, there was stirred in him a longing to utilize his five years' experience of English itinerancy in the far vaster field of this new world.

And at the Conference in Bristol in 1771 Francis Asbury made that covenant with God and with Methodism that sent him here later. And as you know in the original minutes of that Bristol Conference it is stated that there were five who volunteered and two who were accepted, Asbury and Wright. I could take you to that very room in Bristol where that little Conference of ten people sat that decided his destiny and yours. Never did a rugged frame enshrine a tenderer heart, and never did son revere father and mother more and better, and returned their love more tenderly than he. So he hurried to his old home, spoke his farewell, handed to his mother his one earthly treasure, his silver watch, and was back again in a few days in Bristol to sail for America.

Two hundred and seventy years before that Sebastian Cabot, born in Bristol, left that port with his father and discovered Nova Scotia a year before Christopher Columbus reached the main lands in the South. Little did people dream in 1771 that that Bristol ship was bringing to your shores a greater man than either, your own glorious Francis, not only the master builder of your Church, one of God's own builders of your mighty nation. O how I love Francis Asbury for this one reason, that when that Britisher took you to his heart it was "until death do us part." Others whose names you honor came for a time and returned; but during the birth throes of this great republic he braved all contumely and shouldered his cares and then in the rebirth of your nation won an imperishable crown. In choosing you Francis Asbury chose the better part—not because you are better—I don't see how you could be, do you?—but better because for him it was God's will.

Again—and I notice that these points are made in that excellent Methodist Review of yours, which I have been reading with great delight—again in 1784 it was in Bristol that John Wesley ordained Coke and Whatcoat and Vasey. As I told the Archbishop of Canterbury, that was a very daring thing for a man of eighty-one to do. Moreover, the historic letter of authorization, which is now your charter, was written by Wesley in Bristol on September 10, 1784, and it arrived in time for your historic Christmas Conference at Baltimore. So that I am historically correct in speaking of Bristol as the quarry whence you fetched the building materials by which you have shaped your Church on its present lines.

It was in Bristol that such shaping began by those ordinations. To these brethren on the platform, I may say, "So shall the bright succession run." Of course, you did not let John Wesley have it all his own way, but when he presented his plan Asbury and you thought you could improve upon that and told John Wesley so. He was as surely born to rule as he was to preach. He was a great ruler and an experienced rider. Ruler and rider have to hold the reins, the symbol of authority, the instrument of guidance; and the man is neither great nor good as a ruler or rider unless he knows how to slacken the reins at the proper time. The little man was big enough to give the restive animal his head and to let loyal and competent disciples manage their own affairs. And you and we together are better friends in consequence of that.

Whenever you think of Bristol do not forget that in 1771 when Francis Asbury left Bristol never to return, the poor Bristol Methodists—they hadn't a penny—gave him a new suit of clothes and put ten pounds into his hands. They would probably do it at the quaint old chapel at the Horsefair in Bristol, as they handed him the money and accompanied him to the little boat that was to bring him across the Atlantic. That chapel has been out of our hands for more than one hundred years. It belongs to the Welsh Calvinistic Methodists. It ought to be in your hands, as a little museum where these folks, American Methodists, as they pass on their way might kneel and pray and praise. In Bristol we are concerned with the demands of the future and the present, and there is a great hall costing sixty thousand pounds where we get hundreds of conversions every year and a magnificent amount of social work is being done.

When those American Methodists come to England and go over the circle of our little land, and then return without ever dreaming of visiting Bristol, the hole of the pit whence you were dug, I am amazed. John Wesley said to Asbury, in the shortest letter he ever wrote: "Francis, are you out of your wits? Why are you not at Bristol?" when you deserve the rebuke much more than Asbury did. I am glad he did not go back to Bristol, but stuck to you.

Excuse the effrontery of talking to the General Conference like this, but I am an old man. I will forgive you if, when you celebrate the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Methodist Episcopal Church, you will send a representative deputation to your birthplace, which really is in Bristol, and help us to join in the celebration.

Now, I want to refer to one very well known incident that has captured my imagination and inflamed my heart more than anything else that has been said since the days of the apostles. When he had been at sea fourteen days, Asbury, clad in his new Bristol suit, unless like myself he was saving it for you, writes in his diary, "I will set down a few things that lie on my mind. Whither am I going? To the New World. What to do? To gain honor? Not if I know my heart. To get money? No. I am going to live to God and bring others so to do." That sentence will never be out of date. It covers the whole field of personal life and service. It was a life-forming and life-governing principle.

I am now in my seventy-third year, and just completing the fiftieth year of my ministry. O that I had seventy more years instead of possibly seven or a fraction of seven to make that the great motto of my life! It has in it for me the grip of soul that some sayings of St. John on the Isle of Patmos had, only the one had his eye on the New Jerusalem which is from above and the other had his eye on the New World out here. But this word of Asbury's spoken at the beginning of his apostolic career has stirred me like those words of St. Paul at the end of his career: "I have fought, I have finished, I have kept; henceforth a crown." Asbury says: "I am going to live to God and bring others so to do." If I knew how to do it and had the authority and the influence and the money, I tell you what I would do. You see that illuminated Cross up there? I have hardly been able to take my eyes off it. I shall never forget that great moment in your Conference yesterday, after Bishop Fisher's address when we sang "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross." While we were singing it I was looking at that illuminated Cross the whole time. And I saw, "No man save Jesus only." I tell you what I would like to do if I could. I should like to put up there under that Cross, illuminated with electricity as that Cross is, those words of your first Bishop, "I am going to live to God and get others so to do." And if I were the Bishop presiding over the last session, as the very last act of this Conference, I should say to this Conference, "Let us repeat together before we separate to the uttermost parts of the earth, 'I am going to live for God and bring others so to do.'" I am sure of this, that if there is to be a revival it will have to begin with us. I have never forgotten the Welsh revival when people came from Scotland to Wales, and went to a little town and went up to a policeman and said, "Can you tell us where the revival is going on?" and he said, "It is going on under these here buttons." That is the place for it, and I am going back with those words ringing in my ears, and borne in my heart, "I am going to live to God and bring others so to do."

Will you bear with me a little longer? There is one burning question to which Asbury's life gave a transforming principle that applies very strongly. It does so both to us and to you. I refer to the nature of ministerial training. We all feel that the prime essential is to have a converted and spiritually minded ministry, men of conviction and Christian graces. But if they are to make their calling effective all around, they must be intellectually abreast of the times as well as spiritually alert and victorious. We do not want in England to exclude any candidate who may be a rough diamond, but we do want to be sure that the diamond is there. And if it is, we believe it will stand the subsequent test employed to promote the intellectual and spiritual efficiency. To fetch out the real value of the diamond you have got to fetch it out from its environment. And an uneducated saint is no more saintly for sticking to his environment of ignorance. In nothing did Asbury more clearly manifest his wisdom and his saintliness than in the glorious heroism with which he triumphed over the early poverty of his intellectual equipment. When God called him and Wesley took him and America drew him, he had no money and little education. The lack of money never troubled him, but he set to work to put the other matter right, and always he was as much a student as a pioneer. He pioneered his way into Hebrew and Greek. He missed many a meal and was often scantily clad—but he would get the best books. Like Paul, he was in perils oft, but never in peril of mental stagnation. He envied Wesley for only one thing. Bad as our roads were in England, Wesley could read on horseback; your roads were worse and Asbury could not.

Why this zeal for knowledge? Because he realized that a well-furnished and disciplined mind would help him in his great life purpose of living to God and bringing others so to do. In England we do want to drive this lesson home. We have spent seven million pounds recently in building magnificent halls that are full, and handsome churches. But our people are contributing no more to ministerial training than thirty years ago. We do not think we ought to put it off because some people are concerned about our alleged ape ancestry. We care little what a man may or may not have come from on the side of his animal nature. We do care that he so adjust his spiritual relation with God, that the spiritual forces shall defeat his carnal complex. I wish that some who are so scandalized about the ape controversy would not forget that our forefathers in great wisdom, in Asbury's own country, encountered two-legged animals let loose who were so brutelike that the Wesleys composed this hymn and the people used to sing it:

"Into a world of ruffians sent,
I walk on hostile ground,
While human bears on slaughter bent
And ravening wolves surround.

"But worse than all my foes
I find an enemy within;
The evil heart, the carnal mind,
My own insidious sin."

Science has made no discovery, furnished no proofs of research that conflict with the historic words, "In the beginning God," and we do not think it ever will. We are not the least afraid, therefore, that scientific investigation applied to biblical criticism will disprove our real origin or our true destiny. For that reason many of us welcome it. It may disturb some of our archaic terms, but it will not shake the foundations of our faith, and it will not rob us of any essentials. And the modern disciple of Jesus Christ, whose life is controlled by loyalty and love, can sing John Wesley's birthday hymn:

"From Jehovah I came,
For His Glory I am,
To Him I will soon return."

Knowledge has its perils, but if we stick to Asbury's motto and make prayer the ruling element of our lives, we shall uphold and increase our faith. I am more anxious about having in the ministry giants in prayer than about any other qualification.

I want to say this, that I am not at all surprised that the Church of Francis Asbury for the last fifty years has been in the forefront of the struggle that has culminated in your Eighteenth Amendment. I will tell you what will surprise me; it will greatly surprise me if this great Church, with such a fine past and with such heroes still on the field, does not at the coming presidential election so make itself felt and heard that that Eighteenth Amendment shall become still more firmly fixed in your Constitution; and, what is more important, enforcement of the law shall be rendered still more effective.

Neither am I surprised that the Church of Francis Asbury should be prominent in associating itself with those lovers of peace who are supporting your government in their appeal to France and other nations to outlaw war. I am glad that you mean to clip the claws of the war-fiend. Do I say "clip the claws"? That is not strong enough. Such might grow again. You want to extract those claws. Stick to your guns until you have silenced the guns of war. Your fellow-Methodists on the other side of the water are with you. They believe in you. They do not always believe in the reports of your newspapers; they know you are a great deal better than your newspapers are. I hope you will believe the same about us. In the younger ranks of our ministry we have men who are alert and fearless and able, and who are giving increasing attention to this question. And if we do not move as fast as we should move, we want you to move a good deal faster. If Christianity, by its interpretation in its ethics, does not make war impossible, then science by its startling discoveries and the application of those discoveries to the hellish devices of war, will. For Christianity to do it, would be glorious; for science to do it in that way would be a shame. But we shall be all right if we keep close to God and live to him and bring others so to do.

May I give you my experience? I have known Jesus for many years. I have been preaching for fifty years. Twelve years ago it seemed as if my work was done. I was laid low by a terrible illness, and had to undergo a major operation that might well have been fatal. My life was in the balance. I said: "Charles Wesley, what have you for me? Give me something short and sweet." And he gave me what in our hymn book is Hymn No. 121:

Jesus the first and last,
On whom my soul is cast;
Thou didst thy work begin
In blotting out my sin.
Thou wilt the root remove,
And perfect me in love.

Yet when the work is done,
The work is but begun;
Partaker of thy grace
I long to see thy face.
The first I prove below,
The last I die to know.

I repeated it to the last line, and then sank in blissful dreams away, and came to chattering about Hymn 121. The nurses thought they had got a funny Johnny there. You all understand it. When I came out from that nursing home, before I could walk, I just crawled to Charles Wesley's grave near by the nursing home and gave God thanks for all that Charles Wesley had been to Christendom and especially for what he had been to me.

May God prosper the work of this great Conference. And when you separate and go to your homes, make up your minds "I am going to live to God and bring others so to do."

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES

Merle N. Smith, Chairman of the Committee on the Reception of Fraternal Delegates:

Whoever would take account of the great religious forces at work in our modern world must certainly give large place to that noble Christian communion, the Presbyterian Church. Its loyalty to the principles of Protestant Reformation, its regard for worship, its insistence upon an educated ministry, its missionary passion and the exceptional intelligence and devotion with which it directs its missionary program around the world, is to the rest of us an inspiration and a challenge. The fraternal messenger from the Presbyterian Church is Dr. Harry C. Rogers, Pastor of the Linwood Boulevard Presbyterian Church in this city, a brother honored and beloved, and entirely worthy to represent the great Church for which he will speak. It is a joy and an honor to recognize Dr. Rogers, and it must have been foreordained from the foundation of the world that he should be here now.

Bishop Nicholson: May I first say before introducing Dr. Rogers, that these brethren will excuse the chairman for seeming discourtesy of remaining seated. He is informed that when seated he is heard perfectly, but when he stands here he cannot be heard in the rear of the room. I have the very great pleasure of presenting to you Dr. Harry C. Rogers, the fraternal delegate from the Presbyterian Church whom we welcome with arms and hearts.

Dr. Harry C. Rogers: Bishop Nicholson, Dr. Smith, and members of the General Conference: It may not be inappropriate in the light of some of the brief matters that I shall present to you following, to say that this gracious introduction and this most cordial reception, that by that genuine act of fraternity the Methodist Church now assembled in this great Conference has already included another Presbyterian in your hearts. There is today relatively in numerical strength in the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America a much smaller body of men and women associated with their children in Jesus Name in the Church, and yet may I be bold enough to say that greeting today Bishop Nicholson, your presiding officer, and recognizing in him the distinguished learning and leadership which embraces the Bishops' College of your great Church and your membership, that I greet him today, and you in the name of one who in Presbyterian circles we honor as a father and brother beloved, a writer of great works on Christian enterprise, a scholar, a teacher, a layman honored round the world for his great missionary vision and devotion, the Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, Dr. Robert E. Speer. The Presbyterian Church embraces some three hundred Presbyteries, some forty-eight Synods, some ten thousand Churches and Ministers and a membership of eighteen hundred thousand constituent members, and today in the light of the happenings of the beautiful co-operative relations I am prepared on my own initiative to say this: That the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America carries you in its hearts, and we look upon you not as half-brothers, at all, but full brothers in our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. We thank God for the hour that gave you birth. We thank God for the crowded years of your spiritual achievements. We thank God for all the mighty heritage handed unto the whole Church of Christ by the contribution of glorious Methodism. We thank God for the increasing cordial relations in our co-operative Christianity, and may I say that if it be the will of God that we should come after all into closer relations then we in the Presbyterian Church will sing, "Lead On, O King Eternal." There is here before me a book, a hymn book. I shall read to you two verses from this famous hymn of United Christendom, one with which you are entirely familiar, and another with which I am sure all of our hearts join.

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love,
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above

But may I now read you the second verse:

This glorious hope revives
Our courage by the way;
While each in expectation lives,
And longs to see the day.

Now, my dear friends, whatever may be in the province of life and the providence of God with respect to a closer fellowship and union in Christian service, I desire this morning briefly to present this deep conviction that the Methodist Church and the Presbyterian Church are already united in the major movements of our generation that pertain to the Kingdom of God.

You have set us a noble pace by your faith and by your works. Today, may I say to you in these three great topics of Christian interest that we stand with you most loyally and lovingly.

First, we go along with you in your forthright outspokenness on all matters that pertain to prohibition and moral reform. And it may be in the congeniality of our hearts, and in the unity of our faith and perchance more in the unity of our action that these great achievements of Christendom will take place. We stand with you in this firm belief that the truth as taught by Jesus Christ is applicable to all life, and to the problems of the world. We believe with you that, unless the Church of Jesus Christ can effect certain great moral changes in the outside world we doubt whether God will give us power to effect these changes within the circle of the Church. We are committed with you to the belief that the Word of God remains in its teachings the great ethical standard of the charge of Christ we found in the primary doctrines of the ten commandments, that we still believe ought to be applied to life today, or in the greater principles of the Sermon on the Mount preached by our Lord in New Testament times.

We join with you, O my brethren, today, in all the forward movement of the projection of the life of Christ into the whole world, and more specially may I now say this, that we join with you in the prosecution of all the noble statements written within the Constitution of the United States of America, and in none of those statements in that Constitution more than in the Eighteenth Amendment and the great enforcing laws. It may be, dear friends, that with the joining somewhat of the courage of the sainted John Calvin in Geneva, with the spirit of the sainted John Wesley whose name you bear, united Christianity in America shall say this in no uncertain terms, that a dry man must ever be the President of the United States.

Now, my dear friends, without transgressing upon the time which I am sure belongs to you in this great Conference, may I affirm our great and cordial acceptance with you in the noble words of John Wesley pertaining to the fact that the world is our Parish. We have been fascinated and inspired by the great trophies of achievement on behalf of the missionaries of the Methodist Episcopal Church. We hail their names. We call them in the great fold of our love. We believe with you that the Bible of the Old and New Testaments belongs to the universal claim upon the unanimity; that we cannot nationalize the cross of Jesus Christ upon which the Saviour died, and we believe that whatever new methods in the emphasis upon the Foreign Missions or Home Missions may be in order, for a changing world we must ever have a changeless Christ. We believe with you, and count ourselves happy to do so, that this Lord and Saviour may be presented with faith and loving perception for the consideration of the whole world. I thank God for Him who is the only hope of the world, whether in the tall grass of Central Africa, along the frozen steppes of Western China, down next to us in the south of that so-called neglected continent of South America, or on the far-winding roads of ancient and modern India. We believe that Jesus Christ is the Christ of all the roads and that Jesus Christ sits at the head of every table.

One word, and I am done. It is to say this. As I took my seat here upon this platform today in the happy fellowship of your greeting and in the beloved comradeship of our Lord, there is nothing, beloved friends, that more inspires us of the Presbyterian faith than this, that the Methodist Communion is unequivocally committed to this profound tenet and doctrine of our beloved religion; that you with us acclaim Him the one and only Head of the Church; the one and only Saviour of the world; the one and only King of Kings and Lord of Lords; and that you and we together joining in His name could adopt today no finer legend and motto than that which fell from the dying lips of that son of the Epworth manse, that distinguished scholar of Oxford University, that fine evangel of an earlier Christian generation, that profound student and statesman of the Kingdom of God, the noble, heroic and beloved John Wesley, when he said, "O my people, let us be up and at it, all of us, and all the time."

Bishop Nicholson: I am sure you would desire me to express to Dr. Rogers our sense of hearty inspiration of his kind sentiments. We recognize in the Presbyterian Church one of the greatest of our allies, and in the Moderator of the General Assembly, Dr. Robert E. Speer, one of the great Christian statesmen of the time who belongs to the Presbyterian Church but in the wider sense belongs to us all.

THE UNITED BRETHREN CHURCH

SEE JOURNAL, PAGES 245, 354 AND 355

Merle N. Smith, Chairman of the Committee on Reception of Fraternal Delegates:

It is the honor of your Committee, Bishop, to present, informally, an outstanding leader of the Church of God in this republic. He will address us later in a more formal fashion.

I have great pleasure, Bishop Anderson, in presenting to you Bishop Arthur B. Statton, resident of Kansas City, Bishop of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ for the Southwest Area.

Bishop Statton: I only want to say this to you, brethren, that it is a mighty fine experience to look into your faces and to have the privilege of listening in on your sessions. Your sessions are mighty interesting to me and even edifying as well. I am not going to take more of your time at this moment. I shall appreciate having the chance of just saying a word a little later on, but I want to thank you for your courtesy and your great kindness.

Bishop Anderson: Bishop Statton, we are indeed glad to welcome you informally this morning, and shall enjoy hearing your message a little later.

LATER

Merle N. Smith: The Church of the United Brethren in Christ, by tradition and oneness in spiritual impulse and aspiration, has been intimately associated with American Methodism from the beginning, and we therefore, in a very friendly way, welcome the representative of that sister communion today. That Church has for a hundred years had an honorable history, rendered effective service in the Republic, as a stalwart group of Evangelical Christians. The fraternal messenger for the Church of the United Brethren resides at Kansas City; that is, in so far as any bishop may be said to reside anywhere.

It is our pleasure, Bishop Richardson, to present to you the Fraternal Delegate from the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, Bishop Arthur B. Statton.

Bishop Richardson: I now desire to present Bishop Arthur B. Statton of the United Brethren Church.

FRATERNAL ADDRESS OF BISHOP ARTHUR B. STATTON

The Board of Bishops of our Church has assigned to me the very pleasant task of giving expression to the fraternal sentiments of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ and also to our deep appreciation of all the mighty Christian labors of your great church. It is naturally not desirable that words should be multiplied. Words of simple friendship do not need to be many. Perhaps they mean just as much, or more, when they are few.

We glory in every forward movement and in every victory of Methodism. We are proud of your far-flung line. Our hearts respond with enthusiasm to the calls and counsels of your noble leaders. Having our origin in the same period and in the same great spiritual movement, your speech and religious expression is that to which we have been reared.

So we United Brethren do not need an interpreter to explain Methodism to us. The remarkable address of your Board of Bishops, read by Bishops Wilson and Richardson, seemed to touch, one by one, the very problems that are ours as well as yours. We listen to such clear counsel with thanksgiving, real profit and with open hearts. The fact that it was an official statement to this body did not limit or confine the benefit of its wisdom to you brethren alone. We heard it, too, with interest and a considerable measure of understanding. Indeed the deepest impression that it made upon us was that our tasks and problems, methods and high and holy aims, are so alike that we cannot help but hope that by this very likeness we may be drawn constantly closer together.

Your forms of organization, General Conference, Annual Conference, Quarterly Conference—which among us is becoming rather hard to define—District Conference, official board, bishops, superintendents, lay delegates, elders, licentiates, all of these have the same names as they have in our church family. The rules and modes of procedure of your General Conference are exceedingly familiar to us. I must express my sincere admiration of the skill with which your presiding bishops cope with your marvelous army of parliamentary experts, and also of the notable ability of your debaters. The sounds incident to the forging of the policies of Methodism upon the General Conference anvils all give to us a very homelike feeling.

If there are differences in our articles of faith, I do not at this moment know what they are. We particularly appreciate your aggressiveness and your will to conquer for the Lord. It gives us more courage as we feel the force of your great leadership of Protestantism. And we do not want to be considered mere spectators of your work. We would like to be considered as good comrades. We have our own difficult tasks in trying to bring our more modest army of 400,000 up to the highest possible goals of Christian life and service, and while we work we are given wonderful encouragement by the strong words and vast accomplishments with which you bless and build up the Kingdom of God. We are moved by the same truths that stir your hearts. We are thrilled by the same thrills. We aspire to be a well drilled regiment of good soldiers in the same conflict. We believe in emotion, in strong emotion, as did our fathers; but like you we have always believed in harnessing our emotions to such heavy loads of Christian service that their motive powers are fully used.

We United Brethren respond to the honest frankness with which you try to apply the holy precepts of our faith to the conditions of modern life. Your outright and outspoken faith that the Gospel is the cure for the ills that curse our day is a blessing to all your brethren in other churches. The wisdom of your bishops' admonition as to the discouraging effects of theological controversy upon the heart life of the church was such that every minister should hear and obey. We like also the Methodist teaching of the Gospel of Christian citizenship. And when you go to the polls, as you have been going for years, to make and keep our Nation dry, if you will look about, you will see our army right in the same battle line. We have been happy warriors in this cause from the beginning.

Back in the first pages of our church history there are written cherished memories of the beautiful and intimate friendship between your Bishop Asbury and the founder of our church. While Otterbein was the senior by many years, these two spent many hours in happy appreciation of one another's religious experience and in whole-hearted counsel. While Asbury gave wide service to the English-speaking people, Otterbein for many years ministered to the German people of Pennsylvania and Maryland. It was this difference in language that was the chief cause of the gradual gathering of these workers into two organizations. Then some differences in church government that grew during those years had the effect of making the separation permanent even after we had become an English-speaking church. But while language and conditions of travel prevented closer affiliation in those early days, nothing ever separated these two great friends. They were both flaming evangelists of personal religion and a conscious experience of God.

Otterbein, at the request of Asbury, assisted at the consecration of the latter as a general superintendent of the Methodist Church. There is also an item in our history that your Conference of 1792, after three days of debate, was invited by Otterbein to meet for an evening session in our mother church, Baltimore, and that there the debate was closed that settled the appointive powers of Bishop Asbury. I am sure you will pardon me when I tell you that we treasure much the earnest words of Asbury spoken in his funeral discourse at the grave of Otterbein: "The holy, the great Otterbein! Forty years have I known the retiring modesty of this man of God, towering majestic above his fellows in learning, in wisdom, in grace, yet seeking to be known only to God and to the people of God."

It was my lot to be the pastor of one of our older churches for a long while. Its life dated from 1790. In its old records note was made of the visits of Bishop Asbury to that western Maryland town. And when he came the doors of that old church were always open to him. And when his followers organized the first Methodist church there, our people made arrangements that they should have the use of our church half the time. This arrangement continued for a number of years until your people built their first church there.

We can be thankful, as I have been impressed often as I have heard the deliverances of your great organization, that the voices of these, our fathers, are not yet silent. They surely spoke the things that lie at the very foundations. Unless the truths of the Spirit which they preached continue to hold us by their mystic power, the impressive institutional body of the church will soon be a mere form, and without potency of real life. They taught a liberty as broad as the liberty of the Spirit. They insisted upon a standard of morals as strict as that of the strait and narrow way. As we labor in these days to understand and harmonize many things that puzzle the modern mind, the church will doubtless find the surest way to peace and unity in hearing again with open mind the message of God as spoken by that generation of tireless preachers. They told of a personal relation with the Lord. They opened the golden doors of apprehension, of friendship, of communion with God. The truth they shouted from the housetops is not mere old fashioned religion. It is ageless and eternal. Many times in history it has been out of fashion. These are the desert places in history, when the springs dry up and the hearts of men fail. Then this truth comes back—and truth does have a wonderful way of coming back. And as men remember and are renewed in soul, streams of living water again flow from their lives, and the drumbeats of new advance are heard.

I want to thank you, brethren, for this moment, which I want to make as brief as possible, in which you have granted to me the courtesy of this platform. I want to thank you for the courtesy which has made it possible for me to be present as much as I could for one who wanders as much as I do, to be present and to hear what is going on in your session. I confess, friends and brethren, that my heart is stirred very often as I hear the words spoken from this platform and from this floor. And when I look down upon this platform and see the kindly faces of your Bishops and your Fathers here, and when I look out over this great audience here and realize how representative you are, somehow I cannot help but feel that my imagination shall take wings, and upon the hills of my imagination I see in serried companies the great numbers, the millions of people that are looking down upon this body here for light and for leadership and for courage and for help and for guidance. And then, when my heart is stirred by your enthusiasm and when I realize that just as sure as it is that we are all pilgrims traveling home to God, as our fathers used to sing, and that it will not be long until we stand in the great company of the Redeemed in the City that hath foundations, whose builder and whose maker is God, and that there will well up from our souls the same song of the Spirit and we will all have our eyes fixed upon Him who is altogether lovely and the fairest of ten thousand to all our souls, I confess, brethren, that my heart is stirred with the greatness of it all and I feel like holding out my hands to you and calling of you "United Brethren in Christ."

And then, when I hear the results of your great organization, and when I hear the vibrant slogans that your leaders sound up and down your lines—for when I was a boy, I believe, the first slogan of a Church that ever got into my consciousness so that I could never forget it, was when I heard Chaplain McCabe shouting, "A million for missions!" And when I heard these slogans of your Church and realize what you are doing and think of your long battle lines as you stand facing the enemies of God and the enemies of the race and the enemies of the home and the enemies of our souls, I feel like turning to my own folks and saying, "We want to get into that battle line and join in that conflict also."

I thank you for your attention and for all your courtesies. Over at the parking station the other day a man, as I went out, said, "He must be one of those General Conference men." As I came into the gallery here a few days ago a man greeted me with a kindly handshake and asked me from what Conference I hailed. And under the spell of the genial friendliness of your Chairman of the Committee on Fraternal Delegates I would not be very much surprised if you gave me the privilege, if you gave me a seat in this General Conference and told me, "Now go ahead and rise to a point of order, if you want to." I feel at home here, and I want again, in conclusion, to say that our hearts are with your hearts and that so far as I know we all stand for the same thing. And I hope that by these gestures of fraternity and by a more constant persistence in getting together, perhaps in the course of time all these barriers, that in a measure separate us, may be broken down and the prayer of our Lord Jesus may be answered, that all of us may be one in thee.

Bishop Richardson: I am sure I voice the sentiment of the General Conference when we say to Bishop Statton that we appreciate very much all his kind words about our Church. As we listened to him there was no way of knowing, if he had not told us, that he was not a Methodist. We understand the language he was talking here this morning, and if in the goodness of God it should come that these two churches should come together, we feel it should be for the greater efficiency of both of us.

Merle N. Smith, Chairman of the Committee on the Reception of the Fraternal Delegates:

Bishop and Brethren: There is no majority report and no minority report in the high order of the hour which now engages us. There is only a unanimous and most affectionate welcome in which we all of us join in greeting the distinguished messenger of our sister Church, Bishop Dobbs, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Already this General Conference has paid its tribute to the memory of that noble servant of American Methodism, Bishop Eugene R. Hendrix. Already we have been stirred by the unofficial fraternal greeting of three beloved sons of the Southland, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Bishop John M. Moore, and Dr. C. C. Selecman; and we are told that the brethren of our sister Church in Kansas City have co-operated in the preparation for this General Conference as if they owned it. This Conference is becoming in a way a family affair. It is a most distinguished succession to which our honored guest belongs, a great group not of sectional Methodists, but of ecumenical Methodists, keeping in step with us as we march out together to capture all this world for Jesus Christ. Let me read, Mr. President, the credentials of our fraternal messenger.

THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Kansas City, Missouri.

Dear Fathers and Brethren:

In harmony with our well established custom and under the authority of our church, the College of Bishops have appointed the Reverend Bishop Hoyt McWhorter Dobbs, Master of Arts, Doctor of Divinity, Doctor of Laws, Fraternal Messenger to your General Conference. We commend him with heartiness to your gracious welcome.

Bishop Dobbs has held with marked efficiency most responsible positions among us. He has served in our most important pastorates. He has been Professor and Dean in our School of Theology, Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Texas. He was Bishop in charge in Brazil for four years and is now in charge of the District comprising Alabama and Florida.

Bishop Dobbs will bear to you the fraternal greetings of our entire Church and will assure you of our sincere hope and prayer that your God and ours will bless you with all spiritual prosperity and make you of such service as may continually glorify our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

Fraternally yours,

JOHN M. MOORE,
Secretary of the College of Bishops,
Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

May 11, 1928
Nashville, Tennessee.

To our brother and to the Church from which he comes, we say this, never have our people regarded the activities of our sister Church with greater interest than now. Never have we rejoiced more in her signal successes, not only in this land but around the world, than now. And never have more prayers ascended from us for heaven's continued blessings upon her than at this hour. It is my honor, as it is your pleasure, to receive Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, fraternal delegate of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Bishop Blake: Members of the General Conference, it is a very great and a very distinct honor to be permitted to present to you this distinguished servant of our sister Church, Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs. Bishop Dobbs, may I say to you, our minds, our hearts, our arms are open unto you.

FRATERNAL ADDRESS OF BISHOP HOYT M. DOBBS

Dear Fathers and Brethren:

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has charged me with the responsibility and with the privilege of conveying to you, and through you, to the Methodist Episcopal Church, greetings and salutations in the name of our Lord, Jesus Christ, the great Head of the Church. May Grace, Mercy, and Peace from God our Father, continue to bless and crown your labors, at home and abroad, for the extension of His Kingdom throughout the earth.

I must lay no claim to any especial qualification for this high honor. But if a friendly heart, a passion for the truth, and a desire to be of service, may be included among those necessary, then I shall—in part at least—be justified in speaking.

Twenty years ago one of your own number took part in the ordination service by which I became an Elder in the Methodist ministry. In this noble city for some years I had the honor to serve as Pastor. Here I came to know and work in brotherly love with your own leaders in the common tasks of the community and of the Kingdom. For forty years this was the home of Bishop Eugene R. Hendrix, one of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, one of the founders of the Scarritt College for Christian workers, and first president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. In this historic hall that great layman and Evangelist, Dwight L. Moody, preached a series of sermons which mightily moved the multitude. For these and for many other reasons, I have joy in this presence.

We live in a world of relationships. Wise men and women the world over recognize this fact and order their thought and life with reference to its significance. These relationships are among our most precious possessions. It is not strange, therefore, that this custom of exchanging fraternal greetings has grown up among us. It keeps the fires of love burning in our hearts, and it strengthens the ties which have bound us from the beginning. Your life and your character have won for you high and honored places in the estimation of mankind. Your record is one of which you may be justly proud. Your achievements have enriched the life of the Church, as well as of the world. We thank God for your courage and for your sacrificial energy, and we pray that your future may be worthy of all which has gone before.

The College of Bishops, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in their address to the General Conference in Memphis in 1926, expressed this same assurance, and their words I now make my own:

"The vote on the plan of Unification failed to receive the required Constitutional majority. We cannot forget that three General Conferences have declared their belief in the possibility and in the desirability of some plan of unification for American Methodism. The utterances of our leaders and the testimony of our Councils from the beginning make a record on which we stand, and furnish the basis and warrant the hope for Unification. Let us not cease to cherish the glad expectation of a closer unity of the people of God in general, and of our own Methodist families in particular."

Bishop W. F. Oldham brought to us at Memphis your fraternal message. It affords me pleasure to make this acknowledgment of our thanks and appreciation for his address, which was in every way worthy of your own high standards and traditions. In South America, also, "his is the good gray head that all men know," and his is the heart that understands. The people there have told me that his very wish carries the weight and the influence of the law itself, and that men delight to say that they work with him as well as for him.

The lengthened shadows of John and Charles Wesley and of their mother, fall across the Methodism of the modern world. Forever will their names be linked together. Methodism will have it so. Wesley, Luther, Augustine, Paul, Isaiah, Moses, and Abraham will stand, ever columnar, in the temple of the people of God. John Wesley was perhaps the most considerable man of the eighteenth century. His only inheritance was the "providence of God." And the "providence of God was the crowning fact of his policy as well as the crowning maxim of his philosophy." Methodism under God became the outstanding fact of that country and the free and liberal messages of Wesley still stir and bless all the Churches of the world. Dr. Chalmers, it was, indeed, who said, "Methodism is Christianity in earnest."

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has recently announced that during the year 1927 more than half a million new members were received into the Churches of this country. In all of this both you and we have had our proportionate part, and for this we thank God and take courage. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, today speaks through the voices of 8,348 traveling preachers to the mind and the heart of 2,638,886 Methodists. Our Missionaries, stout apostles of the Church, have unfurled the banner of the Cross in twelve foreign countries, and during the past four years we have received upwards of one hundred million dollars for the holy purposes of religion and education. Mr. James B. Duke, in presenting his noble gift, made the widely quoted statement that he had come to accept the simple declarations of the Holy Scriptures in the administration of his fortune. This and other great gifts indicate the increasing emphasis which men of affairs are coming to place upon moral and spiritual values. Man lives by bread—but not by bread alone.

The equipment of the churches at the present time surpasses perhaps that of any other period in their history. The wealth of the world is very largely in the hands of Christian men and women. In architecture and in organization they represent enormous expenditures of money, and with an army of trained workers they do their tasks in all parts of the world. These alone, however, are not the real secrets of our strength and power—great and necessary though they are. Our equipment is but a worthy means toward a noble end, and that which distinguishes us is not our possessions, but the uses to which these possessions are applied.

The conditions under which our work must be done in the future are vastly different from those of former years. The growth of Science, the spread of democracy, the increasing influence of women, the enlarged dignity of labor, prohibition of the liquor traffic, the remaking of the map of Europe and the vast accumulation of unprecedented wealth, are among the changed conditions which must hereafter be taken into account by all who have to do with religion and with shaping its institutional forms.

These changes have taken place in the realms of thought, as they have appeared in the realms of life and work. The world itself is growing larger and larger. Larger and larger must be its leadership. Speed and power will continue to increase. Men's elbows are very close together. The cry of hunger is heard from the Orient to the Occident. The prayers of passing Saints hush the thunder of the world's commerce. The blows of a gavel in Wall Street shake the cities of Europe and the Orient. There are no longer any secrets in human society. The victorious aviator slows down to ninety miles an hour, and with one sweep of the eye surveys ten thousand square miles of the earth's surface and writes as he flies. The increasing solidarity of the race demands a larger and a larger world in which to live and move.

Science has made conquest of the major domains of Nature, and has succeeded in stamping out many of the race's most deadly diseases. The spread of democracy is world-wide and touches every phase of our individual and our collective life. The influence of women is destined, probably, to be more and more widely recognized. The toiling masses of mankind have come into a new sphere, and the conditions under which they live and do their work are being steadily improved, and should be, in every possible way. The prohibition of the liquor traffic is one of the greatest reforms in the history of the Republic. Strong drink, and the effects of strong drink, have been more destructive of human life and happiness than have all the plagues, famines, and wars of civilization. The late President Eliot, of Harvard, said, before one of the great Bar Associations of America, that if civilization did not succeed in destroying strong drink and the social vices, the social vices and strong drink would destroy civilization. It is the expressed wish and will of the people of God that civilization be not destroyed.

The vast accumulation of wealth surpasses anything in that department of human endeavor which the world has thus far known. Happily the administrators of the great modern fortunes, many of them, regard themselves as trustees of great resources which they are using, in increasing measure, for the relief of the sufferings of their fellowmen, and for the improvement of their surroundings. "We have been accustomed to think of the Church in sections, but God has given it a trusteeship as a whole." But significant as these facts are, we must remember that they are not final—that in reality they are but the setting of the stage upon which Christianity must continue to appear and to do its work.

There are certain great creative energies in Christianity which are more potent than any outward conditions under which it operates. Religion creates civilization—civilization does not create religion. These are of primary importance. They are, heredity, environment, individual initiative, and last but not least, Divine Grace. Heredity may influence, but it does not determine man's destiny. Environment may leave its stamp on the individual, but one of the unceasing affirmations of the human soul is that man at his best is master of, and not mastered by, circumstances. Individual initiative may find horizons far distant, but it ultimately reaches boundary lines beyond which it cannot go. Divine Grace moves and guides as does no other energy known to man. There is always an incalculable element in the religion of the soul. Dr. William Adams Brown in his new book, "Beliefs That Matter," reminds us that chief of all the factors in the life of the soul is the free spirit of the living God, who touches the spirit of men and women, and arouses them to undreamed of activities. Character that tells must be the ally of power. God truly takes an especial interest in every life which has been dedicated to Him. Answering the question, "Does civilization need religion?" Dr. Niebuhr is very discerning in his statement that our highest power flows from internal and not from external sources; and that the soul's real victory over nature and circumstances comes in learning to identify itself with the eternal values of its devotion. Misfortune, when nobly borne, becomes good fortune.

Strangely enough, this attitude of the human spirit has great power to quicken the intellectual life. Personality is the sum total of all our powers. "When we think things through, we think things true," and men who do not live straight cannot shoot straight. "Faith is the greatest foe of all human ills. Other forces than those of decay are at work across the world." Dying intellectual and moral values find survival under the influences of the Christian religion. Knowledge is power—for good or for evil. Knowledge must therefore never be divorced from piety—and piety must not be divorced from knowledge. All truth can have but one source. It is indeed superficial thinking, and not profound thought, which tempts man to believe that he can forget God. Science needs religion, and religion needs science. Science reaches its noblest altitude only when it is animated by the Christian motive and the Christian spirit. Religion needs the technical skill of science in its ministries to all mankind. The devout spirit, the open mind, and the scientific method, when properly combined and used, will never mislead. Education is the strengthward growth of the body, the truthward growth of the mind, and the Godward growth of the soul. President Coolidge said last week in a public address that "this country has increasing need of something more than worldly success." A nation may survive the decay of faith in a few individuals, but in the masses of the people—never. The Manufacturers' Record in a recent editorial comments on the fact that ninety per cent of American boys and girls between the ages of five and seventeen were enrolled in the private or the public schools in 1926. The Record further states that the total value of all property used for public school purposes in the United States is estimated to be in excess of $4,676,000,000.00. The great educators of America are appealing to the Church and the home to co-operate with them in the education of our youth. They insist, and insist rightly, that there are certain functions which cannot be delegated—that in reality there is a very vital part of education which the home, and only the home, can supply. They are asking that we co-operate with them in this stupendous enterprise. The home, the Church and the school must continue to emphasize the fact that one of the major motives of all education is and must be the creation of character which will stand the strain of tomorrow. If super-men and super-women are ever to appear among us, they will come from the ranks of those who follow in the footsteps of the Super-Man of Galilee. The supreme credentials of Christianity are the men and women whom Christ has captured.

We build in the present, on the past, and for the future. Our past we believe to have been of divine origin. That our present is inspired by the Holy Spirit, we have no doubt. Our future is in God's hands, upon whose shoulders the government of the world must rest at last. The progress of the race is as well attested as its solidarity. President Wilson said, "That man is right who stands closest to the future." The laws of leadership are largely the same in all departments of human endeavor. The leader must know the way, he must keep ahead, and he must have a following. Jesus Christ is immeasurably the foremost man of every age, and he is the only man in all history who meets these moral and spiritual qualifications for leadership. In his steps the Church will bravely follow—she asks no exemption from these exacting demands. The Church is God's "nation among the nations"—a body without death and a mind without decay. But above all nations is humanity. The institutional forms of society must ultimately be brought to their perfection in terms of human values. We must more and more conceive of the Kingdom of God on earth as a group of which Jesus Christ is the King and the center, and in which all men may find opportunity for self-realization as brothers.

The task of tomorrow will be a many-sided one. It must be accomplished at home and abroad—on the land and on the sea. It must be so comprehensive as to include the mystic's hunger for God and the reformer's passion for men. The gospel is to the individual as well as to society. The individual must be born again, and society must continue to hear us proclaim that the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand—here and now, in all which this implies. We do not claim that men can be made righteous by legislative processes, but do affirm that through the proper legislative means, atmosphere, conditions and moral climate may be created which will give virtue and character some chance of survival.

The work abroad may change its method and its vocabulary; but its aim and motive will ever be the same. The gospel itself is for all races, classes and conditions of men. The words "pagan" and "heathen" are and ought to be vanishing words. Their use implies the assumption of an untactful, if not unwarranted, superiority, which is not in keeping with the values revealed in the New Testament. Perhaps the time may come when the time-honored word "Missionary" may yield to the more accurate designation of "Christian worker." One of the most effective ways in which he may aid those serving in distant lands is to bear in mind the significant truth that nations, just individuals, never grow so powerful or so self-sufficient as to be able to do without friends and friendly relationships. A kindly word and a Christian courtesy in one hemisphere may yield immense dividends in another hemisphere, while on the other hand haste and a lack of proper consideration may be registered in circles very remote from those in which they originated. The tourist and the tradesman may accelerate or retard the progress of the missionary cause. A number of Latin-American presidents have said in recent years that the International Health Board now at work in sixty-six countries on a foundation of one hundred million dollars, has by its healing ministries to the bodies of men become one of the most effective agencies in creating international friendship and good-will—the atmosphere in which Christianity may function more fruitfully.

The task at home increasingly demands our wisest and most unceasing effort also. It is the statement of one authority that one half of our national population are yet to be reached by the Christian Religion. Men and women are always and everywhere more powerfully moved by example than precept, hence reality in religion and in life must be more widely operative in every sphere. The people should rally to the standards of religion for patriotic reasons, even if for no other. Our national welfare demands co-operative effort on the part of all righteous forces. There surely must be a highest common factor in Christianity which can be made applicable to all our problems. In times past we have been accustomed, and rightly so, to speak many and splendid things in terms of "the North," of "the South," of "the East," and of "the West,"—this we shall continue to do. The time is at hand, however, when the people of every section may, with increasing influence and profit for the Kingdom of God and for the American Republic, enlarge their thinking. Controversy—theological or geographical—is not constructive. The noblest way in which to defend the faith is to feed our flocks; and he who truly loves and serves the American people will love and serve every unit of their national life.

Though we may redefine the Church's task, we can never alter its nature and function. Now as in every age past, its duty is to win men and women to allegiance to Jesus Christ, and to make his principles regnant in their lives wherever those lives may be lived. The world itself is the subject of redemption, and redemption, like other processes in the wider universe, is not yet completed.

Ours must also continue to be a passion for peace. The churches must broadly co-operate, wherever it is possible, in the establishment of peace throughout the world. Peace and good will flow from Christianity as naturally as a river from its source. So shall we be called the sons of God. Perhaps one of the most effective ways in which to do this will be in the proclamation of the Gospel which saves the souls of men from the sins which lead them to make war one upon another. Greed, anger and lust are the three major sins of mankind, and they inevitably lead to ruin.

The long look forward is justified by the character of God, by the command of our Lord Jesus Christ, by the needs of a broken-hearted world, and by the very condition of our own salvation. If God be that which we have found Him to be, we are under obligation to proclaim Him to the world. The command of Christ is not to be disobeyed. "A reasoned and determined repudiation of his principles has nowhere or at any time been forgiven to any people." The world's weary and heaven-laden look toward us with eyes dimmed with tears. Our own salvation is scarcely possible, if we do not respond—no response is death—response is life.

Nineteen hundred and twenty-eight years ago, a man called Jesus was sent and came into the world with the message that God is the Father of all men and that all men may become the sons of God. He delivered that message, was crucified, dead and buried.

Now, after the lapse of twenty centuries, we have met in another hemisphere to profess our faith in the truth which he revealed and for which he laid down his life. We are not compelled to do this. The truth has made us free.

The eyes of six hundred million people are turned to-day toward the birthplace of a man whom they never saw. This is not without a cause. The Acts of the Apostles, the philosophy of history, and the trend of modern times all begin to indicate that his work will be imperishable.

The men and women who have most closely identified themselves with him have been the world-uplifting men and women. Under his leadership we have power to accelerate the moral velocity of the world. The momentum of millennium is behind his purposes.

It remains, therefore, for us to enter again the secret place of the most High, and here to bend our wills in conformity with his will, that the Kingdom of God may come upon the earth.

To be the sons of God—to be brothers to the race—to forgive as he forgave—to toil patiently up the slopes of service—to have eternity set in our hearts—to fear no more the meaning of death—to love and be loved, with a love everlasting—this is the message of Christianity to all mankind.

FAREWELL WORDS OF BISHOP DOBBS

Merle N. Smith, Chairman of the Committee on the Reception of Fraternal Delegates:

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs is now about to take his leave from among us. His stay has been altogether too brief. We are deeply grateful to Bishop Dobbs for his coming and for his noble fraternal utterances. His presence has been a delight and we bid him God-speed. A young preacher on a Monday morning asked an elderly woman in his congregation what she thought of his sermon on the preceding day. He must have been a young minister. She said she liked his sermon. And he asked, "What was there about my sermon that you especially liked?" She said, "What I especially admire in your preaching is your perseverance, the way you keep right on saying the same thing, again and again."

As our brother goes from us we keep on saying the same thing, the assurance of esteem and affection, and of our expectation that in God's good time our mutual hopes will be consummated and our prayers answered. May I quote, as Bishop Dobbs goes from us, a verse from Longfellow, and with a meaning that Longfellow perhaps did not dream:

"We hold you fast in our fortress
And will not let you depart,
But put you deep down in the dungeon,
In the roundtower of our heart.
And there we will hold you forever,
Aye, forever and a day,
Till its walls shall smoulder to ruin
And crumble to dust away."

Bishop Dobbs:

It would be unbecoming in me in taking my leave not to let you know something of the heart throbs which I have experienced since coming into your midst. On the other hand it would be more unbecoming to use the time of this great body with needless delay. Permit me to say that the eyes of the world have been and are, and will continue to be upon you. The eye of God is upon you as each one of you shall perform His task under the great Taskmaker. Aye, for twenty-one years I have striven with all the strength which is within me likewise to protect the principles of fraternity between the Methodists of the two groups with which I have been related. It is my happy duty from my own viewpoint to assure you that until my ministry here shall have ceased, I shall continue to practice co-operation and not competition; fraternity and not criticism; construction and not destruction. I wish to thank you from my heart for the very generous evidence of your brotherly love which I knew to exist before, and which shall cheer me as I go back to my field of labor. Blessings on you and your families as you continue in the preaching of the Lordship of Jesus Christ, as you continue to protect the principle of brotherly love, and as you continue to bear the great message. May God grant each and every one in this world a knowledge of his truth, and in the world to come life everlasting.

THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

Merle N. Smith, Chairman of the Committee on the Reception of the Fraternal Delegates:

Mr. Bishop, and members of the Conference, Bishop Charles Wesley Burns was the honored Fraternal Messenger of this General Conference to the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church last week in Baltimore. He was accorded by our Brethren a most cordial and fraternal reception, and upon his suggestion that this General Conference would be delighted to receive a fraternal messenger from that group, their choice fell upon the honored retiring president of their Church, Dr. Thomas Hamilton Lewis, a man whose name is a shining name in American Protestant Christianity. As everybody here knows, the Methodist Protestant Church is a member of the great family of American Methodism, and we rejoice with them in the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of their Church and give thanks to God for the successes that have been visited upon them. Dr. Lewis is himself, as most of us know, a noble servant, not only of his own church, but of the Church universal in this world. It was at the General Conference of 1908 in Baltimore that he delivered a fraternal address to that body, which was in the nature of a national event. Some of us still feel the thrill and spiritual inspiration that were in it. The credentials of Dr. Lewis have been received and read as follows:

GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.

May 18, 1928.

To the Board of Bishops and the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Session in Kansas City, Missouri.

DEAR FATHERS AND BRETHREN:

We take pleasure in presenting to you the fraternal messenger from the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, now in session in Baltimore, Maryland, Reverend Thomas Hamilton Lewis, D.D., LL.D., of Washington, D. C., who will present greetings from our body. For thirty-four years Dr. Lewis was president of Western Maryland College and for three terms president of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church.

There is no man among us who is more highly esteemed or who can more fittingly present our greetings to your Conference.

We pray God's richest blessings upon every deliberation of your great assembly and trust that the day may not be far distant when we shall see in this great country of ours a united Methodism.

Signed by order and in behalf of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, in session in Baltimore, Maryland, this 18th day of May, 1928.

J. C. BROOMFIELD, President.

C. W. PATES, Secretary.

FRATERNAL ADDRESS OF REVEREND THOMAS HAMILTON LEWIS
MR. PRESIDENT, FATHERS AND BRETHREN OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH:

I come here, as you have heard in the reading of my credentials, by the direction of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, to bear loving greetings and to reciprocate, in my poor way, the felicitations and fraternal message borne to us by your Bishop Burns. Bishop Burns captured our people by his messages, and strangely warmed their hearts by his good will. He is a loving apostle of sweetness and light. He has John Wesley's spectacles, and therefore recognized us at once as fellow Methodists. He is a Bishop, and therefore may have felt something lonesome among us, but he saw our President rule me out of order and that must have seemed like good news from a far country. He helped us celebrate our Centennial, and patiently listened while we boasted above measure. I do not recall that he referred particularly to Methodist union, but when he intimated that you would be pleased to receive a return visit from our Conference there was instant and unanimous response, and I had the good fortune to win the honor of being named messenger. "Therefore came I unto you without gainsaying, as soon as I was sent for: I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?" Perhaps it may occur to you that I can best answer that question myself. Very well, with your permission I will. Without consuming your precious time or hopelessly attempting to divert your attention from the absorbing business before you this morning to anything I might tell you about our own church affairs, I am exceedingly bold—trembling, indeed, lest you may think me presumptuous—to proceed at once to the question that burns with unquenchable desire in Methodist Protestant hearts, and ask you as one of the responsible trustees, What have you done with Methodist union? Will you pardon a personal allusion in explanation?

In the days of Burke there was a member of the British Parliament named Hamilton, who because of a speech he made one day, and because he never spoke in Parliament again, has come down to us as "Single-Speech Hamilton." Now Hamilton is my middle name. Twenty years ago I had the honor of addressing this body, and two years later, the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as fraternal messenger from the Methodist Protestant Church. In both addresses I made some remarks on the subject of Methodist union, and in both instances there was an explosion of enthusiasm rarely witnessed in a religious gathering. Nobody could have been more astonished than I was at the demonstration; and after all these years, reviewing the affair, I am still unable to account for so great an effect from so slight a cause. In fact, I think the speech was not the cause at all, except in the sense that Mrs. O'Leary's cow burnt up Chicago. I was unconsciously too near a powder magazine, and I dropped a match. Methodist people of that time had a great longing for union, which as yet had found no opportunity to express itself fully, and at my unexpected speech it went off. But I protest, brethren, that my Church has no intention to suggest by this second appointment that you are fated to have this messenger return to you every twenty years, after the manner of the locust. I told my Conference that they knew quite well what I stood for, and that if I came to this Conference, I should certainly, unless I found a rule against it, say something about Methodist union, and that if they wanted to stop me their surest plan was to stop me before I started. That is what brought out these resolutions which I will now read.

"Resolved, That we favor and long for a united Methodism, and in order to promote that object the President of this General Conference is hereby authorized and directed to appoint a commission on church union consisting of ten members with authority to negotiate with the Methodist and other kindred churches during the coming quadrennium.

"Resolved, That when this General Conference adjourns, it shall adjourn subject to the call of the President, who may call the same in special session, when he has been informed by your Commission on Church Union, that the conditions on which we may enter the movement are probably acceptable to this General Conference." (Certified Copy) C. W. Pates, Secretary of General Conference.

So now we know where we are. I realize that I am more bold than prudent in venturing an address on Methodist union just now. Begun in enthusiastic hope of a speedy consummation twenty years ago, its weary disciples have been compelled to watch it "dwindle, peak and pine" into a remote possibility. Some think it has been talked to death. Some suspect it was strangled by ecclesiastical diplomacy. But all appear to be willing to treat it as no longer a live issue. If I venture now to breathe upon these dry bones, it is not that I dare to suppose that my voice can make this ghost walk. I am simply curious to know what has been done with Methodist union? Or, as the bard of my youth phrases it, "Who killed Cock Robin?" If this were all that is in my mind, however, I would not trouble you with a post-mortem. And if I presume to believe that the patient is not in extremis, but it is only a case of suspended animation, it is because I believe that as Christ's words shall not pass away, so neither shall his prayer go unanswered and that this Christ-breathed ideal shall yet stand on its feet and walk.

The ideal of Methodist union was always and essentially a love match. And because it was not seriously recognized as such, and cultivated in this spirit by those who gave it attention, it languished. It got mixed up with sectional, denominational, historical, and other extraneous issues, until it could not breathe its native air, and finally ceased to breathe at all. "The child came to the birth and there was not strength to bring forth."

The solemnities of marriage have furnished so many opportunities for the professional humorists, that one almost automatically classes oneself as a sentimentalist who make an appeal for love to be considered as of first importance in so solemn a union. I have traced back to a pulpit humorist of the times of James the First the observation that the word "matrimony" may be pronounced "matter-o-money" without changing its meaning as understood in the best circles of society. For at least three hundred years, then, the old fashioned way of marrying for love has been taboo in the said best circles. Meanwhile, such grandfogies as still stand in the ways and for the good old paths of love, may comfort themselves with another observation, some sixteen hundred years older than the first, that if you throw nature out by the door it will come back by the window; which, being interpreted, means that falling in love is too human to be strange and too divinely new to become tiresome. A much more serious query for us is whether the progressive spirits which are working such havoc with love's young dream, will be able to invade also the sphere of Methodist union and focus the pitiless glare of what they are pleased to call common sense upon it, until they make it appear to be only an ecclesiastical bargain or a socialist experiment. To be sure we ought not to complain if so great a matter is looked at and discussed from many angles of observation, for, of course, it has its practical side. Young dreamers and impractical enthusiasts must not be permitted to run this mighty mechanism with rhetoric. It is eminently proper that ecclesiastical fathers and mothers should strive to prevent unions that defy the most ordinary calculations of fitness and harmony. And so the ecclesiastical lawyer and the religious statesman and the theologian must all be given a hearing; even the standpatter must be given his day in court. Methodist union is not just an airy abstraction. Plans must be formulated and discussed, constitutional safeguards must be made precise and comprehensive, facts and figures and even traditions must be taken into account, we must take time and have patience and think all round and over and under and through every proposition connected with it. Yes, yes; but I want this to be done by those people who want to unite and not by those who do it to prevent union: Christ in his parable never meant to stop people from building by keeping them counting the cost all their lives. The first thing to do is to get at the sentiment itself with which Methodist union begins and without which it cannot too soon end, namely, the love which inspires it and can alone effectuate it. And I believe we ought to write large over every project of this kind, that so far as we are concerned we will not make hypocrites of ourselves by proposing union with people we do not love enough to live with; it shall be a union for love or it shall not be at all. Let those who call this romantic make the most of it. Methodist union is a romance. Not in the sense some contemptuous critics would give it, as unbelievable, opposed to sane experience, a castle in the air, an ecclesiastical utopia. But the real, the high romance, the story of the ideal, transcending the commonplace and soliciting the soul out of humdrum with apocalyptic visions, the heavenly dream untainted by calculations of profit and loss, measuring its gain in heartbeats, rejoicing not in statistics, but in love's victory over hate in human hearts. "For if I speak with the tongue of men and of angels and have not love I am but a sounding brass," unable and unworthy to sound the first note of the dominant chord of Methodist union.

It was in the same night he was betrayed, in the passion of Gethsemane, in the very ecstasy of love's renunciation, that our Blessed Lord saw the vision of a united Church. So, I am persuaded, it will be under the white heat of love's consuming flame that denominational prejudices will disappear and the disciples of Jesus be welded into one divine brotherhood.

Now let us inquire whether there is anything in these general observations applicable to our case at this time; is there any balm in this Gilead for our sleeping sickness?

Every denomination has its peculiar problems in connection with propositions for union, but in one respect all have the same problem. In every case the man who desires union between separated denominations must rid himself of the idea that it is a problem in statistics which must be figured out until every possible contingency has been reduced to mathematical certainty. It is not a sin to be a big church, but I believe it would be a sin to engineer vast combinations of people into a church for no other reason than to become a big church. Neither is it a case to be handled only by ecclesiastical diplomats and trained specialists and in secret closets. In my humble opinion Methodist union has been nearly done to death by its doctors. And, hear me, brethren, it is not a game of intellectual battle-dore and shuttlecock for our Conference debating societies, annual and general. That is a splendid way, perhaps the most effective way to make a division, but it makes few unions. All these miss the vital characteristics of every union proposition that has promise of success in it. Methodist union is a movement. I am not trying to be metaphysical, but I really believe we Methodists have much to learn here. To think of union as a movement, as something going on, rather than as a fixed, determined thing, as a fluid ideal rather than as a solid concept, is to see new possibilities in it and to derive new satisfactions from it. Now a movement has its impulse and it has its obstructions, the rest of it is largely accidental and negligible. Logically we ought to give most attention to its impulse, not only because this is after all its final justification, but because it is much easier to overcome obstructions by reinforcing the impulse than it is to strengthen the impulse by removing the obstructions. And what is vastly more significant, we can strengthen the impulse without halting the movement, but to remove the obstructions we must halt the movement.

It is fortunate that we do not need to say much in explanation of the impulse; it makes its own appeal and supplies its own reasons if we give it a chance. The impulse of Methodist union is love; started, I devoutly believe, in the yearning solicitude of our Divine Lord, and, I also devoutly believe, the great propulsive dynamic of Methodism itself, which is, properly speaking, nothing but a creed of love, an evangel of love, and a rationale of love. The origin of Methodism, the power of its heralds, from Wesley down, its triumphs among the lowly, and its astonishing vitality, blazing but unconsumed, all have their explanation in love. It must follow, therefore, that if there could be any seeming success among Methodists which could be stated only in fine buildings and enlarged resources, that success would not endure, lacking love. And if there should be any union among Methodists now separated, which found its success only in considerations of diplomacy and statistics, that union would be of few days and full of trouble. And it must also follow that if Methodists do not love one another they are so much the less Methodists. And if a Methodist wants to grow in love and demonstrate his love in all sincerity, and yet insists upon remaining separate from other Methodists in Church fellowship, he must furnish an explanation that will explain. Of course he may have his reasons, reasons are as plentiful as blackberries, but I would like to hear him explain first of all his impulse. Not even a Methodist can drive a team of impulses moving in opposite directions. The impulse of love brings Methodists together as inevitable as gravity. What is the impulse that keeps them apart?

But love does not always have its way, and so we must, for an intelligent understanding of our situation, consider the obstructions. Looking at the various units of Protestant Christianity we may say, speaking broadly, that they have all arranged themselves around questions of ritual, or of doctrine, or of administration, and it is in one or more of these we will find the obstructions to the movement of union.

As to the first of these it would seem impossible to perpetuate a division among Methodists about ritual. Methodism arose in a ritualistic Church, it is true; and Wesley was never willing to acknowledge his separation from it. But it arose also and to far mightier dimensions in the American wilderness, where prayer books were scarce and Methodists were no great readers. They became Methodists, as they became Christians, in the most primitive fashion, without a ritual; and I suppose their descendants can continue to be Methodists without it. True, some Methodist Churches are growing more like ritualistic churches every day, cultivating forms of worship more stately, more edifying, some would say; while others groan and say quite other things about it. But however much Methodism may have improved or deteriorated on account of ritualistic tendencies, I know of no disposition to press this question to a division among Methodists. If there are those who feel that ritual and liberty are inconsistent terms in worship; and if there are others who are pained and distracted by irregularities if not vulgarities exhibited in a free service, and who like to feel the guidance of the crook through the green pastures of their devotions, I do not suppose anyone dreams of a division in Methodism on this account.

It is perhaps approaching debatable ground to place speculative theology among the accidents of Methodism; but whatever the reason may be, the fact is that there has never been a doctrinal division among Methodists, and is not likely to be. It would be a misrepresentation of Wesley to overlook the fact that he was a clear, profound theologian, and that his preaching was more doctrinal than anything else. Nevertheless, Wesley himself insisted that his great aim was not to secure the acceptance of a body of divinity by his disciples, but the cultivation of an experience. And the fact is that Methodists have never been absorbingly interested in doctrine beyond a few articles. When they have correctly formulated the facts of their experience they care but little for the phrasing of other matters. We carry twenty-five articles as our official creed, it is true; but I question whether one in a thousand of our people really know what they teach. Perhaps they are none the worse for that. But it is extremely unlikely that Methodists will ever split into doctrinal fractions. We are reduced then to the conclusion that all the divisions in Methodism have arisen and are perpetuated on account of differences of opinion in matters of administration, or governmental differences.

Now it is possible to make too little of such matters. Hampden resisted the King and Judges of England in a matter of twenty shillings, and brought on a civil war. Our own colonial fathers resisted the King and Parliament of England in a matter of six cents, and brought on the Revolution in the United States of America. Both of these were matters of administration. So that it is not likely that American Methodists will acquiesce in Pope's dictum:

"For forms of government let fools contest, Whate'er is best administered is best."

Contesting for forms of government seems to be one of the rights guaranteed to us by the Declaration of Independence, and we shall probably never yield the contest in Church or state. Being of human origin, forms of government must always be susceptible of improvement; and I think it is safe to say that no form of government was ever yet contested that was not in the end improved.

But if it was a monumental blunder to expel good men from Methodism for arguing about a change in its government, what ought we to call the perpetuation of the division after all are agreed as to the right to discuss, and after the change sought has been made by those then resisting? We are not all agreed about government now, to be sure; nor ever will be. But members of these denominations differ among themselves as much as the denominations differ from each other on these questions.

Another great schism arose in Methodism on the question of what shall be done with a Bishop whose wife owns slaves. I do not know why, but it would appear that this is still a live question. At least there are two standing monuments of its immortal vigor facing one another at Mason and Dixon's line. It isn't claimed that anybody now owns slaves, or wants to own slaves, or could own slaves; but for some reason, known only, I think, to the only wise God, two great Churches, having the same ritual, doctrine and administration, are still perpetuating a division that began over this question, notwithstanding the question itself is dead. Sixty-five years it has been dead. In the name of sanitation, why isn't it buried? But these two great, wise denominations, emulating the pious faith of their Roman Catholic exemplars, still pay their devotions at the shrine where the sacred relic rests.

There have been other divisions in Methodism, but unless I have forgotten something, the whole recipe consists in differences of opinion about forms of government and administration, with sectional differences mingled with race prejudices, all stirred energetically together with bitter memories of past disputes, and taken without water after each meal.

Is it not plain that Methodist union must be a union for love or not at all? Such differences can't be argued away, nor beaten down by the iron hand of authority, nor wiped out in competitive wars. The more they are stirred and opposed the longer they are in dying, and in fact, after they die they stir men just the same.

"E'en in their ashes live their wonted fires."

The only extermination for them is the "expulsive power of a new affection." Love is the universal solvent of all difficulties, the mightiest persuasive of peace, the conqueror of prejudice, and the end of controversy. Give us love enough and Methodists will flow together as streams in the south.

If we could have a General Love Feast instead of a General Conference to deal with this question it wouldn't take so many years to settle it. Of course we can't. The followers of the great god of things as they are would rise up and say, "We never saw it on this fashion." John Wesley's Bishop of London would get out of his grave and exclaim, "Enthusiasm, enthusiasm." But, O ye Methodists, who live and move and have your being in love, I challenge you in the name of Love Immortal, strong Son of God, listen to his voice crying with authority to us in the presence of a Methodism bound in the graveclothes of a bitter, unloving, deadening past, "Loose him and let him go."

Yea, I say unto you, Hear Him:

"He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never know retreat,
He is sifting out the souls of men before his judgment seat;
O be swift, my soul, to answer Him, be jubilant, my feet,
Our God is marching on."

FAREWELL WORDS OF REVEREND THOMAS HAMILTON LEWIS

MERLE N. SMITH: Dr. Thomas Hamilton Lewis, Fraternal Delegate of the Methodist Protestant Church, who put us deeply in his debt by the noble utterance which he brought to us to-day, is about to leave. I may say for you and for myself to Dr. Lewis that if he has been half as glad to see us as we have been to see him and hear him, he is in an altogether cheerful and comfortable frame of mind. I bid him God-speed as he goes back to his work.

REVEREND T. H. LEWIS: Brethren of the Conference, it is a great pleasure to me to say good-bye to you. I like to see you smile and I knew that would make you smile. I am happy to be here, very happy indeed to have had an opportunity to speak and really overwhelmed at the gracious manner in which you have received my message. May God bless you, may he lead you, and may he crown with success what you ought to do.

BISHOP NUELSEN: To all of which we say a hearty Amen.

Merle N. Smith, Chairman of the Committee on the Reception of Fraternal Delegates:

It was one of the orators of the Negro race who used to say: "You must judge us not by what we have come to but by where we have come from." And it was Mr. Bright, the great English statesman and scholar, who declared that the progress of the Negro race in America in the twenty-five years following the Civil War could not be matched by the progress of any race in a similar period of time in history. It is by the courtesy of your committee that Dr. Stanley E. Grannum, of Lexington Conference, has been asked to present to you the representatives of two of the Churches of our brethren.

STANLEY E. GRANNUM: We are to hear this afternoon from the fraternal delegate from the African Methodist Episcopal Church. Our Board of Bishops sent to this Church—the General Conference has just adjourned—as our fraternal delegate, Dr. Ernest S. Williams, of the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church of Baltimore. Our brethren of the African Methodist Episcopal Church have paid us back in our own coin. They have sent to us as fraternal delegate the pastor of another Metropolitan Church, the Metropolitan African Methodist Episcopal Church of Baltimore. I think it is correct to say that this exchange of fraternal messengers is not a mere gesture of courtesy but is the expression of a genuine spirit of friendliness between our Methodist Churches, this spirit arising out of our common ancestry and common polity. It is therefore a great privilege to me to present to you through our presiding Bishop, Rev. William H. Thomas, Doctor of Divinity, Pastor of the Metropolitan African Methodist Episcopal Church, and fraternal delegate of this Church to this General Conference.

FRATERNAL ADDRESS OF REVEREND WILLIAM H. THOMAS

TO THE BISHOPS, GENERAL OFFICERS AND MEMBERS OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, ASSEMBLED IN GENERAL CONFERENCE, GREETINGS: I bring you greetings from the African Methodist Episcopal Church. Unlike the task assigned by Dido to Æneas, I have to say that this task, that of bearing you greetings, is a pleasant one.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church is jealous of this task of bringing you greetings and is anxious to keep green and virile the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love.

Since the Christian Church is divided into and does its best work along denominational lines, we are glad that we belong to the Methodist group and that we can greet you as the Mother of American Methodism.

America has a proprietary interest in Methodism, for it is here on this continent that Methodism has had its greatest development. The African Methodist Episcopal Church is the largest Negro daughter of the Methodist Episcopal Church, "conceived in no spirit of racial exclusiveness, fostering no ethnic antagonism, but born of the exigencies of American environment."

The age in which we live has been called socialistic, but that is false. It has been called communistic, but that, too, is false. It has been called the age of doubt, but to the contrary, it is an age of faith; it is a fraternal age.

Before the war, the last word in our civilization was efficiency. The Germans called it kultur, but at the close of the war, won by the Allies, we found that the last word in our civilization was co-operation and no one who has observed the life of the Christian Church in America can doubt that there is a deepening of acquaintance along denominational lines. As a result of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ of America, there is a growing conviction that there must be a closer co-operation among Protestant Churches, and the recent conference on Faith and Order in Switzerland has pointed clearly to the path of unity, and yet we do not dream of all denominations becoming organically one.

Men differ too widely in birth, training, education and providential callings and, then, too, the universal law of God in Grace as well as in nature, is unity in diversity.

If we were to abolish all creeds we would not have peace, but confusion. The Master's prayer "that they all may be one, as I am one in the Father and the Father in me" is not one of organic union, but one in spirit, in will, in purpose and work.

The central point of union must be Jesus Christ, the Author and Finisher of our common faith, and as a member of the Methodist family, we love to recognize the worth and the work of noble men of other denominations as expressed in our hymnology. We love to sing with the Baptist Fawcett, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," and with the Episcopalian, Toplady, "Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me," and with the Congregationalist, Ray Palmer, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," and with the Presbyterian, Bonar, "Glory Be to the Father," and with the reformer, Luther, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," and with the Unitarian, Bowring, "In the Cross of Christ I Glory," and with the Quaker, Barton, "He Dwells in Cloudless Light and Shines," and with our own Methodist, Charles Wesley, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and to join with this Christian host in singing that hymn of common faith and inspiration,

"Like a mighty army
Moves the Church of God;
Brothers, we are treading
Where the saints have trod;
We are not divided,
All one body we,
One in hope and doctrine,
One in charity."

Hence, as Methodists whilst we live to make our Church a power in the community, we also live to love every other church which exalts our Christ.

When John Wesley said to a Christian who belonged to another group, "If thy heart be as my heart, give me thy hand," he was voicing the spirit of the Christian Church of to-day.

Each denomination is stronger because of the support of the other; because of the lessons learned from the other's experience; because of the consciousness of being part of one great Christian movement.

"Not alone we conquer,
Not alone we fall,
In each gain, the triumph,
Lose or triumph all."

OUR FELLOWSHIPS

The first thing is greater fellowship in human relationships. The Christian Church has sponsored international conferences and inter-racial committees. Christian Brotherhood understands the meaning of that sheet of Peter's and listens to the command, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common"; as Josiah Strong puts it, "If men got near enough to discover one another, they would find that they have more things in common than in difference." Cardinal Manning and Henry George once met. Cardinal Manning said: "I love men because Christ loved them." Henry George said: "I love Christ because Christ loved men." Both expressed the same truth differently. The one was practical consecration, and the other, consecrated practically. Every Church must meet this double test. Is it of God? Is it of man? Does it speak of God? Does it minister to the needs of man?

The program of Christianity is "to bind up the broken-hearted, to comfort those who mourn, to give beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, liberty to the captives." The problem is not how to reach the masses, but how can the masses reach the Church; not the non-church goers, but the non-going Church; the Church which goes nowhere, but simply sits and sings "Rescue the Perishing, Care for the Dying," when the perishing and the dying are five miles away from it.

The world has commenced to regard the Church as a retreat of spiritual aristocracy and not as our Father's House. We need to learn the lesson of the Chinaman's prayer:

"One day without work and no rice,
Two days without work and no clothes,
Three days without work and no home;
Nothing left but beautiful churches,
God help me, Amen!"

The Church has a prodigious task before it, and it will not be accomplished by mere conferences or great conventions. "The kingdom of God cometh not by observation." There is needed the constant, faithful, prayerful work of each Christian congregation.

American Methodism has been a pioneer in leading governments toward international and inter-racial mindedness. Geneva is the child of the Gospel and the World Court is the result of the Master's "Go ye into all the world"; and the League of Nations is the fruit of St. Paul's, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ."

Religion is civilization. The Christian Church has been a pioneer in the promoting of civilization. Trade and commerce have followed the missionary into new fields—David Livingstone preceded Cecil Rhodes into Africa and made possible the work of empire building; Francis Asbury blazed the trail followed by the modern railroad.

PEACE

The most urgent question or need of the world to-day is the establishment of universal peace. It is urgent not only because war is wrong but because nations are rapidly forgetting the horrors of war. No agency can mold public opinion as favorably as the Christian Church. It was the influence of the Church which led to the abolishing of duelling, the hanging of witches, judicial torture and slavery. It was the influence of the Christian Church which led to the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment and it is to the Church that we must look to the establishing of universal peace.

The Christian Church is the hope of world peace. The war system is built on the assumption that war is inevitable. You cannot abolish war. You may evade it for a season, but soon or late it will overtake you again. But war is not inevitable. It is a man-originated institution. It did not come out of the earth or out of the heaven, but out of the human heart. It is not the creation of cosmic forces, but of the human spirit. It is a man-made institution and it can be by man controlled.

It must be ended by man. If the Christian Church cannot end war, no organization on earth can do it. How can this be done? Join in creating the will-to-peace. The pulpit is the real forum. Teach the people to desire peace. Mr. Kellogg launched a new idea when he made his offer of general treaty renouncing war. The Church must show the costliness of war, not in dollars and cents alone, not in the loss of man-power alone, but in the greater loss of Christian ideals. For death is not the following of a hearse to the grave, but a loss of ideals. During the days of the war men pointed to the Great World War as an evidence that Christianity had failed. It was the so-called Christian nations of the world who were fighting. But the war did not prove that Christianity had failed. It did prove something. It proved that Christianity had not been tried.

LASTLY, OUR COMMON TASKS

First, to make and keep America Christian, for the Christian religion, like charity, begins at home. In speaking for our own country, it is not because we love others less, but because we love our own more. America must be made and kept Christian in fact as well as in name.

Dr. Charles Sheldon told this story of a young Chinese lad, Wong Fu, who had been sent by the Chinese government to be educated at an American university to fit himself for a government position, and one day he went to his professor in philosophy troubled and sad, and said: "Professor, I have something on my mind that I want to tell you." "Tell it, my boy," said the professor.

"I came to this country, which is called Christian. I expected to find conditions much better here than in my own country. I find much evil, vice houses, child labor, murder, race riots, Sabbath breaking, suicides, divorces. When I go back to my people how shall I explain all of this? If the Christian religion is so much better than ours, why do all these things go on over here? If these are the results of the Christian religion, our religion is better than yours."

Yes, America must be made and kept Christian in fact as well as in name. Christian in government and in politics. Christian in society, Christian in our national and international relationship, Christian in racial and inter-racial associations.

Finally, we must make the world Christian, and I am full of hope for the life of the world, because I believe in God. This is God's world. A world in which He abides. A world in which He is gaining an increasing control, and instead of fleeing from it, Christians must remain in and help to save it. I am full of hope for the life of the world, because I am a student of history and the lesson of history is the lesson of hope. The world is a better world to live in than it ever was before. Read any history of the nineteenth century and determine whether you would rather live in the England, the France, the Italy, the Spain, the Germany or the America of its first pages or of its last. The great task of the Christian Church is to hold up Jesus Christ.

A German spy had hidden himself in the branches of a tree to watch, to wait, to kill the enemy, as he passed by. Soon there came riding by a Russian Cossack and the spy, from his concealed place in the tree, shot him and killed him. He hastened down from his retreat and ran to the dead Cossack, robbed him of his arms, tore from his silent form his clothes, and as he tore the shirt from his breast, lo, on the breast he saw a crucifix. When he saw the crucifix he stopped, he looked, his hate began to leave him, a new spirit took possession of him. He drew together the shirt and covered up the crucifix. He placed back by the side of the dead soldier his arms and left.

What was it which caused the change? What caused his hate to leave him? It was that cross of Christ, and the cross is still the panacea for all the hate of the world and "I, if I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me."

AFRICAN METHODIST EPISCOPAL ZION CHURCH

Stanley E. Grannum, for the Committee on the Reception of Fraternal Delegates:

There is no one of the distinctively Negro Methodist Churches that is closer to us in spirit and in Church life than the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church. When I go to their Churches I feel at home immediately, for they use our own hymnal, having adopted it as the official hymnal of our Church. I overheard this morning our presiding Bishop say that he numbered among his intimate friends one of the Bishops of that connection recently deceased. Now one of these days in God's own time when God shall have had his way with us and with them, all the elements that now divide us, keeping us apart, are going to be dissolved, and these brothers and all the other branches of the great Methodist family are going to be reunited into the larger brotherhood of the sons of John Wesley by whatever name they may be called. We shall lose our prefixes and our suffixes and be part of the great world-wide Methodist Church. May God hasten the day. And I present now to you as a fraternal delegate of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, Bishop W. J. Walls, of the Eighth Episcopal District.

FRATERNAL ADDRESS OF BISHOP W. J. WALLS

MR. CHAIRMAN, FATHERS, BROTHERS AND SISTERS OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL GENERAL CONFERENCE: I bring you the greetings of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church.

Recently, standing upon snowy crest, delivered from the determined storms and fogs that had forced down to death seven others who had made futile efforts to fly westward across the northern waters, Fitzmaurice significantly said, "By the grace of God the first non-stop flight has been made across the Atlantic." Courage and mechanics had coupled with faith in God and had won. The traits of the Bremen crew are those that have subdued and replenished the world. By the Grace of God, I am able to come to you to-day. If I could shed a silent tear, and breathing the courtesy of a humble guest should my trembling lips be struck to silence while you do me the honor to lend your ears and hearts for a message, though brief, from your sable sister by me, it would be more indicative of the intense emotions that stir my breast than my weak language can begin to show.

Amid renowned churchmen, and Christians who have deeds of daring rectitude to your credit and humble works that heal hearts and lift up the lowly in this growing world to nobleness and life, I am realizing a fond dream. Long since I was a student in the Home Mission School, the Allen Industrial Home at Asheville, N. C., under Miss Alice B. Dole, a fine soul and true missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The ideals that I received there that have guided me ever since in my struggle on the onward way, and the fine and good things your Church has done for my group make my task at this hour most satisfying and pleasant beyond compare.

I speak to you of the gratitude of a race which is sure that the Methodist Episcopal Church is their friend and of all humanity. There are good white people, true and tried in America we know. And if there are, by far the black man believes the largest number of them is in the Methodist Episcopal Church. From the time that John Wesley characterized slavery "the Sum of all Villainies" and Asbury and Coke and McKendree and Freeborn Garrettson set their teeth against permitting slavery to fasten its fangs upon the infant movement, Methodism has faced up always finally right on the open door for the African.

Without the helping hand of Bishop Matthew Simpson and the influence of the Methodist Episcopal pulpit and laity, Abraham Lincoln could never have accomplished his immortal Emancipation of American slaves.

EDUCATIONAL ALTRUISM

You have also to your credit a great altruism in your educational program. There is no colored Church that you have not made contribution to in preparing its leadership through your fine and renowned schools and by glorious men and women who found their way to the help of our race before the smoke of battle was cleared from southern hills and plains. In this adventure stand high in rank the names of John M. Walden, R. S. Rust, D. W. Clark, Gilbert Haven, E. H. Gammon, names made perpetual by labors and benefactions. Hubbard, Mallalieu, Newman, and the Hamiltons too, are famous in this cause.

Bishop J. C. Hartzell, than whom there is no greater Christian Altruist, was the patron and promoter of Tanner, the greatest colored artist, although he was the son of an African Methodist Bishop.

Bishop Wilbur P. Thirkield has the never-dying gratitude of the generation for his work in the freedmen's education at the head of some of the most powerful and useful institutions in the Church and nation and goes out of the harness of service to review his life's work in thousands of useful men and women—from peasants to great leaders, to college presidents, Bishops, physicians and men of wealth—made at the mills of his toils. He has, like Charles Lamb, "done task work and has the rest of the day unto himself, to continue his fearless advocacy of a Christian ideal."

THE NEGRO CHURCH

You will permit me a word for the Negro Church. The A. M. E. Zion Church started out from John Street, the Mother Church of American Methodism, between 1794 and 1796. This was the first venture of the blacks to form their own organization on the hemisphere. Other movements started soon afterwards that have grown to great heights. Be it remembered that the Negro Church is the nest where was hatched his civilization and all forms of his organized progress in the world. Stormy and tedious years have marked this painful progress. We confess to many faults and failures. But as Bishop Haygood said once, "The wonder is that they have not made more failures." The finest building in our race neighborhood, like Solomon's Temple, is the Church. I think we control five millions of the race to some extent in the Christian Church, and own more than a hundred million dollars worth of property. The African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church has a half million communicants. It was born in a carpenter shop, but out from that humble origin it has built nine colleges and schools, the chief of which is Livingstone College, founded by that Golden Mouth Methodist and noble race educator, Joseph C. Price. Its Theological School bears the name of Bishop J. W. Hood, who established more churches than any other man in our history. We have four Conferences in Africa and thirty thousand members. We make no boast in relating to you these few facts of our achievements.

THE NEGRO AND METHODISM

More is true: From the first our group was with Methodist development in this country. We therefore have a heritage that we claim with pardonable pride. Asbury wrote soon after landing in America, "To see the sable countenance of the Negroes so affected in our solemn assemblies and hear them sing with cheerful melody their dear Redeemer's praise, affected me much, and made me ready to say, 'Of a truth God is no respecter of persons.'"

When the contribution was made to Barbara Heck, Philip Embury, and others to build the first Methodist Church in America, two Negro slave girls named Rachel and Margaret gave nine and seven shillings respectively, which was all the money they possessed. Dr. J. E. Wakely in "Lost Chapters of Methodism," says he considers their subscriptions the greatest in the whole catalogue. Black Harry was called by Bishop Asbury the greatest preacher in the world. John Stewart started foreign missions in the Methodist Church on the continent by his heroic mission to the Sandusky Indian settlements in Ohio. Henry Evans founded the Methodist Church at Fayetteville and in North Carolina, and was the most remarkable preacher of the Church in that state while he lived, according to Bishop Capers.

The story goes that Asbury had a convert on a South Carolina plantation named Black Punch. Years afterwards he returned to find that he had made hundreds of converts and built a church among the slaves and won the title of the "Old Bishop." When the failing but faithful black saint saw Asbury he quietly said, "God has sent you to take care of them and I am ready to go." Black Punch is still expecting Asbury to co-operate in the saving of his spiritual children. The call comes to their successors.

ORGANIC UNION

The African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, be it remem-

ered, did not go in strife from the Mother Church. It withdrew peaceably and received membership certificate and came out in good standing, and for some time the Mother Church furnished the pastors for the missions from the white group upon request of the organization. In 1868 you received our first fraternal delegate, Bishop Singleton T. Jones, to your General Conference at Chicago. He presented proposals of Union on equal basis which you now approach. I firmly believe that if this Church in 1796 had permitted preachers to vote and hold office to serve their own group and had communed as you did here on the opening of this General Conference at the same altar simultaneously, there never would have been an African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church. And if now you would carry your movement to promote black leadership and train the race over into a program of reorganizing American Methodism so as to include all in one Church through some safe plan of co-operation and solidarity and treat with the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, as Bishop Jones proposed and as you now are doing with the noble blacks in your communion, the union we devoutly wish would come. The outcast branches of Negro Methodism will return to their American Mother when she becomes willing to give them an undisputed place in the patri-mony.

You have made I. B. Scott, Robert E. Jones and Matthew W. Clair Bishops and won the increased love and respect of blacks everywhere for the Methodist Episcopal Church as a world Church. Bishop Robert E. Jones brought your greetings to our General Conference assembled in St. Louis last week. He was given a demonstration that expressed our honor for you and our appreciation of the message of brotherly love delivered in his inimitable style so simplified, so scholarly and Pauline in thought, and so eloquent in its expression of the spirit of the times, and so bold in its adherence to the principles evolving from Plymouth Rock, and of the fervent personal Christianity that radiates from Aldersgate. You will note our General Conference has voted union with the African Methodist Episcopal Church under the name of "United Methodist Church." Is that big enough for us all?

TEMPERANCE REFORM

The African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church locks hands with you in the fight for temperance and for a nation in truth and reality, as well as legally free of traffic in alcoholic beverages. We know its advantages. Under prohibition has arisen our best prosperity in home building and property acquisition, in education, business, character, and in the civilizing arts. Let the wets bring back the challenge as many times as they will, we will continue to teach our people to vote dry, not as a duty only, but a triumphant privilege.

INTER-RACIAL HARMONIZING

The old method of remaining as far apart and knowing as little about each other as possible, as a solvent of race misunderstanding since the great war, has given way to a more sensible attitude of reasonable proximity and friendly exchange. The inter-racial committees serve to give opportunity for better dealing, with situations that are met by these dissimilar peoples dwelling in the same territory, working out their destiny toward a goal unprecedented before in the world. Since the great war this movement has been forced on to take the place of hostile and destructive movements that threaten to drive the blacks from the fold of Protestantism.

"You cannot chain the eagle,
You dare not harm the dove,
But every gate hate bars to hate
Will open wide to love."

God is looking for people who love, to give his world to govern. Love must not be blamed for lack of faith. When given her chance, love will win out in all situations. This I judge to be the meaning of the inter-racial committees that increasingly are working in this realm.

There are shiftless, illiterate Negroes and there are ignorant and backward whites who are a menace to all safety and good government. The level must be lifted by the right thinking and upstanding people of both races or the lives and well being of any and all of us will be in constant jeopardy. The African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church joins heartily in this movement north and south and has furnished recently Bishop George C. Clement, the first Chairman of such a Commission in the Federal Council of Churches, who has made a contribution to this cause of considerable importance. The whole matter resolves itself to this. The black man is wholly Protestant. Some one has said we are Methodists and Baptists unless somebody has tampered with us. Upon this matter of better understanding depends how well we will be able to save the coming generation of Negro people to Christ and Protestantism. There are great plans being projected by the Catholics to win our youth. But a greater menace is the threat of materialism and atheism growing among us. We can save the black youth, but it can not be done by shutting out from him the hope of equality in citizenship at the ballot box and equal rights in Courts of Justice and before the holy altar. You can help us, but when you come to do so, strike from the category the words inferior and superior races. Let that take care of itself and take God's plan and the plan of thousands of your noble ones who have worked with us and deal with him as human. While you put over the programs of universal peace, and destruction to the drink evil, and justice to labor, give your strong churchly hand to the wider social implications of Christianity and drive the black blot of lynching from this land forever.

As a final word: I believe Methodism will be a potent unit in the triumph of the Universal Church of Jesus. She carries strangely wrapped up in her bosom, the solvent for the ills of all human relations and the spiritual hope of the human heart.

A ship was sinking off a coast near a northern village. The engines had exploded, the life savers were exhausted, when suddenly a man was seen struggling with a floating slab but could not swim. Only one man in all the crowd of spectators could swim. He wants to venture and help the struggling wreck victim, but his mother clings to him in tears and pleading, "Don't go. Your brother was a sailor and must be drowned at sea, for he hasn't been heard from in many years." But "I'll try," was the son's mild decision. Breathlessly they watched him as he pulled himself over the icy waves until he had reached the drowning man and was directing him on the other side of the slab to safety. "Have you got him?" shouted a voice from the shore, and a voice came ringing back over the waves, "Tell mother he is my brother."

In helping our brother in the compact of Christian redemption we save our own.

In races and groups we stand separate but equal, as Henry Grady wrote, and, as J. C. Price wrote, "Race feeling, like the family feeling, is of divine origin." The social idea is regulated by taste, condition, either by racial or family affinities and there it must remain forever. But we in this country, where the bones of our ancestors bleach, and where the hills and villages have been crimsoned by the blood and sanctified by the tears of all races, must never suffer a foreign foe to part us in loyalty nor besmirch our starry banner as long as its principles radiate from the indiscriminating cross of Calvary, for in all these things we be brethren.

The Church will continue its triumphant march until she breaks up all tyrannies, reforms hearts and gives back the music of God to his world in a unified humanity. Then white robed and crowned, she will hear, rolling out from the watch towers of Asia, those ever dear and venerated words, "One Lord," when from the watch towers of Europe shall roll out the words "One faith," and from the watch towers of America with inspiring chorus, "One baptism," when from the watch towers of Africa shall roll out "One God, the Father of us

All!" Then the whole human race shall spring to its feet in the jubilant chorus, "To him who is over all and in you all, to him be the glory, forever and ever."

Tennyson then was no unreasoning optimist when he wrote:

"That good shall fall
At last, far off, at last to all,
And every winter change to spring.
Nothing walks with aimless feet
And not one life shall be destroyed
Or cast as rubbish in the void
When God has made the pile complete."

BISHOP THOMAS BENJAMIN NEELY

READ BY REV. ROBERT C. WELLS

Trained in the Church from his youth up; a Methodist of the fourth generation; a Philadelphian by heritage and birth; a churchman by instinct and tradition; a staunch adherent of the theological formulas of the holy catholic Church; first in place as an interpreter of the canon law of his Church; second to none in laborious industry as a writer on the constitutional history of Methodism; fearless debater in six succeeding General Conferences; a gentleman in appearance, behavior and speech; a Christian in character, spirit and life—no member of the Philadelphia Conference has risen to greater eminence in the Church general than has Thomas Benjamin Neely, and no man has shed greater luster over the Conference which gave him birth and nourished him to greatness than has he.

Born in Philadelphia on June 12, 1841, of Thomas and Frances (Armstrong) Neely, he grew up to manhood in the middle of the last century when many of the worthies who had played an important part in the development of Methodism on this western continent were still lingering on these shores of time. His birth preceded the Mexican War by four years, and he was three years in advance of the great schism which divided the Methodist Church.

He early connected himself with old Salem Church, Philadelphia, and his father being a man of local importance, his home was frequently visited by the leading ecclesiastical lights of the Methodism of that day. He was educated at Williamsport Dickinson Seminary and Dickinson College, receiving an honorary A. M. from the latter institution in 1875.

Entering the Philadelphia Conference in 1865, he served as pastor in the ranks for twenty-four years, with an intermission of four years (1870-1874) as a supernumerary. In 1889 he was appointed "presiding elder" of the South District, serving the Church with ability and distinction. In June, 1900, he was elected secretary of the Sunday School Union and editor of the Sunday school periodicals of the Church. His success in this field was of such an outstanding character that four years later he was advanced to the bishopric and stationed at Buenos Aires, S. A.

He had married in 1882 Elizabeth Cheney Hickman, daughter of a prosperous American doing business in this great South American city, who had been sent to the United States to receive her education. Her father had meanwhile died, and it seemed a very fitting thing that she should begin her life as the wife of an American bishop in the city where so many happy years of her girlhood had been spent.

In 1908 Bishop Neely was transferred to New Orleans, and in February, 1912, near the close of his first quadrennium in this Southern Area, he was robbed by death of the gracious and charming woman, who for thirty years had contributed much toward his success in the various tasks to which the Church had called him. Her presence in the home made it a delightful place, as can be testified by those who have had at any time the honor, as well as the pleasure, of being guests at her fireside.

Her departure occurred at a most critical time in the Bishop's history and deprived him of inward strength and support during the months preceding and during the General Conference of May, 1912, when he was relieved of the burden of episcopal supervision and retired to make his home among the men of his own loved city and Conference.

For six successive General Conferences he represented the Philadelphia Conference in that great law-making body, each time at the head of his delegation, and gave full proof of his argumentative ability in the numerous questions which came up for settlement. His mental attitude was strongly conservative and one of his favorite maxims was, "Radical changes should be approached with great care."

He had a profound belief in the wisdom of the fathers and felt that to radically alter the ecclesiastical abode in which he dwelt would be to invite disaster. He had a sincere reverence for the past, and entertained suggestions of change with the greatest caution. He was proud of his Church, regarding it as the finest ecclesiastical organism in existence, and never felt called upon to apologize for any of the so-called peculiarities of Methodism. To him they were excellencies and not defects.

His tireless industry is seen in the literary output of forty-two years, from 1881 to 1923. In all, twenty different volumes came from his pen; the majority of them works of the first order, showing an extensive and intimate knowledge of the origin, growth and development of the Church. A glance at some of the titles is sufficient to show the texture of his mind: The Evolution of Episcopacy and Organic Methodism (1888);

History of the Origin and Development of the Governing Conference in Methodism (1892); The Bishops and the Supervisional System of the Methodist Episcopal Church (1912); American Methodism, Its Divisions and Unifications (1915); The Doctrinal Standards of Methodism (1918); The Methodist Episcopal Church and Foreign Missions (1923). A course of reading in these volumes is necessary to the man who desires to acquaint himself with the ecclesiastical structure called Methodism.

As an episcopal administrator he was honest, fearless, and just; and in his appointments gave proof of his desire to conserve the interests of the men who made up the ranks of the ministry. He magnified his episcopal prerogatives, and in so doing roused hostility in certain quarters, which eventually compelled his early retirement.

His life since 1912 has been lived mainly in Philadelphia among the scenes of his youth and manhood, and among the people he loved so well. He played a prominent part in civic affairs, and the day after his decease the leading papers of the city made most appreciative comment on his life and activities as an outstanding member of the community. He was a great Philadelphian, a great churchman, and a great Methodist. He was a notable asset to local Methodism and was held in high respect by the leaders of other denominations.

During these years of so-called retirement he was busy with voice and pen in endeavoring to maintain the status quo in matters concerning his own Church and the nation. His attitude on the Centenary, the League of Nations, and the union of the two Methodisms must be interpreted in the light of his constitutional caution when faced by impending changes in the existing order.

It was during these later years that Bishop Neely became best known to the men of the Conference. Always gracious and brotherly, he mingled in a most democratic manner with the preachers at the Monday gatherings and seldom allowed an occasion to go by without expressing his judgment upon the matter under discussion. Conservative in thought and feeling, he stood for the great and noble traditions of the past and fought with tongue and pen against what he considered to be wrong tendencies in modern-day legislation. Dignified in appearance and chaste in mind and spirit, he has left behind him a legacy in life and achievement which shall add to the treasures of Methodism.

The end came after a brief illness on September 4, 1925, at the Methodist Hospital in Philadelphia. A large audience assembled in Covenant Church on Tuesday afternoon, September 8, to do honor to his memory. Bishop Luther B. Wilson, one of his episcopal classmates, delivered the address at the service.

His earthly remains rest beside those of his beloved helpmeet in the beautiful West Laurel Hill Cemetery, while his memory is in the possession of all who admired and appreciated him.

BISHOP WILLIAM ALFRED QUAYLE

READ BY REV. MERTON S. RICE.

I cannot bring myself to write what I shall agree to be titled as a "memoir" of one whom I feel to be so very much alive forevermore as I do in the case of my dear personal friend William Alfred Quayle.

In the Episcopal Address, which was delivered to our General Conference last Wednesday, was written a phrase that rang down into my soul, and will echo on across all the years to me. The brief, but impressively comprehensive sentence in announcement, "Bishop Quayle, apostle of optimism and brotherhood as never before, is in God's Out-of-doors." What chapters of real biography lie wrapped in those few words. His big, bold, hopeful, loving, careering personality stands indexed there, and I shall cherish that summary sentence as long as I live. That is a mortality breaking sentence; a death defying sentence: "As never before, is now in God's glorious Out-of-Doors." There could not be made a more compact sentence biography than that.

In that ever refreshing book of his, The Pastor Preacher, there is a fascinating and forward-reaching claim he expresses in the account of the passing of a friend, which seems so very full of himself, it is like an actual breath in autobiography breathed along the way in affection of another, or rather an evidently induced current biographical, running along in accompanying influence. He wrote, "Some people we cannot spare even to go to heaven. Something is always lacking, when such as he is gone. We go around with a lonesome feeling at the heart. He is gone, gone."

When the roll of our honored Episcopacy was called at the last General Conference, held in the city of Springfield, Massachusetts, the name of William A. Quayle was responded to by letter, and was read to the Conference in a most rarely beautiful disclosure of a heart-set fact of his character which had never before been allowed exposure. In the midst of the letter were these words: "Having been saved by the grace of God, I have been 'allowed of God to be put in trust with the Gospel.' How I have been elated at this high calling. Had I a hundred lives to live, I should desire to spend them all in this sublime service. This gospel is the world's hope and song. It has been a sunny life, radiant as Spring."

Enclosed in that paragraph is the heart-slogan of his life. It is woven into a sentence in so skillful a manner that not even his most intimate friends detected it until death, impatient at a long resisting door, reached for him, and then, in the persistent dominance of a soul that would not be denied even when the always eloquent tongue could no longer frame the sentiment, he refused to surrender; he held his beloved Bible in his lap, and by a continued tracing of the selected words in the verse he so loved, he told those nearest to him the secret of the great phrase, and requested that it be graven on the stone marking the spot of his mortal desertion with the fadeless gleam of his immortal task, "Allowed of God to be put in trust with the Gospel." That was the talisman of his career. It was the secret of his tireless ministry. It was the flaming passion that ever attended his preaching. It was the main-spring of his pastoral activity. He would not fail in his sacred trust.

He was a composite expression of much that has made our Methodist Episcopal Church so Methodistic. He was a Methodist Episcopalian, with the capital letters all assigned to the word Methodist. He brought that fact to a flame as an artist, a poet, a literator, a preacher. The skill of his soul could lightly lift burdens from those who were cast down. The melody of his heart was forever attuned to songs that set tuneful strains amid crowding sorrows. The joy of his day-lighted anticipations was always bringing glad laughter to a real place, even in what has so often been only the darkness of death. Had he been among those downhearted Israelites in Babylon, there would have been at least one harp not to be found hanging on those drooping willows, and I fancy such a song as his had brought down the rest of those harps, and even Babylon had learned that you cannot mute such harps as the one kept attuned by William A. Quayle, by so small a matter as an imprisonment. He was a song-full soul. He knew God in this God-made world, and went about it in the joyful experience of a genuine lover of it all, shouting at its storms, laughing with its books, exulting with its skies, drinking from the brimming chalices of its flowers, singing with its breezes, radiant at its sunrises, and undimmed by its sunsets. He was a song-filled soul.

Those of us who had the joy of knowing him a bit more than some, cannot think of him as dead. He was so very much, and in so amazingly many ways, alive, we know not how to think of him in terms of death. I believe we have all too much allowed that altogether mortal talk to occupy too large a place in our consideration of those who have gone on. What do we mean when we utter the word "dead" with a heavy sound as though it were an eternal period, and put an end to the paragraph of life? We cannot find such a close for the life of this living man. We insist on defining "dead," if you write it in here.

Life was universally good in his all-beholding eyes. He did not insist on selections in days, and seasons, and things in order to discern the hand-clasps of God. He was an expert on divine finger-prints, and found them everywhere and every-when.

I can never allow my mind to go along those strange days of his preparation for mortal departure, and fail to remember his calm confidence. His was not a sudden going. He went about the removal of his temporal tent, for the re-pitching of it on immortal shores, with slow, calm step. He had early caught that fine challenge of the "Poet's Poet," "I would hate that death bandaged my eyes, and forbore." He kept those big blazing eyes open to see all there was to see, till the very last mortal sunset. "Let me taste the whole of it," cried he in his triumphant faith, as he went on unafraid. He had, indeed, so constantly walked in satisfactory companionship with his God, that he had no hesitancy in walking on into the dark. What could the presence of a river mean anyhow, if, as Bishop Cooke has put it, "Our Father owns both banks of it"?

"And so Christian passed over," is the way John Bunyan completed the famous account in crisp phrase of his hero. And so William Alfred Quayle passed over, we echo the triumphant entry again, and transfer his name from the Church Militant to the Church Triumphant.

When we buried his body, we rang triumphantly his beloved bell. The notes rang out in strains of ringing announcement, not in the dragging toll of sorrow's dirge. We marched away from Dream Haven with the sound of the bell in our ears. John Bunyan must have dreamed for his hero just such a funeral as we held for our friend, for he said, "I heard in my dream that all the bells of the city rang again for joy." The sound of the bells of victory in the triumphal march of William Alfred Quayle will ring in all our souls forever.

BISHOP HOMER CLYDE STUNTZ

READ BY BISHOP THOMAS NICHOLSON

Picture to yourself a man above medium height; frame well built; shoulders broad; chest deep; voice clear as a bell and vibrant; a man witty, racy, facile of speech; one who had an amazingly original and comprehensive vocabulary; a jolly, companionable soul; lithe as a boy; having a genius for friendship; a lover of men, without respect to race, color, or lineage; a world-traveler who noted what he saw with fullest penetration; a speaker of rare interest, who on the platform frequently showed great dramatic power and rose to heights of genuine eloquence; a prodigious worker; a practical man, yet with a touch of mysticism; fervidly religious; passionate in his zeal for the coming of Christ's Kingdom; deeply consecrated to God, and single in his purpose to serve Him—such was Homer Clyde Stuntz.

Bishop Homer Stuntz was born at Albion, Erie County, Pennsylvania, January 29, 1858, and died in Omaha, Nebraska, June 3, 1924. After preliminary and normal school work he spent two or three years in the study of law in Iowa. During this period he became active in the Church. He taught a large men's Bible class. It is noteworthy that "Billy" Sunday was a member of this Bible class. Soon, by inward conviction and outward persuasion from the Church, he was pressed into the ministry and united with Upper Iowa Conference in 1884. To that Conference he gave a life-long loyalty. He maintained a genuine affection for that body. In it, at the maturity of his powers, he served two notably successful pastorates—one in the city of Waterloo, and the other at Mount Vernon, the seat of Cornell College. During his pastorate at Mount Vernon the present beautiful church building was erected. For years the great need of such a building was recognized, but the realization was considered beyond the resources of the local community. To this dauntless pastor, filled with the spirit of Paul at Troas, a sense of need was a call to duty and to opportunity. The church building materialized.

In the early eighties this young pastor student, then attending Northwestern University and Garrett Biblical Institute, came under the spell of that great prophet of God, James M. Thoburn. From 1886 to 1895 he was a missionary to India, serving in various capacities, among them as principal of Oak Openings School, and editor of the Indian Witness, and as secretary of the Epworth League. Forced home for health reasons, he became at first a flaming evangelist and then, as has been indicated, a most successful pastor. In 1901 he was appointed superintendent of the Philippine Islands Mission, and served in that capacity until 1907, when serious ill health forced him home. In Manila he made a profound impression. William Howard Taft was Governor-General of the Philippines, and great men like Elijah Halford were in the service of our government. They recognized his worth and gave him their confidence and their friendship in unstinted measure; in fact I have heard President Taft on more than one occasion jokingly boast that though he was not a Methodist he helped to make at least one Methodist Bishop.

From 1908 to 1912 he was one of the Assistant Corresponding Secretaries of the Board of Foreign Missions. Most of us know the eminent service he rendered in that capacity. At the General Conference in Minneapolis in 1912 he was elected a Bishop on the first ballot.

Bishop Stuntz at various times received recognition from the colleges and universities. He had the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Sacred Theology, Doctor of Divinity and Doctor of Laws. The latter degrees were bestowed by more than one institution. He was a favorite with the colleges and with college audiences.

The young people loved him and trusted him. I think he came to his very best as pastor of a great church in a college town. He made Jesus Christ and His program fascinating to vigorous youth. He made service seem a joy. He made the missionary enterprises of the Church look like the greatest adventures of the ages. He set these young men and maidens pacing off empires for the Lord Jesus Christ. When in 1901 he was appointed from that pastorate at Mount Vernon, Iowa, to be superintendent of our newly established Mission in the Philippines half a dozen of the finest students followed in his train. Goodell went to translate the Scriptures and the hymnal; McCarl to establish a printing press; Moe for varied service; McLaughlin to give his life to distributing the Scriptures; in fact for a number of years almost our whole force in the Islands were students from that college or were men who had been touched by his adventurous spirit.

Paul told Timothy that, "A bishop must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behavior, given to hospitality, apt to teach, one that ruleth well his own house." Bishop Stuntz certainly met these requirements. Look at his family. Little Lucy was the apple of his eye, the idol of his heart. She was sweet and beautiful as an angel. They laid her away in the Philippines. The poignant grief over her going left its mark upon the father to the day of his death. Clara became the wife of a useful young Methodist preacher and was proving an ideal pastor's wife in Omaha when God called her home. Bishop and Mrs. Stuntz were in India where he was holding the Conferences in which he spent his missionary apprenticeship. Little did they think when they left America that they should never see Clara again until they saw her in heaven. Clyde followed in his father's footsteps. After thorough college and seminary training he went to India where he has served with great fidelity in many capacities. He comes to this General Conference as a delegate, elected by the Conference to which he belongs in India and in the territory in which his father spent part of his missionary service. Hugh, a graduate of old Wesleyan, of Drew, and of Cornell University, has been and still is the representative of our Sunday School and Religious Education work for South America. That is a quartet worth while. Mrs. Stuntz through all the years has been as devoted as her husband. She now pays loving tribute to his memory by fulfilling his wishes for loyal Christian service of a high order, particularly with the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

Thus Bishop Stuntz served in many capacities—as preacher, pastor, evangelist, editor, teacher, missionary, secretary and bishop. He never fell below a high level of efficiency. Everywhere he was loved because he was so lovable. He left his impress where he served. He was loyalty personified, fidelity incarnate. If I seem to speak with enthusiastic appreciation, it is because I knew him so well and in such intimate personal relations. We were associated in various capacities for nearly a quarter of a century. For four years I was his next-door neighbor. I think the very last letter he ever wrote or dictated was to me. He approved it, I am told, about four o'clock in the afternoon of one day and died about dawn the next morning. It contained his impressions of the General Conference of 1924, gained from reading the General Conference Daily Christian Advocate. It was a remarkable letter; keen in its analysis of men and of measures; witty, hopeful, confident as to the future of the Church; loving in its appreciation of his brethren; breathing devotion to the Church of his choice; jubilant as to its ultimate victory; and withal it breathed from first to last a note of exultation over his personal joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Bishop Homer Stuntz will feel perfectly at home with God.

Servant of God, well done.
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last.

BISHOP GEORGE HARVEY BICKLEY

READ BY REV. GEORGE W. HENSON

The roots of strength manifested in Bishop Bickley had their genesis in the yesterdays of his forebears. From the point of heredity his was a goodly heritage. He came from a line of men who were physically Saul-like in stature. His parental ancestors were tall, virile, capable men. They were noted for business sagacity, soundness of judgment, and religious fervor, matched by unimpeachable rectitude of life. His grandfather, George Bickley I, when sixteen years of age, willingly forfeited a fortune and was disowned because of his affiliation with the Methodists. This George Bickley was the progenitor of eleven men, including himself, who received license from the Methodist Episcopal Church to preach. Two of these were elected bishops.

The boyhood home of Bishop Bickley was characterized by the beauty and glamor of religion. It tingled with intellectual life. His father, George Bickley II, was ever stimulating his children to the quest of knowledge. The writer never visited this home without having some problem propounded which required a quickening of gray matter. Out of such environs and heredity came the clear-headed, stately, strong, religiously inclined George Bickley III—the Bishop.

The family Bible notes that George Harvey Bickley was born in Philadelphia, February 25, 1868, and died in the same city December 24, 1924. This is a limited chronology. By other standards—heaven-approved—his was a long life. If conscientious discharge of duty, concentration on daily tasks, non-attention to clocks, noble feeling and actings, be measured, then only the Book of Remembrance contains the true dates.

The mind culture of our subject was created by the faculties and curricula of the high school of Philadelphia, Drew Theological Seminary and special work at the University of Pennsylvania. Taylor University and Dickinson College honored him with special degrees. His was an absorbing mind. Much true wisdom came to him through observation and reflection.

In his earlier school life he inclined toward the law as a vocation. However, the Holy Spirit, through the influence of his father's hearth, the church, and a wise pastor, led him into the ministry. If men come into Kingdom service by different gates, some through emotion—the south gate; some by meditation—the east gate; some by action—the west gate; some by reason—the north gate, Bishop Bickley came by the north entrance. He surrendered to his Master thoughtfully. His temperament forbade ecstasy. His religious experience, like Wesley's, rang true to the "heart warming." He never doubted the validity of his life investment. Whole-souled he poured his best into Christ's program as interpreted by his Church.

Bishop Bickley was the gift of Philadelphia Conference to the denomination. He was never on the transfer list. To the core he was a Philadelphian. Early in his ministerial career his worth and ability were recognized. He could not be hid. He became an outstanding factor in Conference affairs. His successful pastorate of five years in the cosmopolitan Arch Street Church made him conspicuous. His fine carriage, handsome face, dignity, poise, sanity and, withal, devotion to high ideals marked him for promotion. It may be he acted Lincoln-like: "I will study, prepare, and perhaps my time will come." It came. It is freely acknowledged as a district superintendent, he excelled. It would indeed be difficult to find his peer in this office. He was naturally a leader, with a marked power of initiative; fearless, optimistic, he moved "breast forward"—a dominating personality. He brought to pass that to which he set his heart. There was no turning back. Tomorrow would be better than today.

No church problem, however delicate, exacting or far reaching in its issues, baffled him. He never seemed hurried. He was unruffled. Calmness, steadiness, positiveness, characterized his service. His administrative work stood the test of time.

Bishop Bickley represented his Church in the administration of the noted Philadelphia William Sunday campaign, and won the unstinted praise and admiration of other evangelical leaders in the city. He was easily the outstanding administrator in his Conference. In the law he was versed. His decisions were quick, clear and definite. This capacity for details and sustained labor was witnessed when he acted not only as district superintendent, but also at the same time as area secretary, in the promotional days of the Centenary. His work in amount and results was monumental.

As a worker he was noiseless, tireless, prodigious—altogether free from complaining and fuming. He never asked others to do what he declined. He led the way in self-sacrifice. Rest and vacations were foreign to him. His work was constructive. He lives posthumously. The Bickley Memorial Church, in Philadelphia, is but one of his monuments. The preachers had a love for him born of deference and esteem. Fawning and currying favor were foreign to him. He did not know how to be a sycophant. He attracted friends and bound them to him by his superb worthfulness.

To the timid he was as a rock, as a highway for the weak, and as a covert for clinging spirits. He had "the strength of ten," for his life was pure. Young people in the parsonages and Epworth Institutes rejoiced in his presence. He had a genuine sense of humor, a contagious buoyancy of heart, an unforgettable smile. He held the social life of the Church could be channeled in such wise as to promote Christ's glory.

Bishop Bickley did not carry his soul on the outside. He was not easily read. Like a foreign language, to be appreciated to the full, he must be studied. His heart was translated in service. When known, he did not lack in sympathy. He bore his burdens man-like. If he had wounds, they were secret. If he wore sackcloth, it was invisible. He moved without sound of hammer in our Methodist Israel.

It was his habit never to make promises; hence his reputation did not suffer in his administrative work. The Beaconsfield counsel fitted his course: "Never complain; never explain." We have known him to suffer in silence adverse criticism in making appointments, rather than to cause pain to others by explanation. This forceful personality was never neutral in any assembly. His position was made known, not obtrusively, but unmistakably. His convictions were beaten wheat. He claved to them with full purpose of heart. He could not be stampeded into change. His disinterestedness for personal gain attracted others to his conclusions. He was no radical. He did not fly off at a tangent. In intensest debate he was calm, fair, and polite. Men trusted him. He merited the position of a constructive, ecclesiastical statesman. If Diogenes had lived in our time and cast his lantern on George Bickley, he could have said, "Verily, I have found a man."

As a preacher, Bishop Bickley was instructive, uplifting, heartening. He loved the evangel. His proclamation of it was without mental reservation. He believed, therefore he spoke. The answer to Chalmer's prayer, "Let me not fall from earnestness," was in evidence in all his pulpit ministries. He never indulged in verbal pyrotechnics. He never cheapened religion. The verities of our holy faith he preached as Apelles painted—for eternity. He was a conserver of the faith once delivered to Methodist saints, yet hospitable to progress.

Bishop Bickley's life was enriched by his marriage to Miss Anna Felton, daughter of the late S. K. Felton—one of Philadelphia's elect Methodist laymen. In his wife, his heart safely trusted. She helped to make him known in the Gates, and did him good all the days of his life.

No one could ever question Bishop Bickley's love for the Church. As a member of the Board of Foreign Missions, with widening horizon and deepening concern, his heart beat sympathetically with "the far flung battle line" of Methodist heroes—never dreaming he was to be one of their number. Had he lived, he would have been a mighty exponent and advocate of our missionary program.

Seated next him in the General Conference delegation in Des Moines, we said, "If you are elected, it means a foreign area." He replied, "I will go." From this decision he never wavered. Responding to a toast, at a complimentary dinner, referring to his assignment to Singapore, he replied, "Let no tears be shed or words of commiseration be spoken because we go to this foreign field. It is the call of the Church. Mrs. Bickley and I have thought and prayed it through. We go gladly."

Intimately acquainted with him from boyhood, we never knew him to be ill. What symptoms the physician discovered on examination before sailing, the Bishop did not disclose. Unswerved, though, it may be, warned, he went forth gladly at the behest of the Church to this most trying of our mission posts. The equatorial climate wrought havoc with his vital forces. His friends urged him to seek more healthful atmosphere. He was deaf to their appeals. A quitter he despised. Rather than return to this country, even for recuperative purposes, he would fall at his post. He determined that the Church should have no occasion to question the heroism and sacrifice of her chief pastors through him. He declared, "I am here in the name of the Church; during the quadrennium I shall stay." His work in this area was characterized by vision, devotion and statesmanship. His co-laborers attest its substantial character.

On his return to this country, his friends painfully saw another man. The former agile, stately, forceful preacher was broken. The contrast of the outgoing Bishop with the returning one was pitiful. Because of the longevity of his forebears and his own vitality it was hoped a kindly Providence would spare this useful life to the Church. It was not to be so. The weary weeks and months of suffering and disappointment were borne with a patience and faith worthy of a place in "The Lives of the Martyrs." No complaint escaped his lips. A mellowness and serenity characterized his concluding days. He had no fear of the Silent Opener of the gate of the Beyond. Not as in the case of Arthur's knights was there on his handsome countenance "a momentary likeness to the King," but there appeared to be with him ever "The Light that never was on land or sea." His escutcheon was unsullied. Unashamed he willingly waited to render an account of his bishopric.

On the eve of his Lord's birthday, God's finger touched this follower of the Gleam. He indeed lives as an accumulative and enriching power in the annals of Methodism—

"With God be the rest."

MRS. CHARLOTTE WOODMAN BLAKE

READ BY REV. LEWIS O. HARTMAN

For nearly three-score years the beautiful soul of Charlotte Woodman Blake expressed itself under conditions of space and time, and then, just as the morning light was breaking on March 19, 1925, her spirit again faded from the view of human eyes, and she moved out into the limitless freedom of eternity. And now at last she knows the full meaning of Infinite Love and understands the unfathomable mysteries of Perfect Power and Inscrutable Wisdom.

Mrs. Blake entered this physical world on July 25, 1865, at Westbrook, near Portland, Maine, not far from the place where these lines were written. She was the daughter of Benjamin J. and Charlotte F. Woodman, and was the youngest of a family of six children. In her veins there flowed the blood of the pioneers; for names of her ancestors, some of whom fought in the War of Independence, are listed among the early settlers of New England. Her religious heritage likewise was of the best: her family were all long-time Methodists and deeply devoted to the Church. Mrs. Blake received her educational training at the Westbrook High School and the State Normal School at Gorham, Maine, and after her graduation taught in the public schools of her native town.

On February 4, 1891, she was married to Edgar Blake, who for some years before his entrance into the Christian ministry was engaged in business. During this period they made their home first in Worcester, then in Ware, Massachusetts, and later in Hartford, Connecticut, where the young business man finally reached his decision to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Then came the stage of preparation for the ministry at Boston University School of Theology, and afterward active service in New Hampshire Conference, where Mrs. Blake presided over three parsonages—at Salem, Lebanon, and St. Paul's, Manchester. From 1908 to 1920 her home was in Evanston, Illinois. These were the years of Dr. Blake's connection with the Board of Sunday Schools, first as assistant secretary and then for two quadrenniums as corresponding secretary. After his election to the episcopacy in 1920 Mrs. Blake accompanied him across the sea to far-away Paris, where her home became a center of gracious hospitality for Methodist friends visiting the French capital.

In the fall of 1924, however, after a trip back to America, her health became so precarious that she decided not to return to Europe, but to spend the winter with her son Everett in Wilson, North Carolina. It was in his home that Mrs. Blake passed into the spirit world, leaving besides her husband four of her six children—Mrs. T. C. McConnell (Charlotte Blake), of Evanston, Illinois; Mrs. Gerald Hamilton (Rachael Blake), of Los Angeles, California; Edgar Blake, Jr., in charge of the Methodist boys' school at Charvieu, France, and Everett Blake, a merchant, now of Meriden, Connecticut, and one sister, Mrs. Clara F. Woodman of Evanston, Illinois.

Mrs. Blake was one of God's noblewomen, a typical New Englander, possessed of that fine common sense, courage and love of justice, which characterized the early Puritans. Born in an atmosphere of freedom, she was always a true democrat, and none of the many recognitions that came to her during her life of nearly sixty years succeeded in swerving her from her ideals of human equality and service to others less fortunate than herself. In the home Mrs. Blake was at her best. Her whole career and the dominating purpose of her life were identified with the interests of her husband and her children. She believed in the Kingdom of God and in the Church, which she joined in early childhood, and in the good old-fashioned way relied on Christ as Saviour and Friend. Through her winsome personality this noble woman made a host of friends whom she grappled to her soul "with hoops of steel."

We miss her kindly face, we listen in vain for "a voice that is still," and our hearts go out today in sympathy and affection to our beloved Bishop.

"Here by the windy docks I stand alone,
But yet companioned. There the vessel goes,
And there my friend goes with it; but the wake
That melts and ebbs between that friend and me
Love's earnest is of Life's all purposeful
And all-triumphant sailing, when the ships
Of Wisdom loose their fretful chains and swing Forever from the crumbled wharves of Time."

REVEREND WILLIAM VALENTINE KELLEY

READ BY REV. JOHN W. LANGDALE

William Valentine Kelley, long time pilgrim to the-Infinite, has arrived! A few of those who loved him are gathered here to pay their tribute to his memory. A few, I say, for those who sorrow at his homegoing are scattered throughout the world.

He was born February 13, 1843. A child of a Methodist parsonage, he was educated at Pennington Seminary and was graduated from Wesleyan University in 1865. He began the activities of his busy life as a professor in Pennington and while there had Borden P. Bowne as one of his students. But, obedient to the call of the Master, after two years of educational work, he entered New Jersey Conference, was transferred to the Western New York Conference (now Genesee), then became a member of Newark Conference, afterward of Philadelphia Conference, serving two important pastorates in the city of Philadelphia. It was during his residence in that city that Dr. Kelley was married in 1876 to Mrs. Aliza W. McVeigh. After more than thirty-two years of ideal fellowship, in 1908 the sorrow of the great bereavement fell upon him. In 1881 he came to the fellowship of New York East Conference, in which relation he continued until he left us.

In 1893, when the editorship of the Methodist Review was made vacant by the death of Dr. Mendenhall, he was chosen by the Book Committee for the position and, turning from the duties of the regular pastorate, he gave himself to the editorial task committed to him, contributing his ripening store of knowledge and the impulses of his eager heart to the enrichment of thought and life, not only of those within his own communion, but to appreciative readers widely scattered.

Within the brief time allowed for the services of this somber afternoon no attempt at eulogy would seem appropriate. Indeed, if it were fitting for us to sit in silence and if then we might visualize the composite picture wrought of our recollection and affection, such a gathering together of tender memories would be far more eloquent than the word that any one of us might be able to speak. Following, however, a custom which seems compelling when the great servants of the King are called home, we pause and think together of a life of singular strength and grace.

To those who did not know Dr. Kelley, except as he appeared upon great occasions, the first impression of him would have been that of a rather severe dignity, and the reaction might have been for the moment discouraging of approach. In reality Dr. Kelley was of broadest sympathies and appropriately companionable in almost every setting of association. Like his Master, he had fitting words for the house of sorrow but he was also able to bring his contribution of cheer to the marriage feast. He was at home in the flashing exchange of brilliant conversation or in the companionship of plain folk. He was the genial comrade of those who discussed great themes, but he could be a brother among the young people and a playmate even with the children. Such was the unconstrained range of his comradeship. Charles Dodgson of Oxford University, better known to the most of us as Lewis Carroll, the author, was of those of whom he often spoke and he possessed in some good measure the versatility of that distinguished personality who could be at once the professor of science in a great English university and the author of Alice in Wonderland. If we ask how such breadth of adaptation could be possible, we must remember that from the beginning of his school days until, in age and feebleness, he finished his course, Dr. Kelley gave himself without stint to the furnishing of mind and heart. He took himself seriously, though in the home and out of it he revelled in the beauty of field, or sea, or sky. He looked with the eyes of a poet upon the glories of the sunset and never did any of the well remembered conversationalists have keener zest for the intimacies of the inner circle.

In the world of general literature there were few masters with whom it might not honestly be said he was acquainted. If the content of their thought was really of value, obscurity of style was to him only a challenge. He was not to be turned away from his quest for the treasure because the way of its possession seemed difficult, and with the greatest of the masters he was at home. He walked with them; he sat and dined with them, waiting in their presence until he caught the atmosphere of their dwelling place and really understood them. Those who were privileged to hear him speak or who systematically read what he wrote were led to wonder at the hospitality of his eager mind, though no author, however brilliant his literary gifts, was privileged to sit with him in the chambers of meditation unless he came with garments undefiled.

Probably this day we are thinking of Dr. Kelley chiefly as a lover of men. His taste and furnishing had opened the way for his comradeship with very many who would be recognized as leaders in the world of thought and action. In his own communion he was for many years a member of the Board of Trustees of Drew Theological Seminary and of Wesleyan University. He was a member of the Board of Foreign Missions and, before the work of missions was divided into the two boards, was one of the directors of the work at home and abroad. He was a trustee of the American Bible Society and in each of those groups would have the privilege of unusual association. As a member of Annual Conference there were open to him other relationships, and five times a member of the General Conference, he mingled familiarity with the foremost minds of our own communion. But in all the churches were his friends to be found. Whether of the laity or ministry, of his own or other communions, the friends whom he gained he held as with hooks of steel, for to him friendship was a fine art to be cultivated and mastered, though in his heart touch, let it be said, one did not think of art, but of love. As, from among the writers of the past and present, he chose the best, and out of their writings made selection of the finest, so he seemed to have the patience and instinctive nobleness to deal with his friends. There was a strange subtle wizardry in his friendship, as many of us were made to feel. He seemed often to find in men elements of strength which they would not have thought of themselves as possessing. It may be that what he found was really what he first inspired.

Many of us are chiefly interested in the curious or the commonplace and there are many who seem to major in hectic moods and things abnormal. Probably no one of all those whom we have known more constantly followed the program of St. Paul than did our friend, thinking deliberately and habitually of whatsoever things are pure or lovely or of good report. And if the gardens of fragrance and beauty were not immediately before him, then he looked to discover what there was of virtue and praise, upon which he might think. Friendship to Doctor Kelley was never a cheap or tawdry thing. His very letters told in part the story, recalling what perhaps we had forgotten and entering with delicate thoughtfulness into the things which most concerned us. In these last years the lines of the pen showed the tremulous mark of age, but there was no trembling in the will that ordered the hand to write. Every word revealed the discriminating care of the writer.

He knew that he possessed the things which count, but he knew also that they were those things which must never be roughly handled. He was a nurse when what he had to give needed to be so imparted. He was as one who owns the springs upon the hills. He was unwilling to leave his contribution of their crystal waters to those of valleys to any devious play of the meandering will. He summoned all the engineering skill of which he was capable to conduct the stream direct and full to those who were in need of its refreshing. His impulse to give could not be satisfied unless friendliness really became effective and he loved to deal with those about him in the distinct individuality of their wants.

In his treatment of life, words were never offered as a substitute for bread to hungry men. His substance as well as his avowals were at the command of those whom he sought to serve. Read that brief word in My Gray Gull. He is speaking of one whom he calls "my marvelous soldier girl, Norman Derr," and after he has introduced her to our notice and tells of her departure for her war work in France, he says, "Four years later Le Bon Dieu gave my Norman, broken and ill from scarlet fever and the awful strain of four years of frightful war, into my care for the saving of life and reason: no more sacred privilege in all my eighty years." That was Doctor Kelley's way. To him the tests of friendship, as we commonly think of them, were really its great rewards.

Ascending the hills of sacrifice the most of us would be thinking upon the difficulty of the upward climb; he thought of the sunshine on the summit. In his writing, his preaching, his living, he never chose the easy, but always the worthy. He gained the best that he might give the best. He set himself deliberately to master the intricacy of high thinking not only that he might pay to great thinkers the compliment of his intelligent appreciation, but he wanted to possess in order that he might become, and to become in order that he might impart.

Less than a month ago it was my high privilege to sit with him for an hour. I wondered as I listened to his speech. Even I could recognize something of his method of selection and classification. He dealt with his memories of men as a lover of pearls deals with his precious gems, as a great musician might handle his violin fashioned by one of the masters of old Cremona. It was impossible not to note how, in talking, his well-trained mind seemed to choose name or noun instead of pronoun where his loves were concerned, and he was speaking only of his loves that day. It is fair to say that his preferred method of comment and criticism was always that of winning men from the thrall of the forbidden, not so much by condemnation of unloveliness as by alluring them to love intensely the beautiful and true. It was easy also in the twilight of that afternoon to see that the finely appropriate words he used did not just happen to fall from his lips that day. In the mental processes of the years he had sifted the faultless from the faulty and also this was clear when mind and heart disclosed their secrets: the best he had was given unto God. He spoke of texts evidently not because their analysis would afford opportunity for exercise, much less display, of the preacher's skill, but because their content would make for the hearer's good and for the Master's praise. He came to the climax when he said, "If I had the opportunity to preach just once more, this would be my text, 'The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.'"

After all, to this lover of high thinking and great thinkers, there was one name incomparably above every other name. Men might be true—Christ was the Truth; men might point the way—Christ was the Way; men might show themselves alive, but Christ was and is and forevermore shall be the Life. The impression of that afternoon is borne out by the record of his pastorates. He sought men out with a zeal which did not flag, an ingenuity of approach which defeated indifference and added to the Church many who were saved.

In the tribute which, in the Methodist Review of May and June, 1920, Doctor Kelley paid to his devoted friend, James M. Buckley, he paints the picture of that personality who seemed so long to occupy in so many ways the center of our denominational stage—humanly speaking. He tells of how, at the close of a Conference Sunday in 1920, they two had their last goodnight together and of the prayer he offered, kneeling beside Doctor Buckley's bed. That great expounder of our law, that great defender of our policies, was no longer able to command his speech, and so Doctor Kelley prayed. "Master, look mercifully upon thy servants here. For us it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. O Master, abide with us." When the two old friends, one seventy-six, the other eighty-two, as unwavering as they were undemonstrative for over threescore years, rose from their knees and stood a moment looking into each other's eyes, they clasped hands and gave each other "the ultimate and supreme manly token of mutual respect and affection." So wrote Doctor Kelley, about to surrender his editorial commission.

Back of his patience as a student, dominating and inspiring his devotions; or as a friend faring forth with radiant face and reaching out hands ready and strong for every task of lifting them, there was the child-like attitude of heart toward the great Father, God, the unhesitating devotion to Christ as in all things having the pre-eminence.

If we to-day ask where he is, no one of us would hesitate to answer. He is at home in the house made ready for him by the great older Brother-Master-Saviour, who told us a long time ago that He was going to prepare a place for us. As David Livingstone declared, so Doctor Kelley believed, so also are we persuaded, the Lord Christ always keeps his word.

As we stand with this life—strong, symmetrical, vibrant, fruitful—before us, we remember the more than fourscore years ended, but we remember also the composure of his mind, the confidence of his faith. He sang, "This earth is but men's cradle." "What man gets on the earth is just a start in life." As God shall help us, let us go out into the ways and life as better friends of man than we have ever been and readier to validate our words by our deeds. Let us go out highly resolved to keep ourselves as he kept himself—unspotted from the world. Let us go out to show our loyalty to the Christ beyond that which the best years have ever written of us, more confident as to the foundation of our faith, more joyfully certain as to its finishing.

In one of the rest hours of the last autumn this servant of God, our friend, wrote his Cape Farewell. Let us read it:

"The map of the world shows two Cape Farewells. The one of the southernmost cape point of Greenland, the other on the coast of New Zealand, but Cape Farewell is on my coast also. Most of my friends have passed or are passing out of sight beyond it.

"My last sight of the face of that great lover of God and men, William A. Quayle, he was throwing kisses to me as he rounded Cape Farewell.

"In Greenwood lie the ashes of that fine minister, Albert J. Lyman, forty years pastor of the South Congregational Church. No finer man ever in any Brooklyn pulpit. Walking down Flatbush Avenue and Fulton Street, from the Brooklyn Clerical Union, one Saturday night with him, at the point of parting I took his hand and, looking up into the sky, said, 'Dr. Lyman, I hope to find you up yonder some day.' That was our last parting. He went to his home and was seized that night with his final illness. In his last letter he wrote, 'You will see the flag of the Mediatorial flying over my grave.' During the years of his spiritual ministry his thinking about Christ came to lay its emphasis on his mediatorship between man and God, and ever since I have seen the flag of the Mediator flying over his grave.

"That born gentleman, George Slocum Bennett of Wilkes-Barre, passed out of sight beyond Cape Farewell, sending to me his parting message, 'Give him my love. Tell him I'll meet him on the Other Side.' He never broke his word, 'He'll keep his tryst wi' me, at what 'oor I dinna ken.'

"My little craft still lies in the harbor, flying at its peak the Blue Peter, meaning 'About to sail,' waiting only for the signal to hoist anchor and away!"

The signal has been given, the anchor has been hoisted, the little craft and its sailor are away. Let us, by God's help, follow him.

I think that today Dr. Kelley would choose that this brief and inadequate word should close not in tribute to him, but in praise of the Christ who loved him and gave himself for him; who guided him through all the days and who, at life's sunset hour, put beneath him the everlasting arms and held him until, to those who watched beside him, like the weary pilgrim that he was, he fell asleep.

REVEREND DAVID DRYDEN FORSYTH

READ BY REV. ORIEN W. FIFER

David Dryden Forsyth and I were young men together, attending the same university, standing side by side on graduation day; later rooming together when we attended Garrett Biblical Institute and entering the ministry in the same state. Later on, in the city of Denver, he was my district superintendent. During the years from youth up, I had opportunities to know intimately and to value greatly this gifted and untiring servant of the church.

In all that length of time and in all those varied associations, even in those less serious and more frolicsome days of campus life before life's problems and burdens became heavy, I never heard one sentence or one word from his lips that could not have been spoken in the presence of any child or woman. In the words of his mouth and in the meditations of his heart David D. Forsyth was clean and wholesome. His rugged frame was the habitation of a white soul.

He was born March 31, 1864, in Dane County, Wisconsin. When he was six years of age the family moved to Webster County, Iowa. In 1874 they became residents of Nebraska, establishing a ranch in the northern part of Custer County, then a cattle country. They built a loghouse, taking up both a tree claim and homestead. Those were pioneer days of many hardships and privations of much exposure and toil. A new country always seems to fight viciously against its transformation into Christian and civilized conditions. Blizzard, drought, panic and perils from savages and lawless folks were not unknown and only heroic men and women overcame them. Those early experiences did much to make David Forsyth the home missionary secretary of such unequalled skill, vision and understanding. He had been reared in an adventurous and heroic era and environment. His ancestry was a rare combination of religion and refinement.

The Scotch-Irish and English qualities in his parental and maternal sources produced in him an inner reverence for holy things and an outward humor for daily experiences. Frontier life made anything superficial impossible. The natures of the aristocrat and the democrat mingled harmoniously and attractively in his soul. The family bonds were unusually strong and earnest. The mother especially gave to him and to his brothers and sisters a resistless impulse towards education. That western home had a religious basis and formed a secure foundation for the sturdy, enduring practical Christian character and service which made him the trusted and honored leader in our church. It is interesting to record that the Presbyterian and the Episcopal inheritances from his parents made Dr. Forsyth all the greater and broader Methodist. They were tolerant and liberal enough in pioneer days to join with the Methodists in community religious service. Their son grew up to be catholic and tolerant in all his denominational and interdenominational duties.

Few persons know the significant factors and features in his spiritual growth and power. Based upon example and precept in his pioneer home it was but inevitable that early in life he made his acceptance of Christ. If it was not the time of his actual conversion at least a very definite Christian stand was taken during the pastorate of Robert Newton McKaig at St. Paul Church, Lincoln, Nebr. This was in the early 80's when young Forsyth was a student in the preparatory department of the State University. In his junior year in the university he went down to the doors of death through an illness sudden and apparently resistless. It was on the very threshold of death that the pneumonia stayed its progress and David Forsyth came back with a grip on God and a vision of consecration which changed the direction of his life. Like others of us he had planned to enter the profession of law and the area of political activity; but in those hours of illness and later convalescence he saw the heavenly vision and was never disobedient to it. That there had been inner promptings by the Spirit thitherto I have no doubt, but it was a surprise and challenge to his friends when he quietly turned aside after completing his university course and joined what was then the West Nebraska Conference in September, 1889. He was licensed to preach and recommended for admission on trial by the quarterly conference of First Church, Kearney. It was characteristic of his reticence and modesty about inner religious things and of his independence of thought and action that not many and possibly not one of his relatives knew of his decision until the quarterly conference action was about to be taken. It was not without significance that thirty-seven years afterward, when he knew he must go to his eternal home, Dr. Forsyth requested that his body might be buried in Kearney not far from his boyhood home, in the community of his first official sanction by the church for his ministry and where he had been a pastor in later years and almost exactly midway between the ocean borders of the land to which he gave the last full measure of devotion in industry and faith.

For twenty-six years he served in the West as pastor at Callaway, Kearney. Gothenburg and Cozad, Nebr.; Cheyenne, Wyo.; Delta and Grand Junction, Colo. Then he came to the Denver district where he made such conspicuous record that it was logical for the General Conference of 1916 to turn to him for leadership when the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension Society was reorganized. The breath of the prairie and the strength of the mountain blended in him to achieve such successes as a secretarial leader that all the church wondered and rejoiced.

He seemed never to rest. Vacations were almost strangers to him. At least they were not welcome at his office door. Yet work to him was not endured bondage but rather acceptable, even a beloved duty. He could toil tremendously. More pioneer sons who had their first education in the school of work—constant work—hard work, stayed in those courses of study all their lives. They died on the field of toil. If we grieve over the thought that he died prematurely, perhaps overworked, let us remember that he died in the habit and joy of his life.

His worth and service as secretary of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension have been made known by official persons and organizations in terms of highest and deserved eulogy. In those intense eleven years he met and accepted and mastered new and mighty tasks. He led his organization safely through the tumultuous conditions of the World War, through those high pressure and super-charged atmospheres of the Centenary and during those crumbling, heart breaking days of reconstruction which followed the Centenary and ushered in World Service. The church discovered him then as one of its greatest builders and safest leaders and counsellors.

He was rightfully ambitious to stand and to serve where usefulness could be increased; but obligation was master over any ambition for place. I remember well one night as we talked together, waiting for a train which should bear him away, how so earnestly he declared concerning any future honor the church might bestow upon him that he held his position as a sacred trust and would consider himself recreant to every sense of duty and honor if he consented for one position to be used solely to climb to another. Some here will remember how well he kept that faith. The mountain stars that night were not whiter than his soul.

He did not readily or willingly disclose the inner qualities of his heart. He had the pioneer habit of apparent diffidence and restraint about emotions, religious and affectionate. More than once in days when we were nearer in location of work than later, I heard him exclaim "We do not pray enough." He had a spiritual experience "too full for sound or foam." He had a very rare gift of humor and playful exaggeration in conversation which made him a delightful companion. He had more, an unswerving enthusiasm for the truth, for the beauty and power of a fact, when the occasion demanded information and guidance.

The romance of his life had its best expression, not in the pioneer experiences, not in the almost phenomenal rise in the confidence of the church, but in the beautiful fact that one June day in 1892 he and his classmate, Myra E. Clark, with whom he had gone to school through university days, joined hands and hearts in a deathless covenant to be true and loving to one another, to their Church and to their Christ. That home became one of the secret places of the Most High. A son and daughter added to its joy. Outwardly Dr. Forsyth may have seemed to restrain the evidences of his measureless love for his family. Within its company in the house he was one of the tenderest of men. It was touching to see him at play with his boy or girl. The widow and children know that those early vows and visions remained unbroken and undimmed and so remain today, affording hope and assurance of life and fellowship "where partings are no more."

On November 8, 1926, Dr. Forsyth ceased from his earthly travels and labors and entered into service anew with his Master and Lord in "the house not made with hands eternal in the heavens."

Funeral services conducted by Bishop McConnell were held in Chicago and Kearney.

Once in summer time years ago, far up in the foothills, I saw Long's Peak near at hand rising majestically above canyon and forest towards the heavens in the golden sunshine of an unclouded day. As I recall that striking scene I note the parallel between it and David Dryden Forsyth who

"As some tall cliff lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale and midway leaves the storm,
Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread.
Eternal sunshine settles on its head."

REVEREND HENRY • CLAY JENNINGS

READ BY REV. JOHN H. RACE

Henry C. Jennings was a son of the parsonage. He was born in Fremont, Illinois, December 21, 1850. His father was the Rev. George R. Jennings, a minister of our Church, who died when Henry was five years of age. His mother, Clementine S. (Trumbull) was the daughter of a Methodist minister. As a widow she was left to struggle for her three little boys.

At the age of eleven Henry went from Illinois to Minnesota to work on a farm. At sixteen, while attending the Pleasant Grove camp meeting, he was converted and at that early period attended a Methodist class meeting held in a log school house. Encouraged by his pastors, he attended school and even had a short taste of college. But under the stress and strain his health broke.

He passed through the stages of local preacher, class leader and of the traveling minister, being received on trial in Minnesota Conference in 1871 under the presidency of Bishop Simpson.

Henry C. Jennings was a pioneer. He loved adventure. What he has written concerning another may very fittingly be said of him: "From the days of his youth his life was spent in the open. Both his nature and his opportunities brought him into publicity. He was always a partisan. He did his own thinking and reached his own conclusions independently. He had a reason for his beliefs, and he held tenaciously to his opinions. He possessed an enormous fund of knowledge concerning the life of the Church and the details of the work in his hands and of the collateral issues related thereto."

One of the stirring novels of the past year is entitled "Giants in the Earth." It is an epic story of the endurance and achievements of the hardy race who faced the frontier conditions in Minnesota and subdued the wilderness. Dr. Jennings belonged to the race of giants in that same Minnesota country. He was a giant in frame, in spirit and achievement.

In his early years in Minnesota the Chautauqua sun was just appearing above the horizon, and this virile young preacher was one of the earliest in that great northwest to appreciate its life and warmth. He started one of the first assemblies in the state of his adoption, and was among the other pioneers of that inspiring group of whom John H. Vincent was the leader.

Later he appreciated the opportunities afforded by organizing for greater Christian service the youth of the Church. He became, therefore, one of the early and enthusiastic friends of the Epworth League and for seven years was one of the members of its Board of Control.

Dr. Jennings served acceptably nine charges within the bounds of Minnesota Conference and also as presiding elder of the Marshall District. In 1896 he was elected publishing agent of the Western Methodist Book Concern with residence at Chicago. From 1900 to 1916 his residence was Cincinnati. From 1916 to 1920 his residence was again in Chicago. During the twenty-four years of his active relationship as one of the publishing agents, during seven years of which period he was the General Agent, the service he rendered was of real significance and highest value, not only to the Book Concern, but to Methodism as a whole. Indeed, this period through which Dr. Jennings served in this office was a period that stands out as epochal in the history of our publishing interests. With rare ability he possessed the power of anticipating the religious and intellectual needs of preachers and people. Traveling extensively throughout the Connection he stimulated the sale of our books and periodicals everywhere. He was always a strong defender and a faithful and efficient promoter of the product of the presses of the unique institution he served. The business thrived under his leadership.

In 1913, by vote of the Book Committee, he was elected General Publishing Agent, filling the post then vacant by the death of Dr. Homer Eaton. From that date, those of us who were intimately associated with him called him "General." This was an affectionate term, symbolical of his leadership, his skill in strategy and his sagacity. So through all the years from then till the time of his translation he was known to us in all our publication interests as "The General." It was during this period he wrote the historical volume, "The Methodist Book Concern," which he fittingly characterized as "A Romance of History."

He was seven times a member of the General Conference. Of rugged form and large physical proportions, he was capable of an enormous amount of hard work. Serving conspicuously as one of the publishing agents of our Church from 1896 to 1920, he was at that time elected Publishing Agent Emeritus, with residence at Portland, Oregon.

During his retired relationship he sought to render such service as his strength would permit. This last fall he was eager to visit some of the Annual Conferences. The publishing agents gave him such assignments as he thought he could carry. It was my privilege to greet him at Northern Minnesota Conference held at Duluth. What joy that meeting gave to the old friends of the years! In the several Conferences that he visited he showed a lively interest in current events, an up-to-date knowledge in what was going on, and more than ever his old time devotion to the Book Concern and the Church.

Dr. Jennings rendered unusually significant service to the Church. Firm in his convictions, loyal in his devotion to his friends and the interests committed to his care, indefatigable and tireless in his labors, he served the Church to the utmost of his ability and strength. In his going Methodism has lost an ardent lover, a staunch defender of her doctrines and policy, and a man whose whole-hearted devotion to whatever he undertook will be an inspiration to all who were permitted to enjoy his friendship, and to fellowship with him in service. To his family and friends he leaves that best of all legacies, a sterling Christian character and the record of a full-orbed life.

The Publishing Agents, in their report to this General Conference, reverently call attention to the final sentence of his semi-centennial sermon delivered at the session of Minnesota Conference in 1921, which epitomized his active career and his conviction as to the future:

"If they shall give me, by and by, a modest headstone, I shall be well satisfied if, below my name, they engrave upon it: 'He is gone to larger service.'"

MR. FRANK ASBURY ARTER

READ BY REV. ALBERT E. PIPER

His parents named him Francis Asbury Arter. The public knew him as Frank A. Arter. His dear friends called him Frank Arter.

From the farm in Hanover, Columbiana County, Ohio, where he was born March 8, 1841, to St. Luke's Hospital, Cleveland, Ohio, from whence he went to his coronation March 7, 1928, was a span of eighty-seven years. And what a span of years it was! In science, in industry, in religion, in nation building, in growing world consciousness, in widening horizons for the Christian Church, what stupendous changes marched across those eighty-seven years. Frank Arter was not a passive creature of his times, but as citizen, business man, churchman, Christian gentleman in his own circles made his contribution to the dreams and deeds, the adventures and achievements of those wonderfully potential and prolific years.

From the public schools in his home village he entered Allegheny College, from which he was graduated in 1864. After his graduation he went to Cleveland, which had been incorporated as a City just five years before his birth, and here for sixty-two years he lived as one of the outstanding Christian business men, noting with pride the growth of his city from a few thousand in 1866 to a city of nearly a million when he exchanged it for the "city that lieth foursquare."

Two years after going to Cleveland he was united in marriage to Eliza, daughter of Bishop Calvin Kingsley, whom he had met in college days at Allegheny. Thus began the home life of one of the most beautiful domestic shrines in our Methodism. Three children, Mrs. Mary A. Taft, Mrs. Louis E. Myers, and Mr. Charles K. Arter, together with eight grandchildren, bear grateful tribute to the memory of this ideal Methodist home.

In addition to his powerful physique he possessed tremendous mental power and keen business sagacity which enabled him to build up a fortune that made him one of the princely business men of his city. He was not, however, simply a builder of fortunes and a captain of industry but was even more a distributor of bounties and captain of philanthropy. A Cleveland daily, the day following his death, commenting on his passing, said: "One who makes a business of business until he acquires a competence or more and then makes a business of philanthropy merits the thanks of his generation. Frank A. Arter spent more years disposing of his wealth than he spent accumulating it. He made philanthropy a hobby and organized it as another organizes an industry or a commercial pursuit. A pioneer oil man and contemporary of the elder Rockefeller he made a great fortune when still comparatively young. He belonged with the pioneers but his spirit never lost step with the new century."

Another daily of the same city headed an editorial with "He Loved His Fellowmen" and then went on to say: "Having acquired wealth through enterprise in the early days in the petroleum industry he found it agreeable to devote his time and money to human kindness rather than profitable business.

Naturally his friends were countless and enthusiastic. Cleveland has occasion from time to time to regret the passing of old residents, prominent citizens, known for their eminence in various kinds of activity. But if public sorrow is particularly sincere in the case of Mr. Arter's passing that is the logical result of his long and generous devotion to education, religion, charity and all manner of good works."

Intelligently and loyally patriotic as a citizen; keen, far-seeing and successful as a financier; he was pre-eminently a Churchman. For nearly two generations he was the best known Methodist layman of his city and was widely known and esteemed throughout the State. He was greatly interested in the work of the Church both in our home and foreign fields. Accompanied by Mrs. Arter he visited the church fields on the other side of the world, where his name is known and revered for his warm sympathy and liberal contributions to the work of the Kingdom.

As a generous benefactor to the various institutions of the Church his interest never waned. He gave largely to Baldwin-Wallace College at Berea, Ohio, and to his alma mater, Allegheny, at Meadville, Pa., where he built a fraternity house for his brothers of Phi Kappa Psi, while his latest contribution provided for a splendid new recitation building to be known as Arter Hall.

He was first, last and always a friend of the Methodist preacher. As the founder of the Superannuates' Fund Association of the North-East Ohio Conference and its treasurer from its inception to his death, he had built up a fund of $600,000, one-fifth of which was his own personal contribution. Among preachers of North-East Ohio Conference no figure was more familiar or more welcome in the sessions of the Annual Conference for the past generation than that of Frank Arter. Indeed he had been coming to the Conference so long that few of the members can remember the time when Brother Arter was not present. Cleveland Methodism never had a truer leader, a wiser counselor, a more princely giver than this noble son of the Church. Practically every Church and Methodist institution of the city has felt the warmth of his heart and the liberality of his hand. Those who knew him best could well say:

"The elements
So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, 'This was a man!'"

As Sunday School superintendent, steward and trustee he wielded great influence and won the esteem and affection of his local Church for nearly two generations. He was an intelligent, devout and regular worshipper in the Church of his choice. Frequently his eyes filled with tears as with great modesty and humility he spoke in testimony meeting of the great goodness of God and his own unworthiness. Once after his return from a sea voyage he spoke with thrilling testimony in the prayer meeting, of a night at sea when for hours he sat on the deck and communed with the vast abyss of sea and sky, calling to mind Faber's great hymn—"There's a wideness in God's mercy like the wideness of the sea;" and then added, "If it were not so I should not be here tonight." Just a year before his own translation the companion of nearly sixty years of wedded life went away to the Beautiful City on the other side. A short time before her going she attended her last city missionary meeting in Cleveland and delivered an address. A friend writing about that meeting, writes thus about the Arters: "Mrs. Arter and Mrs. Taft, her daughter, were there. Mrs. Arter said, 'My daughter is here. She must be patient if I indulge in reminiscences. I have often had to be patient with her. Sometimes my daughters have said, "But, mother, why do you give so much time to the Church? Why don't you go into society more?" And I have just straightened up and said, "Daughters, I have always moved in the best society, the society of Christian people." I only wish I could have given more time, could have done more for my Saviour.' " That was a characteristic statement of the place of the Church of God in the lives of these two royal souls.

Forty years ago he came for the first time into the General Conference of his Church. Eight times was he elected to membership in this body, where his striking personality, his commanding voice, his intelligent and loyal devotion to his Church, his knowledge and grasp of men and measures made him a conspicuous and influential member. A man of ardent convictions, he was equally a man of dauntless courage. As a champion he was much to be desired, as an antagonist not lightly to be reckoned with. Last September his brethren again elected him as a delegate to sit in this General Conference. Alas he was to be transferred in the meantime to the General Assembly and Church of the first-born in heaven.

Just but generous, dignified yet democratic, firm yet friendly, courageous yet courteous, ever a soldier yet ever a good scout, baffled at times but "baffled to fight better"—that was Frank Arter. As business man he breathed the spirit of probity, integrity, honor and success. As philanthropist with genuine love for his fellow men he liberally ministered with open hand. As pre-eminent Churchman, with concern and consecration he served the Church of the living God as a radiant and conquering servant of the long, long years. One day Tennyson was walking in his garden with a friend when the conversation turned upon religion. During the conversation the friend said to Tennyson, "What does Jesus Christ mean to you?" and the poet stooped and
